"Mrs. Stafford," he said slowly after a moment's silence, "the last time Elinor lent you money—which you have not returned to her—I told her I did not like it. She promised me she would not do it again. You see, therefore, that, while I am sorry to refuse you, I cannot help you out—"

Lida grew white, her eyes hard. She laughed harshly.

Without heeding the interruption, Barrett went on. "Elinor settled on you and your husband a large fortune, more than I wanted her to settle upon you—"

"I quit believing that!" Lida broke in scathingly.

"If you can't manage on that you couldn't manage on any amount," Barrett said still coolly.

"What a delightful lecturer!"

"You'll have to put up or be very miserable," he stated. "Any spending is a habit, you know—"

She rose, with a slow, almost insolent gesture she pulled her fur close around her soft, white throat.

"I shall not forget," she said, "that I came to you for help and that you refused me!"

"I'm sorry you feel as you do, Mrs. Stafford. That's true as that when I asked Elinor to refuse you all I pledged myself to do the same thing!"

"Elinor would not have to know," "I do not lie, Mrs. Stafford—" Her face hardened. She caught the implication he had not meant to make with his statement.

She left the house shaking with rage. There was Miss Ella Sexton's house across the street. Miss Ella had been influenced by Barrett's scheming and persuaded not to leave her money as it should have gone. If the money had been left as it should have been there would be no need of approaching Elinor or her husband for loans. The shoe would be on the other foot!

Lida was furious. Her things were there were few chances to even up with Barrett Colvin. Unless he had cut his throat over that affair! Lida could hurt him that way, surely, if she set her mind to wished with the pledge of silence. Who was it now to whom Barrett was always running up to Connecticut? Why did he go there? Had she hit upon it—the fact that would level his pride and open his purse?

It cost a great deal, Lida knew, to have detectives investigate but the original cost might prove to be one of the best investments.

She moistened her tinted lips. If she could find her proud and lofty son-in-law in the embarrassing situation how she would put on the screws! Confidences would then be drove to Connecticut often.

Mandey found Lida sitting and early. She usually woke about 10 o'clock for breakfast and return to bed for her breakfast tray. Then she would dawdle over letters, the newspapers or perhaps a romantic novel. Then came the fine art of dressing which always took time and more often more. As the clock struck one she usually sauntered forth to meet some friend for luncheon or to hunt up diversion for the day.

This Sunday Mandey found her up at eight and dressed by nine. In her eye was a light that she ordered Crier to an address on a side street.

The chauffeur, waiting before this address, smile the cynical smile his calm class reserves for certain liaisons. His eyes were on the gilt lettering that appeared on a plate glass window. Women like Lida Stafford turned to detective agencies for just one reason—to ferret out secrets, to us for blackmail or a divorce.

Grier wondered about Mrs. Stafford's motives as he waited in the new car she had bought the day after her son-in-law's marriage. "She can't be havin' that husband of hers shadowed," he mused. "He ain't my guy, but this he is to his bed and a wheel chair!" Grier gave up his riddle.

Meanwhile inside Lida had crystalized her scheme. The desk was divided who sat back of the desk had information to sell and which Ten Barrett Colvin's name and Nes

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

Burroughs, Inc. All rights reserved.
Tarzan now turned toward the Sheik. "You are not here to trade, but to find and sack a city—to take its women and steal its wealth. Whose slaves are we, then?" shouted the Sheik. "His name is Zeyd," replied Tarzan. Akeja's heart leapt joyously. "All this he said, and more," continued the ape-man, "for he told how one of your men sought to slay thee and then put the blame upon him."
Jhn Jad's bow contracted in a dark scowl as he heard this and Paid could scarcely hide his dismay. "I have come again," said Tarzan, "though I know you told to kill me before. This time my Waziri are content to be, and we shall see that you return to your desert." Jhn Jad pretended anew that he was lost and would welcome this escape, but all the time his crafty brain was busy with a scheme to fool the ape-man.
"We are beset all around by Galla warriors," whispered the Sheik in a moment we fear their attack." "Tomorrow you will start homeward," said Tarzan grimly, ignoring the Sheik's excuse. "Meanwhile, set aside a beyt for me—and let there be no more treachery." "You needst fear nothing," the Sheik assured him as he turned toward the women's quarters, crying, "Hiria! Akeja! Make ready the beyt of Zeyd for the Sheykh of the Jungle."
Near the Jad's own beyt the two women raised the black tent for Tarzan. Hiria returned to her housework and Akeja sat down to watch the door. She could hold duties leaving her daughter stretch the waist curtain. Akeja ran to Tarzan imploring him for news of Zeyd. The ape-man told the girl that her lover was safe, promising she would see him soon. Akeja seized the ape-man's hand and kissed it.

MISS BEDFORD RECEIVES R. J. COOKE AWARD

Stirling Council Has An Interesting Session

Stirling—Official announcement has been received from the Department of Education that Miss Marion Bedford has been awarded the R. J. Cooke Scholarship of $50 for Stirling High School. The scholarship goes to the student obtaining the highest aggregate on the best eight Upper School papers and Miss Bedford has succeeded in winning the award for the year.

Attendance at the High School on Tuesday showed a marked increase over the first day's attendance last year. At the Public School some 143 pupils were present, 5 being reported at the high School.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Trenholm has leased the property of Burkett's as machine and its service station and cafe, and Mr. Trenholm will assume his new duties. Mr. Jandrews and his wife and family will take up residence in Mr. Burkett's house.

Council Meets

The regular monthly meeting of the Village Council was held on Wednesday evening with all the members present.

The first item of business was the correction of Mr. Whaley's assessment roll, the overcharge amounting to $500. The Court of Revision ratified the action and submitted to the Council for inspection.

Chairman of the Street Committee Cranston reported that inspection of the sidewalks had been made by representatives of the Hamlin Construction Company, and reported all necessary repairs.

The fire department in a letter to the Council, stated that a hydrant 6 feet of extension was necessary as the same amount of the old hydrant was lost, and that with the full force of the water might burst it during a fire. Mr. Whaley will get rubber companies and obtain quotations on the cost. The quotations will be received on local supplies for the Community Hall.

Messrs. Robert Chambers and William Johnston complained of their taxes, the former in regard to interest on tax arrears and Parliament Buildings and the latter, that as the pond had covered a section of his property for some time, he felt that he should receive a rebate on the taxes. The action was taken.

Councillor Cranston reported the sewer on the water tank at the west side of his apartment building, which was formerly used for fire protection, was broken and dangerous to the children of the village who might be playing about it. The necessary repairs will be ordered and the specific cases, such as repairing sidewalks, trimming trees and the work on Front Street and Property Committees empowered to act in each case.

Permission was granted to Reeve Wm. C. West to fence off a strip of land in front of the creamery during erection of the new creamery. After the by-law had been ordered paid, the meeting adjourned.

Band Concert

An open air band concert was given by the Frankford Scout Band on Thursday evening in front of the Stirling Community Hall. The streets were well-lined with cars while the sidewalks were also crowded with an appreciative audience. The musical work was well received and it is to be hoped that their enthusiastic reception will entice them to return again for another concert.

Reeve Wm. C. West, proprietor of the Stirling Creamery, has announced his intention of demolishing the present creamery and replacing it by the erection of a new modern building 50 by 40 in size with two storeys on the same site. Operations will commence at once and during the erection of the building, business will be carried on in the Coulter Block.

The September meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of the President, Mrs. A. C. McGee with a fair attendance. The decision was made that no delegate be sent to the convention at Westport this year, due to the period of financial stress. Several committees were formed, reports on different charitable works made, as well as on the picnic held at Oak Lake in August. After a social half-hour and lunch, the meeting adjourned.

The opening meeting of St. Paul's Woman's Auxiliary Mission was held in the church parlours on Tuesday, at 2 p.m. A very interesting feature of the meeting was the resignation, after 30 years, of the secretary and the replacement of Mrs. Williams by Mrs. Perry Brunson on the motion of Mrs. Mallory who was seconded by Mrs. C. White. The following reports were submitted and new committees formed to take after arrangements for the chicken supper to be given on September 19. The meeting was brought to a close in the usual manner.

Mrs. A. B. Fargey and Mrs. W. L. Anderson attended the Woman's Missionary Society Presbyterial Executive meeting held at the home of Mrs. George Peck, Presbyterial President, in Belleville, on Wednesday afternoon.

The Easier Way

There are thousands of combinations concocted in the name of food. All classes of sufferers know how difficult it is to select a combination that will agree with a sick stomach.

A troublesome stomach can be made much relieved by making the stomach normal so that it can handle normal foods properly than by experimenting with these thousands of concoctions to find which few of them will agree with the stomach.

Try feeding stomach conditions we remove the cause—the easier way.

ROOSEVELT TO PROBE FIRING ON MINE PICKETS

Fourteen Men Shot when Deputy Sheriffs Fire on Pickets About Coal Mine

Deputy's Arm Blown Off At Uniontown, Pa., Early Thursday

GROUND STREWN

"Guns Began Blazing All Around Us," Says Picket

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 14.—(AP)—Fourteen men were shot and more than a score beaten and stoned today as rioting at three mines signalled the official start of the miners' "holiday" in the Southwestern Pennsylvania soft coal field.

The trouble flared in pickets tried to prevent miners from going to work.

At Gates, Deputy Sheriffs are reported to have opened fire on strikers and in the battle that ensued a Deputy's arm was blown off by gunfire.

Among the casualties at Edenborn are John Carrow, 40, who suffered a fractured skull, and Mike Savage, 45, who was severely beaten about the head.

All three mines are owned by the H. C. Frick Coke Company.

Miners Stoned

The most serious clash was at the Gates' Mine. It was there that the 14 were shot.

Pickets were reported to have stoned miners going to work. Deputy Sheriffs, heavily armed, went to an agreement with Louis Kromer and one of them pushed him.

As other pickets gathered the Deputies threw tear gas bombs and the pickets replied with bricks. Fighting broke out, clubs fell and stones were thrown. Then the Deputies opened fire.

Mike Cuzwright, a deputy, got in front of a fellow officer's gun, pickets said, and his left arm was blown off.

After the outbreak, the ground was strewn with wounded. Ambulances sped to the scene and the casualties were brought to a hospital.

Said Carrow:

At Edenborn, John Carrow, 40, suffered a broken arm and a fractured skull, during a two-hour riot Mike Savage, 45, has a broken arm and lacerated head. A score of others were injured less seriously at Edenborn.

John Cochran, 35, and several other pickets were clubbed and stoned at Footdale.

After the excitement at Gates quieted down, Thomas Vidovich, John Bezmalic and Rol Hunky, three pickets who were in the thick of the melee, said the Deputies began firing after Mike Donovan, Mine Superintendent, shouted:

"Let 'em have it."

"Then guns began blazing all around us," Vidovich said. "Another tear gas bombs into the crowd as they broke down the railroad tracks near the mine entrance and fired into us. One of the wounded men on the tracks was the freight train was coming and we barely got him off the tracks in time because they were throwing tear gas at us."

At the offices of the Frick Company it was said the firing started after Deputies had arrested one of the deputies and men who wanted to go to work.

At Washington, Sept. 14.— Stephen T. Early, Secretary to President Roosevelt told reporters "the President feels that the time has come for one week's holiday, to get definite action."

Mr. Roosevelt acted after a lengthy conference with Attorney-General Cummings, Secretary Perkins and Governor Pinchot.

Upon leaving the White House, the Pennsylvania Governor, said he would seek further details of today's shooting in which 18 men were wounded and would declare martial law in the district "if it is necessary."

The saving will be 15 cents daily —$54.75 yearly—not figuring the energy volunteer firemen will expend on the bell rope.

CUT IN WAGES BLAMED UPON SEN. MURDOCK

"Lukewarm Attitude On Wage Question" Board States

HIS COMMENT

"I Do Not Believe Anyone In Canada Would Make Charge"

Cleveland, Sept. 14.—(CP)—The office of Canadian Vice-President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen which Senator James Murdock held in 1905, is bid for only another 24 hours. A removal order, to take effect Friday, moval order to take effect Friday, Executive Council of the Brotherhood, an outgrowth of charges the Senator made against President A. F. Whitney of the organization and counter charges levelled at the veteran Canadian union figure.

In all, Senator Murdock made eleven charges against Whitney. He appeared before the Board a few weeks ago and among other things accused President Whitney of "vindictive and ruthless oppression and retaliation." The Board did not sustain him in any of the charges.

Nine Charges

In turn Mr. Whitney made nine charges against the Canadian Vice-President. One was an allegation that Senator Murdock failed in his duties as an officer in handling the now pending railway wage dispute in the Dominion.

Whitney said last night that "Murdock's whole attitude in the wage situation in Canada was found by the Board to be lukewarm. Wages there now are 11% percent lower than they are in the United States."

The charges made by Whitney touched on Senator Murdock's conduct in the Upper Chamber of Parliament. This particular count read:

"That as a Senator, on May 11, 1933, Murdock advised the Canadian Senate on legislation during with co-operation between the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National, and argued that the provision for negotiations with the proprietary interests of the railways affected in a bill dealing with the appointments of receivers, was unnecessary, but that it should be left in the bill "to see what comes of it."

Charges Dealt With

On this particular charge the Board did not sustain the Brotherhood President. But it did sustain six out of the nine charges.

Senator Murdock, who was Mackenzie King's Minister of Labour in the late Liberal Government, took over the Canadian Vice-Presidency of the Brotherhood after fifteen years of service as a C.P.R. trainman.

Frankford Holds Successful Fall Exhibition

"MIRACLE" BRINGS SIGHT TO BOY

Twelve-year-old Peter Smith, right, of New York city, who is said to have regained his sight through a "miracle", after being blinded at birth through a nurses error, is shown here reading a book with his brother, Raymond. The boy is to appear before an ecclesiastical tribunal in Columbus hospital, Chicago, which is to decide whether the late Mother Francis Xavier Cabrini, inset, should be canonised as a result of Peter's recovery.

Kiwanis Club Should be Supported in Philanthropic Work

A service club which has done and is doing most important social work in so many branches is the Kiwanis Club. This week sees one of its efforts to raise funds to carry on its social work — the Karnival at the Armouries. The success of this means the continuance of the activities of this organization.

Wednesday evening saw the most gratifying attendance of about one thousand persons for the citizens of Belleville and the people of the district realize that they are getting a dollar's worth or more for the small admission and are feeling "in the mood" because the work is a charity endeavor.

This club of young men is endeavoring to give and succeeding in giving Belleville excellent entertainment of all kinds and to accomplish this they have to assume heavy financial obligations. They realize that they are giving more than a dollar's worth of entertainment for the small admission and they also realize that the citizens know their objects and hence will be generous with their givings. A good attendance of the citizens of Belleville and the district with a little generosity in patronizing the various attractions, a little giving which will not be missed but which will provide the giver not only with entertainment but also the club with the sinews to carry on its excellent work, will provide the club with adequate funds. To fail to support this enterprising club would be scant courtesy and a failure in social duty.

Among the Kiwanis Club's activities are support of the V.O.N., and Well-Baby Clinic, the Boys' Camp, Boys' Week sponsoring and maintenance of the Sea Cadets, a real achievement, the awarding of scholarships at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational High School, support of the Summer Camp by the construction of four out of the five cabins at the Motra Lake, the undertaking of very costly surgical work with the aid of the best surgeons given free, dental work and local cases for indigents.

These are but a few of the activities of the club but at the Karnival the members are seen in another role. Here they are in the entertainment field. They have put on a style show of very great appeal and instruction. Tonight and Friday night they are putting on one of the most attractive of all, the Riddled Revue, and on Saturday night they will wind up with a fine novelty for a Karnival — a clean bill of wrestling which will give men and women, boys and girls under the finest possible auspices to see human muscles at play and work in the strebuous game of wrestling.

Knowing the heavy obligations facing the club, citizens are urged to lend every support by their attendance by crowding the armouries for the three remaining nights. Every one counts just in the attendance means that much more for the work.

Very little of the proceeds will be of Belleville. There are heavy expenditures in preparing for the Karnival in labor which is hired. Everything is bought from local merchants, Hydro is used, and so on. The money all goes to the benefit of the children. Support the holding of the Karnival.

Attend the Karnival every night and patronize the booths.

STORE ROBBED AT STIRLING

Money And Cigarettes Stolen From Dominion Store In Village

STIRLING, Sept. 14.—Special— Some time during the night, a break-in was made in Dominion store here. An entry was made through the rear window and apparently the burglars knew the building well. A small sum of money and several cartons of cigarettes were taken, Mr. Macklin, the manager, so far, has not found anything else missing.

An attempt was also made to enter the McGee and Legrow hardware Store. A lock was broken on an outer door at the rear, but a second strongly built door balked further efforts to get in. The Provincial Police are investigating.

SEN. MURDOCK WILL APPEAL

Says 900 Delegates Will Not Confirm Executive Act

President was made here today by Ottawa, September 14.—(CP)— Prediction that the 900 odd delegates at their next convention will confirm the action of the executive board of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen in removing him from office of Canadian Vice-President was made here today by Senator James Murdock.

"Unquestionably I will appeal against the action taken and against the czar-like attitude of President A. F. Whitney," Senator Murdock asserted. "Unquestionably, in my judgment, the delegates will not sustain the action which has been taken."

EXTRA GUARD ABOUT CUBAN AT MONTREAL

Members of Famous A. B. C. of Cuba In City

FEARS EXPRESSED

Hotel Suite Is Closely Guarded Against Secret Order

Montreal, Sept. 14 (CP)—Extra guards were posted about the hotel suite of Gerardo Machado, deposed Cuban President living in retirement here, when it became known today members of the A. B. C., the Cuban secret society, were in Montreal. The A.B.C. is one of the organizations responsible for the overturn of the Machado regime.

Members of Montreal's small Cuban colony who were fearful of having their own names known were responsible for the statement. A.B.C. representatives had been seen in the neighborhood of Machado hotel. The colony was seething with rumors an attempt would be made on the person of the deposed president. Some Cubans said however the A.B.C. was merely keeping watch "for fear Machado might attempt a return to his native land.

Latin Americans Questioned

Police officials promptly posted extra guards about Machado and began questioning Latin Americans in the city.

30 THOUSAND TOWARD FUND

Ontario Diocese Bears Its Share of Finances

Toronto, Sept. 14 (CP)—Three dioceses of the Church of England in Canada have reached their objectives in the campaign being conducted throughout the Dominion on behalf of the Restoration Fund. Funds are required for the replacement of the lost episcopal and other endowments of the Province of Rupert's Land, the strengthen the pension fund or the church and to provide assistance for certain dioceses outside of Rupert's Land.

Subscriptions to the Restoration Fund and the special Episcopal and Diocesan Endowment Fund have reached $870,226, of this sum $423,226 being in cash.

The Diocese of Ontario has subscribed its objective of $3,000 and the Diocese of Huron has reported it exceeded its allotment of $3,000 by nearly $300. In the northwest the sparsely settled mission diocese of Mackenzie River has topped its objective by $500.

SHOOTS GUN TOWARD TREES

But Boys Said To Be On Way To Game Are Wounded

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 14 (CP) t.— Believing children were raiding his apple trees, Earl Rawlins, 20, of Cornwall Island, fired several times with his shotgun toward his orchard, and today two boys were in hospital. The boys, Albert Rawlins, 12 and Gerald Lanctot, 18, were reported by hospital officials to be only slightly wounded. Rawlins was released on bail on a charge of shooting with intent to maim. The boys denied they had been raiding the orchard but were on their way to a lacrosse game.

Girl Drives Truck Broadside Into Bull to Save Twelve Year Brother

Middletown, N.Y., Sept. 14 (CP)— Betty Birch, who lives on a farm near Greenwood Lake here, showed courage and resourcefulness today when she saw a bull broadside and knocked him down. She got out and found her brother into the truck as the bull charged into the side of the machine. The boy will recover.

Frankford's Historic Exhibition Adds Another Milestone to Record

Exhibition From Country-side Attracts Much Attention

SECOND DAY

Names of Winners of Awards In Some Classes

Owing, possibly, to the fact that there were no speeding events scheduled at the Frankford Fair on Wednesday militated to some extent against the attendance. Many there are who attend the country fairs for the sole purpose of witnessing horse races. The attendance was by no means a record. While this was a fact the number of entries in the various classes were, according to the secretary, in excess of some former years.

In the commodious building upon the grounds still further the display of the several classes, was an exhibit which attracted considerable attendance, especially by the ladies—the fine art, ladies' fancy work and domestic manufacture showing was all that could be desired for a country fair. It was large, varied and demonstrated the handiwork of the feminine exhibitors.

The display of canned fruit and jams looked very tempting, at least, tempting, and merited many favorable comments. There were also quite abundant and arranged in an artistic manner; dahlias and asters predominating.

Fruit, especially apples were a feature, there being upwards of 70 plates of apples of various kinds. A few plates of pears and grapes were also exhibited.

Naturally the ladies were more interested in the showing of fancy work which was indeed most creditable and arranged in a manner as to be to best shown to advantage. It included dining room furnishings, bed room furnishings, ladies' personal wear, infants' wear, library or dining room accessories and domestic confections.

Another portion of the building was used for the display of grain and seeds, roots and heed crops, dairy and other products. Some exceptionally large water melons

City and District News

FINE DAHLIA ON HIGHLAND AVENUE

Dahlia growers of the city and district have another tall mark to shoot at to beat the record at present located to be held by Mrs. T. Blackburn, Highland Avenue of this city. In the beautiful flower garden owned by Mrs. Blackburn, a Jersey Mammoth Dahlia with a stalk which measures ten feet and eight inches in height, towers over other dahlias whose small stature of six feet or less seem insignificant. Mrs. Blackburn exhibited some of the petals blossom from the record breaking plant at the Frankford Fair on Wednesday.

STORM AFFECTS MARKET CROWD

Thursday morning's early hour rainfall took its toll on the regular mid-week market and lowered the attendance considerably. No change in the price of farm produce was noted. There was a considerable fruit and vegetables displayed. Grapes sold for 35c a basket and peaches from 40c to 50c. Melons sold from 5c to 25c; green and ripe tomatoes were in abundance as were other vegetables. Eggs sold at 19c a dozen.

DUCK HUNTERS ARE PREPARED

Duck Shooting Season Opens Friday Morning

Scores of duck hunters from this city, already prepared for the annual fray with guns, ammunition, boats and lunch baskets, will invade the marshes of the inland waters around this section on Friday duck morning, the opening day of duck-shooting season, prepared to lay down their deadly missiles through which no duck may expect to escape alive. During the past several weeks hundreds of hunters have had at work from Hay Bay to Weller's Bay, building "blinds" and other covered "hides" for the first May's shoot. Farmers in some sections are resting their marshy land for the season. But ducks this year are reported scarce. They have been seen so far in their accustomed haunts. The ones that have been noticed are gun cautious and hay. But the week's stop the hunters. Indications point this year to the greatest number of hunters in the field for some time. Ammunition sales in hardware stores also have shown a record upward surge. Many of the seasoned hunters will leave the first few days to the amateurs, well satisfied that they will be able to satisfy their hunger and will have their experience and thrill provide themselves with plenty of birds.

PREMIER TO ATTEND DINNER

Premier R. B. Bennett and practically all members of the Dominion and Ontario cabinets will attend a dinner to be tendered Mr. Mackenzie Laurier in Ottawa during the meetings of the Eastern Ontario Conservative Association at the Capital in October. It is anticipated that between 1,000 and 1,500 persons will attend the dinner.

The Eastern Ontario Conservative Association was formed at Brockville last autumn: J. F. Sowards of Brockville, president; H. M. Simpson or Napanee, secretary, and F. M. McKown of this city, one of the directors.

JOS. SHARKEY IS REMANDED

Charged With Theft of Potatoes At Madoc

Following numerous complaints relating to the theft of farmers' produce in and around the Madoc district the Provincial Police arrested Joseph Sharkey on a charge of stealing some eight bags of potatoes from Malcolm Allen of Madoc. He was lodged in the county jail yesterday.

Three of the eight bags were recovered in a Madoc restaurant but the remainder are still unaccounted for. The potatoes were obtained by Mr. Allen from the Government Experimental Farm at Ottawa and recently he was awarded third prize at the C.N.E. for his display.

The Provincial authorities at Madoc and Marmora have been at a loss for sometime past to track down those implicated in the thefts in that area and the arrest of Sharkey is expected to solve the question, the police say.

GASOLINE FOR COAL OIL

Picton, Sept. 14—Mistaking the gasoline can for that containing coal oil and pouring the contents in the kitchen stove to hurry the fire caused the explosion yesterday which set the home of Michael Hicks on fire and destroyed all contents. A grandchild was rescued from a bedroom window.

REGATTA AT PICTON PARK

Sixty-Five Craft of All Types Present At Gathering

Picton, Sept. 14—Wednesday afternoon the Picton Yacht Club's Bayside Park at Picton resembled a setting at the yacht club at Toronto. There were at least 65 craft of all types in the bay, and to mention a freighter that passed at six o'clock. Among those taking part were F. L. Ward, E. M. Young, L. Hicks, Picton, J. M. Channell, Bloomfield, Frank Harris and Carl Mercer, Wellington, Keith Gilmore, Fred Vandervet, Douglas Cole, Herb Daubney, with the Thistle, Mr. J. Bartlett of Napanee, Rcobitt McKibbon and many others too numerous to mention, but there just the names. All the races were in three heats and every race was strongly contested. Never before in the last ten years has so much interest been manifested by boating in the district and old timers recall the days of long ago when Picton was a busy little port with plenty of ore craft as well as passenger boats filling the harbour. The park is ideal for such an event and pleased everyone present greatly. Commodore Bartlett who had to resort to the wind for locomotion. Everyone enjoyed the event to the limit and many participants were heard to remark "well it's been a great day."

SUMMER TOO WARM FOR CORN BORERS

Dry Weather and Parasites Cut Down on Numbers

Corn-borers, whose increasing numbers during the past year or so in this district had given rise to considerable alarm on the part of farmers of the section, had a thin time this year, according to the finding of Mr. T. Marvin, corn-borer inspector for Hastings County. The hot dry summer killed many by the thousands, and this, aided by the attacks of the borer parasites which had been liberated in the fields by the Dominion Parasitic Laboratory, considerably cut down the cutting down their numbers. The inspector has noticed this year that while the borer showed an increase the disease smut has attacked many corn fields and rendered large areas unfit for other than stock food.

SCOTT-PAINE PASSES THRU CITY BY MOTOR

Belleville Firemen Glimpse Car on Passage Through

Piloting his powerful and speedy looking coupe whose door panels were decorated with colored flags and a cost of arms, as well as the owner's name, Hubert Scott-Paine, record challenger for the world's speed record on water, whose race this year with Gar Wood at Algonac was unsuccessful, swept through the city late Wednesday afternoon without a pause. Firemen at No. 1 City Hall managed to get a glimpse of the car and occupants as he flashed past the hall on Front Street and circled past the silent policeman on Front and Dundas Streets, to continue on his trip up the highway, east. With Mr. Scott-Paine was Mrs. Scott-Paine, who sat slumped on the seat as the large coupe sped down Front Street. The machine was unrecognized by the majority of citizens who waited casually along the street. Scott-Paine is driving to the east where he will board a boat with his car and challenging speed boat for England.

The funeral takes place Friday afternoon in St. Mary Magdalene Anglican Church, which she was an active worker.

LATE MRS. GEORGE E. REID

Word was received in the city Wednesday of the death of Mrs. Reid, Mr. C. M. Reid, East Bridge Street, of the death of Mrs. Della Reid, in Vancouver. Mrs. Reid left the city late Tuesday night at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. George A. Gowan, with whom she had made her home the past several years. The late Mrs. Reid was the widow of George E. Reid and previous to marriage was Miss Della Hickey, she was well known here, and for many years was an ollen visitor to the city.

MRS. T. J. PAYNTER

The death occurred Wednesday at the East General Hospital, Toronto, of Mrs. Flossie Irene Chase, beloved wife of Thomas James Paynter, in her 32nd. year.

Funeral service will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday morning at the residence of her brother, Mr. O. Chase, 158 Hoglouch Road, Rosedale, by the remains brought by motor to Picton for interment in St. George's cemetery, there.

OBITUARY

LATE T. B. THOMPSON

Tweed—The funeral of the late Teddy Rogart Thompson was held on Saturday from his late home on South Victoria Street to St. James Anglican Church of which he was a member. Some forty members or Tweed branch of the Army and Navy Veterans to which the deceased belonged formed a guard of honor and marched at the head of the funeral cortege. Six of the comrades of the deceased officiated as pall bearers and after the service at the church bore the flag-draped casket from the church to its last resting place.

The service at the church was conducted by Rev. W. G. Swayne, rector. At the grave he was assisted by Rev. Merritt Price of Actinolite, who is chaplain or the local branch of the A. and N.V.C. As the comrades stood in reverent silence with bared heads, Cecil Cherry of Belleville, formerly of Tweed bugled the Last Post.

The late Teddy Thompson, who died in his 52nd. year, was a veteran of the Great War and his years of service sapped his strength and undermined his constitution so that he had enjoyed but indifferent health for many years. During the past few weeks he failed rapidly and finally passed away in Belleville Hospital on Thursday. He is survived by his widow and one son, Francis, two sisters, Mrs. Thos. Orr and Mrs. Andrew Sinclair, and two brothers, Archie, Christopher Augustus Lloyd and Jerry, all of Tweed.

The bearers were Dr. M. G. Dales, Messrs. C. E. Way, W. E. J. Leal, A. McTaggart, W. Ledage and F. Mitchell.

Mr. Samuel Good, a veteran of the Fenian Raid, who recently received a medal in commemoration, marched with the veterans.

Picton, Sept. 14—The death occurred at her home in Prince Edward Centre Shimmin, wife of J. H. Holmes (Kathleen Shimmin), on Wednesday. She was born in Liverpool, England, 78 years ago, and came to Canada 36 years ago. Three years ago they celebrated their golden wedding.

Surviving are her husband; one daughter, Miss Kathleen, at Picton; five sons, the Ven. G. Prentice, M.A., Lennoxville; Holmes, Principal of Balaclava School, St. Thomas, Ont.; Shimmin, Deputy Minister of Education, Toronto, one brother, Robert Shimmin of Prince Edward County.

The funeral takes place Friday afternoon in St. Mary Magdalene Anglican Church, of which she was an active worker.

The KIDDIES' REVUE TONIGHT at the KARNIVAL

This show tonight has the recommendation of thousands of theatre goers in Toronto —they have been the feature attraction at the Imperial and Uptown Theatres in that city — and they are a troupe of the most talented kiddies that has ever been gathered together in Canada. They were at the Karnival one night last year and sent the audience away delighted.

We Apologize

The Kiwanis Club do not think Wednesday night's programme was up to the usual standard of our Carnivals, but this through no fault of our own. However we have belstation about recommending tonight's show as we feel we make the statement that if you are not entirely satisfied your money will be gladly refunded at the door.

Canada's Premier Juvenile Entertainers at "Karnival"

Interest is at white heat in the appearance at the Kiwanis Carnival tonight of Canada's premier juvenile entertainers, the famed Toronto Kiddies, who will offer one solid hour of snappy, wholesome entertainment embracing singing, dancing, instrumental and novelty skits.

This talented group of entertainers created a marked impression in their initial appearance at the Kiwanis Karnival last year, so much so, that it is by popular request that they are returning to Belleville. This year these versatile juvenile stars announce they will introduce a series of new novelties that have proven very popular on their tour since their last appearance here. Those who called on Manager Belleville admirers will be on hand to accord them a rousing welcome.

HEAR M. O. H. UPON CANCER

Dr. G. S. Cronk Addresses Eureka Lodge On Disease

Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health of the city was the speaker of the evening at the meeting of Eureka Lodge, A. F. and A. M., held in their dining hall Wednesday evening. The meeting was the first of the season following the annual vacation of summer holidays. He chose as his topic "Cancer," an illuminating address which was clearly presented in non-technical language to the members. Graphically, Dr. Cronk described to the inner realms of this little understood disease. He told of the battle medical men all through the world were engaged in in attempting to check this plague whose dreaded victims had shown an appreciable increase in recent years. During the past year in Ontario alone, stated the speaker, over four thousand deaths were attributed to this devastating disease. Methods of prevention, control and treatment outlined Dr. Cronk of practitioners, a new appreciation of the advances science has made during the past and of the hope struggle that still lay ahead. Simple rules for prevention also given the members by the speaker.

Wor. Master W. Gerrie presided over the meeting which was largely attended. During the evening the Eureka Orchestra under the direction of Bro. Reginald Hinchey rendered a fine music program.

ELMS HERE IN GOOD SHAPE

No Dutch Elm Disease In This Section Says Expert

"There is no specific disease attacking our elm trees. So far we haven't had any reports of the spread of the Dutch elm tree disease in this section. We are watching however, the developments of the disease in the States south of the border," stated Mr. A. B. Baird chief of the local Entomological Branch of Ontario Department of Agriculture.

At present the above mentioned tree disease is causing much alarm on the part of conservationists, the rapid spread and deadly effect on elms young and old is rapidly devastating parks and woods. The disease is believed to have been carried by the importation of a foreign insect pest.

"Of certae all trees have their own particular enemies," stated Mr. Baird, "So far though we have had no report of any pests that attack on our elms. We would be grateful for a report on any unknown symptom when observed," he added.

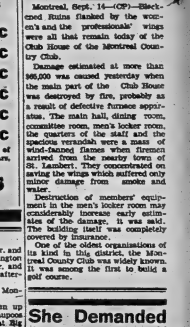
COUNTRY CLUB WINGS BURNED

Montreal, Sept. 14.—(CP)—Blocked Anins flanked by the women's and the professionals' wings were all that remain today of the Club House of the Montreal Country Club.

Damage estimated at more than $60,000 was caused yesterday when the main part of the Club House was destroyed by fire, probably as a result of defective furnace apparatus. The main hall, dining room, committee room, men's locker room, the quarters of the staff and the spacious verandah were a mass of wind-fanned flames when firemen arrived from the nearby town of St. Lambert. They concentrated on saving the wings which suffered only minor damage by fire, smoke and water.



Destruction of members' equipment in the men's locker room may considerably lessen early estimates of the damage, it was said. The building itself was completely covered by insurance.

One of the oldest organizations of its kind in this district, the Montreal County Club was widely known. It was among the first to build a golf course.

WEST HUNTINGDON W. M. S.

The members of the United Church W.M.S. met on Thursday, September 7th, at the home of Mrs. J. S. Wilson for their monthly meeting, with a splendid attendance of twenty-one members and several visitors.

The president presiding, the meeting opened with hymn, "Praise Thee, O God, For Thy Love" after which Mrs. F. Sharpe read as the Scripture lesson, the sixth chapter of Matthew and all united in the Lord's prayer. A reading was given by Mrs. E. T. Sarles entitled "Don't Complain Yourself." The roll call was well responded to by giving the name of a favorite hymn. Minutes were read and approved. Mrs. J. S. Wilson and Miss Sarah Wilson responded as heralds for the Watch Tower, giving readings on Korea and Temperance respectively. "A Sugar Day Is Coming" was sung and offerings were gathered by Mrs. English, Miss S. Wilson and Mrs. J. J. Wilson. Miss Eva Wilson then led in interesting reading and Mrs. Geo. Poole also gave a reading both of the work of the mission story society. Mrs. Sam Purgey and Mrs. J. J. Wilson then sang a duet which was enjoyed. An appropriate reading "Every Man a Missionary" was given by Mrs. Frank Ashley.

A short business session was held. Mittens were handed in and arrangements made for packing the bale. Mrs. M. Donovan thanked the members for gifts received during her illness.

Mrs. Geo. Cooke was appointed delegate to attend the annual W. M. S. convention to be held in October at Mount Pleasant.

The meeting closed with "I Love To Tell The Story," and prayer by Mrs. Merrian.

PEG RAILWAY STRIKE ORDER DECIDED UPON

Railway Calls For Thousand Workers To Take Places

STRIKE TONIGHT

Second Strike Notice Served Within Ten Days

Winnipeg, Sept. 14 (CP)—The Winnipeg Electric Company today was calling for 1,000 workers to operate street cars as a challenge to its employees who late last night gave notice a strike would be called at midnight Friday.

Born in wage disputes and failure of negotiations to effect an amicable settlement, the strike notice served by the employees was the second in ten days. It called for the laying down of tools by track, traffic and mechanical department workers and threatened a complete tie up of the city's transportation system.

Shortly after the strike notice was given the company officials, the management began advertising for men to replace their present employees who join the strike. Notices were placed in the car barns informing all workers their places would be filled if they quit work. Employees who remain in the service, the notices said, would retain their relative positions on the seniority list.

First Since 1919

First major labor disturbance since the general strike of 1919 was threatened. Protracted negotiations between the men's union and the company as well as a representative of the Federal Department of Labor failed to bring settlement of the wage differences resulting from company proposals to reduce rates of pay. A board of conciliation recommended reductions, but the union refused to accept the ruling.

Mayor Ralph Webb was still hopeful in last minute hours and eventual settlement of differences could be achieved before the men quit work. He was credited with having averted the walkout of the employees when the first strike notice was given ten days ago. The mayor declared he was still hopeful the strike would be averted.

Threat of sympathetic action came from the Winnipeg National Labor Council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labor in session here. "We pledge our wholehearted support to the tram workers," read a resolution adopted.

LAMONT RETIRES

New York, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Robert P. Lamont has resigned as president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, saying he can see no know how far government regulation of business may go, and that he could be of little help in carrying out the institute's present activities.

"From now on, for an indefinite period," Lamont wrote Chairman Charles M. Schwab, the principal activities of the Iron and Steel Institute will be to keep alive that law's obligations of the industry under the N.R.A. and see properly carried out and reported to the government.

POLICE GENERAL'S UNIFORMS

CAUCUS HAS BIG HARVEST

(By Stanley P. Richardson, Associated Press Staff Correspondent)

Pavlovskaya, Kuban, U.S.S.R., Sept. 14 (AP)—The whole north Caucasus is now engaged in the task of getting in the richest harvest of years and shows few outward signs of hardships felt because of recent poor crops.

In an automobile tour completed today from Rostov-on-Don into the heart of Kuban—the native habitant of the Cossacks, as a class, proved to be the bitterest enemies of the Bolsheviks— The Associated Press Correspondent found Peasants generally working 24 hours a day in 12 hour shifts.

They worked hard to complete the last stages of what for them will prove the most profitable crop since the collectivization of farms began, if present signs are indicative.

Attack Feared From Striking Working Men

HIGH TENSION

Political Situation In Havana Is Unchanged

Havana, Sept. 14—The predicament of twelve Americans besieged in the offices of the Cuban Mining Company at Cristo, Oriente Province, occupied the attention of United States officials last night as the political situation in this Capital remained virtually unchanged.

Surrounded by striking workmen the Americans, employees of the United States owned management mines, were unable to leave the place, apparently fearing they would be attacked.

Elsewhere on the island there were reports of high tension, and the situation of Americans at these places also was studied by officials.

The 500 officers in the National Hotel continued to defy the government of President Ramon Gran San Martin, although the soldiers on guard were removed.

Colonel Julio Aguado, new Secretary of War, explained that the Administration had no desire to provoke a conflict, and that the officers were free to return home.

San Martin busied himself with completion of a Cabinet. Two portfolios remained to be filled.

Dairy Instructors Express Hope for His Speedy Recovery

One of the men longest connected with the interests of the cheese industry in this section of the province, Mr. Hugh Howey, Foster Ave. is lying seriously ill in the Belleville General Hospital. Mr. Howey following his years as a cheesemaker, did instruction work for the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association and then became dairy instructor for this district.

At Wednesday's meeting at the Hotel Quinte of dairy instructors from points in Eastern Ontario to consult with their chief Mr. George H. Barr of Toronto, general regret was expressed at the absence of Mr. Howey and his condition and messages of best wishes for his recovery were sent him by his colleagues on the instructional staff of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Adrien Vanier, 58-year-old shoe store manager, reported to have won $54,000 on a sweepstake ticket in the St. Leger classic, stepped into court and drew out a summons against his wife on charge of participating in a lottery. Mrs. Vanier is scheduled to appear in court next week.

Vanier took action against his wife under section 236 of the Criminal Code which provides that money obtained through illegal transactions "is liable to be forfeited to any person who sues for the same by action or information in any court of competent jurisdiction."

The winning ticket was held in Vanier's name but it is presumed, on the basis of his action today, that it has been transferred to his wife. As informant he will be entitled to retain earnings of the ticket.

CATER NOT TO CANNIBALS

Long, long ago, when The Literary Digest was in its first youth, Life pictured a court scene in the Bongo Islands, where His Majesty the King, black as tar, sat dictating a letter thus conceived:

"American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions,

"Dear Sirs:

"The last consignment of missionaries you sent me were old, tough and stringy. Unless the quality improves, I shall be forced to order my missionaries elsewhere."

But real life, too, has its little jokes, and now comes Mr. Charles D. Batchelder, telling of a talk he had with some equally fussy natives during a recent sojourn in darkest Papua. Having just eaten two Englishmen, they complained that the Britons were tough, from too much exercise, and quite detestably flavored with tobacco.

Though no cannibal, himself, Mr. Batchelder has eaten widely in other directions, and, while loitering in a remote Philippine village, subsisted for a month on grasshoppers and roast dog.

The New York World-Telegram reporter to whom we are indebted for Mr. Batchelder's confidences seems most interested in the Papuans. Was not the American afraid of them? Not at all! Which proves that he is a more reckless man than Henry Ward Beecher was, for history records that when P. T. Barnum invited Beecher "to meet six cannibals," the great preacher reluctantly, but firmly, declined.

ENDANGERED ELMS

"It has been said that the greatest enemy of the human race is mental disease nor war but the rapidly reproducing insects that destroy plant life. It has been calculated that 200,000 kinds of insects attacking insects exist," New York Times notes. "Unless man with the aid of science fights them constantly they are capable of spreading epidemics among the forests. The chestnut blight and the white pine blister rust have played havoc in many districts with two of the finest trees, and now the Dutch elm disease, so called because it is supposed to have originated in Holland in 1919, is eating into elms in the neighborhood of New York, particularly in New Jersey. The trees rot away as if poisoned by a fungus carried and deposited by the elm bark beetle. Early symptoms are the yellowing of the leaves and brown streaks in twigs. Young shoots are persistently attacked.

"If cultures sent to the laboratory show that the disease has fastened upon a tree, there should be no flinching from the heroic remedy. For the health of elms not yet affected the stricken tree must be cut down and burned. To quote Dr. Kent Beattie of the Department of Agriculture: 'Unfortunately, nothing can be done to preserve the American elm except to wipe out the diseased trees as fast as they are discovered.' In New Jersey Governor Moore has asked for co-operation in combating the menace 'before it is too late'."

CRICKET TO PASS?

Will English cricket be finally overthrown by baseball in the Old Country? Lord Tennyson, the English cricketer, has been reading a prediction to that effect, and appears not a little concerned. Baseball is becoming increasingly popular in various parts of Wales. It has invaded Lancashire. It gains ground in the Midlands. According to Sport, "the younger generation, brought up in the Americanized atmosphere engendered by the films, has decided that cricket is too leisurely, and that faster and more thrilling sport is needed."

His lordship boasts a warm appreciation of baseball. "It demands high skill, rare physical qualities, sharp wit, white-hot partizanship, and above all the hide of a rhinoceros," he finds, adding, "often have I marvelled at the subtlety of the pitcher, the daring and despair of the striker, the antics of the catcher, the monkeyisms of the fielders."

But—but—what a restless game it is, and what manners go with it. Writing in the London Daily Mirror, his lordship tells us that "a match between two crack sides," he asked, "Do you think it fair to bully, badger, and sting, if not designedly insult, this or that player?"

"Sure," was the rejoinder. "Listen. If a guy can't take his gruel, we scrap him. A guy has got to get on or get out. He's in this game of baseball on the assumption that he is a crack player. He's got to prove it. Baseball kills sensitiveness stone dead."

Very dreadful, all this, thinks his lordship. "Cricket," he says, "has given us an instinctive regard for decorum. If baseball is to hold sway in this country, a new British nation will have to be born." Indeed, it is a game which Englishmen "may not hope to play in other than a nebulous, half-hearted way."

A man should live with his superiors as he does with his fire: not too near, lest he burn: but too far off, lest he freeze.—Diogenes.

TOO FAIR FOR SLEEP

Too fair for sleep, this night. The moon rides high,
And swiftly fleet on fleet of white clouds sail
Along the tranquil ocean of the sky;
Each galleon for a moment draws its veil
Across that still, bright face men call a world.
Grown dead and cold, forgetful, passionless;
A moment, then its glory is unfurled
To wake strange thoughts no language can express.

Too fair for sleep, and so old dreams return,
Vague dreams whose splendor troubled many a breast
When earth was young and man had yet to learn
Life gives no answer to the spirits' quest.
The night too fair, the universe too wide.
Your hand, O, love, draw nearer to my side!

INASMUCH AS YE'RE BRETHREN IT UNTO THE LEAST of these my brethren ye did it unto Me—generous impulses are in every heart, and no matter how gruff we may try to appear opportunities for doing good, quietly, are never neglected, if in our power so to do. Nowadays charity and good will is carried out on a large scale with organized effort, and much credit is done that is never due of outside of the organizations referred to. Service clubs are doing a magnificent work for the welfare of those less fortunate than they, and from the average well-to-do citizens. The Kiwanis Club has a bright record of good deeds and thousands of dollars have been spent by this organization in Belleville doing good in secret. Many tears have been wiped away and many hearts made glad because of the kind hearted generosity of the ladies of Belleville Kiwanians. Again an opportunity is made for all the citizens of Belleville to join hands with the Kiwanians in raising funds for welfare work this winter—the annual Kiwanis Karnival is on at the Armouries and here all can join in happy, hilarious, exciting entertainment at small expense, while helping the fund for welfare work this winter. Kiwanis Karnival means a good time for everybody who attends, and a week's worth of fun can always be had for the small admission charge of fifteen cents, even if nothing more is spent.—Then there is a chance to win valuable prizes and actually come away after a very pleasant evening ahead of the game —chances which range from gold pieces and silver services to kitchen utensils at the merry Bingo game. It is the duty of every loyal citizen to get behind the Kiwanis Karnival and help the Kiwanians make complete success—everybody is in duty bound to do his or her bit for the other fellow who may be in need—and here is a very pleasant way to fulfill that duty. Attend Kiwanis Karnival and invest two bits or a dollar or two in humanity. Belleville Kiwanis Club is composed of young business men who give up their time, money and talents to do good. They are willing to work like nailers to put the Karnival over BIG, work night and day if need be, as they have in the past, but they need your presence and assistance, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Citizen of Belleville, one of the best cities in Canada, a city of kindly hearts and generous impulses. Let's all help and make this Kiwanis Karnival the best of the series.

TEDDY ROOSEVELT, one-time President of "those" United States, used the Big Stick on those who did not fall in with his policies. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, present occupier of the highest seat in the Seats of the Mighty at Washington, does not use The Big Stick, which means blunt and summary compulsion, but gets results by more polite and smoother methods. This NIRA which President Roosevelt has coaxed as a cross to lead the country to salvation has far reaching effects and is not having the smoothest of sailing. The National Industrial Recovery Act sponsored by President Roosevelt to deal a death blow to depression should be backed up by everyone participating and signing the Golden Rule and embracing the Oxford Movement or any movement which will induce the participants to do unto others as they would that others should do unto them—not trying to see who to do first. NIRA is raising prices in the United States and is having repercussions in Canada where coal, gasoline, oil, etc., will be effected in advancing prices. All of which proves that no man lives to himself alone, and what affects our brothers over the line affects us in greater or less degree sooner or later. LOOKING BACKWARD
GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

SEPT. 14, 1913.

The old Moira River which for centuries has been pouring down its waters through a big channel within the limits of Belleville into the Bay of Quinte is gradually undergoing a change. The natural steep rocky edges which marked the banks at many points are losing their distinctive character. The idea carried out in the building of the revetment walls has sunk into the minds of private individuals and the rugged face of the rocks on the east side just above the lower bridge is now hidden behind a wall of masonry which will forever prevent its appearance to light. Three or four private walls either of cement or stone have been constructed during the past few weeks at the water's edge and run up along the rock. The immediate action is apparent to the most careless observer.

Mr. Arthur Sills has returned to Belleville from Toronto.

Mr. Wm. Lang of Montreal is visiting in the city.

Mr. Peter Doyle is in New York on a well-earned vacation.

Mrs. F. V. McLean, head of the dressmaking department of Ketchenon & Earl, has left for New York to attend the openings which are being held now in that city.

CHIROPRACTIC
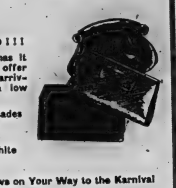
WHAT IT DOES
Interesting Information As To Wide Range of Drugless Treatment

How often is heard the complaint "I am nothing at all ailing," "I have a terrible headache," or "I did not sleep well last night," all of which are Nature-cries that the physical system is in poor condition—advance warning of more serious ills impending. Yet many feel thus at once take something to stop these helpful warnings while the cause is left to multiply the trouble.

What is chiropractic?



Here is the answer as given by an expert:

In the field of drugless healing in which the cause is searched for, the science of chiropractic has had great success in the last decade. Yet millions are still ignorant of its possibilities.

The spine is the controlling nerve centre of the body. If there is pressure upon the nerve as it emerges from the spine the vital organ thereby controlled will function poorly. Thus the body's condition runs down. The value of chiropractic is easily understood. The Chiropractor finds the nerve impingement which are poorly aligned and adjusts them with the hands back into normal position. Nature does the rest.

Chiropractic adjustment has greatly advanced the popularity of one science in this section. Dr. R. A. Wyatt of 238 Coleman street, Belleville, graduation Dr. Wyatt has kept abreast of the latest methods in study and research work. He has an excellent standing, exceptional professional ability, as many patients testify, and is considered by his profession as an expert on spinal analysis and adjustments. Dr. Wyatt is also skilled in giving treatment for the coagulation of tonsils, preferred by many to operation, when there is no hemorrhage. If you will 'phone 900 for an appointment, or mail a card to him concerning the value of this branch of drugless therapy. Do you know how long Chiropractic has been known? CUBS WINNERS IN FIRST OF FIVE GAMES

Program Washout As Far As Giants Are Concerned

DODGING SHOWERS

Second Game Postponed On Account of Rain

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr. Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago's home loving Cubs were credited, with a first down today in the drive toward their goal of six straight victories over the league leading New York Giants and a rival place in the National League pennant picture. But there still were five games to go.

The Cubs weathered the difficulties of a rainy day, Carl Hubbell's famed pitching and what power the Giants' bats could muster to win the opener 3-0 yesterday. It started out to be a doubleheader but after delay that totalled more than two hours had kept a crowd of 30,000 around until the evening set the finish of one contest, the second was postponed.

So far as baseball was concerned the whole programme was a washout. Their rivals over the Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates, who also were game, were reduced to 8 1-2 games and while they still can clinch the pennant with only nine victories in their 11 games, even if the Cubs and Pirates should win all they have left they would be ahead of Chicago by only a single percentage point on an event.

One Single Deuce In

It took just one inning to give the Cubs the decision after the game finally was started and the rest was just a matter of dodging showers and Carl Hubbell and Bush. Bill Herman, Kiki Cuyler and Riggs Stephenson tapped Hubbell so to produce one run in the first. Then after a pair had loaded the bases Adolph Camilli forced Frank Demaree at second and Bill Terry lugged that run home with another double play enough to let Cuyler score the second.

Pittsburgh did its share towards climbing the Giants anyway by holding a second place tie with the Cubs by defeating Brooklyn Braves 1-0 behind the four-hit pitching of Lefty Larry French. It was Paul Derringer's first straight shutout. The only run off Ben Cantwell came in the first when Freddy Lindstrom doubled and Pie Traynor knocked him home with a single. St. Louis Cardinals also got into the 3-0 pitching game as Wild Bill Hallahan stymied Brooklyn Dodgers 4-0. Dizzy Dean gave only five hits to the visitors in the ten innings. All the leading American League clubs were idle as Detroit and Washington were rained out and New York Yankees and Detroit had an open date.

Philadelphia Athletics and Chicago White Sox split their final doubleheader, Chicago winning the opener 5-4 on Jimmy Foxx's 45th homer, and the A's taking the second game 6-3 behind Lefty Red Faber for a three run rally in the ninth. Boston Red Sox finally halted St. Louis Browns 3-1 when Lloyd Brown, former St. Louis southpaw, held the visitors to six hits and the Sox bunched their hits with an Jack Knott struck a streak of wildness.

NAPANEE WINS IN PLAY-DOWNS

Napanee, Sept. 14.—Napanee Aprirtes defeated Stirling Springbrooks here Monday afternoon 9 to 2 to win a second round series and some four O.A.S.A. intermediate "B" championship in two straight games.

Fine pitching by Smith for the winners featured the fast snappy game which was played in just hour; he allowed but seven safeties and only one extra base hit, a two bagger by Williams in the sixth inning in which frame Springbrooks bunched three hits, which coupled with Selrites' two errors, netted two runs.

Selrites began perfectly when Miller socked Bateman's first pitch so deep left for a home run, but the next three out were in order, Bateman's fast ball did good suit the Selrite batters and not for five errors by his team mates the score would have been closer.

Miller led all the hitters with a homer and two doubles to be followed by Wilson with a double and single. Bateman, Al Comeau and Watts, also got safeties, the latter a three bagger to complete the Napanee quota. The first game of the third round with Glenburnie will be played Friday. The score:

Stirling	100 001 000—2	7	5
Napanee	111 310 11x—9	12	2

Batteries — Bateman and Williams; Smith and Thompson.

CURRENT SPORT

We understand that the Kiwanis Club are terminating their annual fall Karnival with a monster all-star wrestling show on Saturday night. A headliner the club's entertainment committee was recently in touch with Promoter Jack Corcoran of Toronto with the result that on Saturday next Mayes McLain, the Oklahoma football star and wrestler, will be in Belleville to meet Al Getzewich in a finished match. Saturday night at the Armouries. Both of these grapplers have been headliners in the Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto of late and Promoter Corcoran personally guaranteed the Kiwanis Club the best wrestling show ever to be presented in this city of Belleville.

A preliminary bout has also been arranged and sees Belleville's favorite wrestler, Frank Hart, in against Ken Richardson of Detroit. Taking into consideration that the match for the Karnival was to be a real one to a real extent it looks as though the sport fans are in for a treat. Of course we don't know just how much this all-star bout is costing the Kiwanis Club and it is up to the fans to show their appreciation by turning out en masse to the rafters for this big show at popular prices. As will be seen by the first time in local wrestling history that headliners have stayed at popular prices.

In a belittling manner the Kingston Penies upheld the prestige of the C.O.B.L. when they downed the Belleville Intermediate Baseball Leaders of the West Toronto boys in New Toronto 7 to 3. Revenge is sweet and the Penies surely rose to the occasion in this contest after Bob Weatherspoo charges had taken the initial game right in the Limestone city.

The suggestion was greeted with stator at the annual meeting of the Port Arthur Hockey Club but f the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, and J. E. Goodsville up residence here.

VICTORIAS IN THIRD GAME

Coming from behind the Victoria A.C. softball team evened the series in the play-off of the Ameliasburg Township League when they downed the Redneersville nine by the score of 8 to 4 at Redneersville yesterday. Eric "Slim" Shetzlerclan from along the bayfront had previously won the initial game of the series and yesterday's win gave each club a victory with the third and deciding game being played at Redneersville on Saturday, following announcements made by President: Dr. VanLewen.

Thompson, on the part of Ar. Dempsey, pitcher for the Redneersville nine, paved the way for the Victoria nine, who scored two of their five runs in the initial frame when they capitalized on Dempsey's inability. "Doll" Pointer hurled for the Victoria club and despite the fact he was nicked for 9 hits managed to keep them well scattered and was superbly supported throughout by his team mates.

The winners, Victoria A.C. collected but nine safe blows but managed to score five runs in the initial frame. Not until the eighth frame did they score again and then they added one more by scoring three runs following three hits and a glaring error by Dempsey in nasville short stop. The Sonesters scored their only counter in the third, fourth, fifth and 6th innings. The Redneersville nine crew tried in vain to eke out a win in the ninth when they managed to get men on the bases but failed to even the count. Jack Farley and H. Hunsd led the losing batters with two safe while the Pointer brothers and Thompson his well for the winners.

The lineup:

Victoria A.C.—H. Pointer, S. Cretney, White, R. Cretney, Barter, Thompson, Ash, Clayton, Cranford Smith.

Redneersville—J. Farley, H. Farley, Silla, A. Dempsey, Tompkins, Cook, Rowland, Hunsd Weese.

PETE SANSTOL WITH WOLGAST

Montreal, Sept. 14.—(CP)—In exactly two months September 27—Pete Sanstol will face Midget Wolgast, recognized by the New York Boxing Commission as world's bantamweight champion, in a 10-round bout at the Montreal Forum. Wolgast was today making active preparation for the contest.

The crack at Wolgast is Sanstol's as a result of the close decision he earned last night over Frankie Ingram, Canadian bantamweight champion after a hard-fought 10 round bout which kept a crowd of 6,000 fans in an uproar from the moment into an orgy of booing when the decision was announced. Two judges voted for Sanstol and the third cast his vote for Leitham.

The fans had a chance to start sitting on the edges of their seats from the opening gong to the final bell, though til the fifth round Leitham had a slight edge but Sanstol then began to show his best form and battered his clever dodging and tricky footwork brought down from the fans. A gury scene it was as blood trickled from the face of each of the game battlers over their bodies and even unto the clothes of the referee.

Sanstol weighed in 120½ and Leitham was a pound and a half lighter.

No More Piles

You Can End Your Awful Misery Quick Without Cutting or Salves

Thousands of Pile sufferers do not know that the cause of Piles is internal—and that is where relief must be found.

That is the scientific truth about Piles—the real reason why salves and suppositories do not give permanent relief, why cutting does not remove the cause.

Your failing, bleeding or protruding Piles will only go when you actually remove the cause—and that one minute before. External treatments can't do it. Only internal medicine should be used. HEM-ROID, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, has given Pile sufferers everywhere, success because it stimulates the circulation, gives out congested blood, heals and restores the almost dead parts.

Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID has an almost unbelievable record of success right in this city. So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when J. S. McKeown invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID with his guarantee of money-back if it does not end Piles for you, no matter how stubborn the case?

BEARS AND ST. LOUIS EVENED

Tony Kaufman's Veteran Pitching Too Much For Newark

Newark, N.J., Sept. 14 (CP)—Newark's baseball Bears, who finished the season's international league season last week about 15 games ahead of the Rochester Red Wings, today were on even terms with the St. Louis Cardinal team of the air, after last night's game of the new play-off system for deciding the championship.

Both clubs moved to Rochester last night, after the Wings had clinched the 4, 6 or 7 decision here in even the series, and tonight they will meet under the floodlights. Ray Benge, ace of the Bears, had nominated Johnny Broaca, Yank ex-star, to take the pitching job in which Don Brennan, leading southpaw of the league, was unsuccessful yesterday.

Tony Kaufman's veteran pitcher and young Tom Carey's fancy batting were too much for Newark, champions, to overcome yesterday. Kaufmann gave the Bears six hits, one of them a home run by himself, smashed Carey's first pitching drive. Ous was a home run with Kaufmann on base in the third and the other was a hard-hit ball which caused Roy Schalk to error, letting in the other two runs in the fifth.

Three hits gave the Bears two of their runs in the opening inning, Vince Barton, the Toronto boy, leading off with a single and with a long homer in the seventh, but repeated threats in the final innings were spoiled by Kaufmann and some brilliant fielding.

PONIES WIN BY 7-3 SCORE

New Toronto Eliminated In Senior Ball Race

Peterboro, Sept. 14—Kingston Ponies eliminated New Toronto from the O.B.A.A. senior race here this afternoon by defeating the West Toronto League champions, 7 to 3. The locals won the first round play-downs. New Toronto won the first game of the series at Kingston 2 to 1 but the Ponies came back to nose out the New Toronto squad 3 to 2 in 10 innings.

Ponies, Central Ontario League champions, pounced on Stafford, New Toronto pitching ace, for five runs in the second inning and with the help of a walk, two errors and a single to gain an insurmountable lead. Herod went to the slab in the 3rd and held Kingston to one hit the rest of the game. Ponies scored their second run in the eighth and another in the ninth when Ponies Mc-Guire walked, stole second and scored on J. Arnieli's fly to centre to score Ponies Mc-Guire from third.

New Toronto started off well. In the first inning Jennings walked, Dean singled, Gibb walked and McMillon hit to deep centre to load the bases. The first run of the game in the third, when Evans tripled and scored on Dunn's double filling in the ninth smothering a New Toronto rally. Herod struck out to start the inning but Dunn, Jennings and Dean singled and third, and scored on Dunn's fly. Herod walked, Jennings singled and Evans was walked but was forced out at second on Dean's roller to Ponies Mc-Guire.

Chuck Pournier went the route on the mound for the locals, being outside of the first and last innings pitching steady ball. Bronc Kingston first baseman, was taken to hospital after suffering an injury in the fifth.

TROPHY FOR THIRD TIME

London, Ont. Sept. 14.—(CP)—W. J. Booth of Delhi today was the proud possessor of the Dr. G. A. Rutledge Trophy for single horses in harness. He won the silver cup for the third time in succession at the Western Fair yesterday with a horse he has exhibited fifty-five times.

TENNIS

Interesting matches were witnessed at John Street Tennis Court yesterday when that club played a return tournament with Stirling Tennis Club, on the four complete events played, John St. won one, Stirling three and in those unfinished Stirling was leading in one and Belleville in two events. The games were splendid, the visitors meeting real opposition and the scores in most cases being very close.

In men's doubles Dawson MacLean and Don Osborne, John Street defeated Stirling McCrae and Harry McGee, Stirling 6-4, 8-6 and Clarence Duff and Harry McGee, Stirling defeated Fred Fisher and Bill Mossley 6-3, 6-4.

Alice Calow and Fred Joblin of Stirling defeated Mathion MacLean and Bruce May in the mixed doubles 6-4, 6-3.

The remaining games were unfinished. Fred Potts, Stirling led the men's singles against Bowyard Clarke 4-1th the score 3-6, 6-2 and 1-0. In the girls' singles Jean May, John Street played Helen Mabley was ahead 6-4, 3-1 In the ladies' doubles Ann Aitchc and Susie Denike of John Street played Blanche Hadley and Jean McCubbin the score being in favor of Stirling 6-1, 4-1.

Following the games the guests were entertained to tea at the home of Miss Susie Denike.

STARTS FALL SEASON WITH CONFIDENCE

Clothing Firm Arrange For Large Newspaper Advertising Campaign

Mr. G. W. Tindall, local manager of Tip Top Tailors Limited announces the release from his Head Office of the largest advertising campaign in the history of their business. "Our aim is to every Canadian this Fall," stated Mr. Tindall "because they will be given the full benefit of the tremendous purchasing made by our buyers last Spring when prices were low. It is a unique campaign which I just received showing the delivery of our Headquarters for Three Hundred Thousand Dollars worth of English, Scotch and Irish woollens, which will make history and today we have the result—a prosperous thriving firm whose very business is founded on economy; economy in the manufacturer, tailor, big man and small man alike."

A Safe At Home was made earlier by baseball deciders, who operate a plant that is indeed an asset to this community. They make a business of daily or weekly calling at the largest and smallest plants in our section and gathering the waste material that previously was of no value whatever to anyone. That they have been successful is easy to understand. That the business, is profitable in their gratitude—kind in their praise for the work of this firm is to be expected, because the organization of this firm has meant to them a cash revenue from waste and waste material—and a source of income that absolutely costs them nothing.

The owners of this business are indeed to be complimented on their service to the community. They are well known as upright, honest and honorable business men, who have the welfare of the people and of the community at heart at all times. They never take undue advantage of anyone regarding if they know the market or not.

Mr. A. Abraham Safe and Benjamin Safe, the owners, are men of experience in this territory and you will find it to your advantage to do business with this concern. If you have any Waste Material call A. Safe & Son, 52 Station Street, or phone 1714.

Do you know how many tons of Waste Material are handled by this company each year? Phone 106 and find out— tell us in your Prize Essay Story.

Crowds Grow at Karnival Over Thousand Persons Attend to See Goldiggers' Revue

Fine Exhibits By Local Stores, Workshops, Factories

TONIGHT'S PROGRAM

Kiwanis Karnival entertained its largest crowd of the week on Wednesday night, when over 1,000 in the evening as soon as the doors were thrown open until well on toward 9 o'clock, visitors streamed through the main door, or the Armouries to study the lists, taking the efforts of ticket sellers and door attendants to care for them. By 9 o'clock a conservative estimate placed the throng at well over one thousand.

Every seat in the stand in front of the stage was filled long before the stage show had actually commenced. Young and old packed the rows from the very front aisles to the back ones in the high tiers. Late comers then had to stand on the side lines to view the performance. Upon this ticket out of the box, drawn by little Miss Dorothy Thompson in front of a large crowd in the Armouries at the Kiwanis Karnival, Wednesday evening was No. 1671. The lucky holder, owner of the number by the announcer the large silver service door prize, was Mrs. Frederick Hall of M. H. Broad, 51 Cannifton Road, who held the winning number.

Exhibitors

Striking display of goods and products manufactured in Belleville's own workshops and factories, as well as beautiful exhibits of almost every other home need arranged in attractive booths are on exhibit at the Armouries during the Kiwanis Karnival. The long lines that are in the building are a decided attraction for the hundreds of visitors who find the time well repaid in visiting each exhibit. Exhibitors who have arranged the booths for the inspection of local and out-of-town visitors are:

The Hydro Shop—Kelvinator refrigerators; Corbold Washers and Moffat Ranges.

Queen Shirt Factory— Shirts, sweaters and sweater coats and blazers.

J. E. Madill—Auto Service parts. Sprague—Cleaners and Dyers. Individual manufacturers.

Albert E. Miles—Connor Washers, Fawcett Ranges, Stromberg Carlson Radios.

Dancing Enjoyed

Following the presentation of the show the large space in front of the stage was cleared, and under soft shaded lights and to the music of the Commodore's dance band, the latter part of the evening was spent in dancing by young and old. Those who didn't dance managed to chatter around the various lucky wheels where they risked their nickels in an effort to obtain some coveted prize which would match their own particular number. And, judging by the quantity of prizes which were carried off by the pasteboard, it must have been their lucky night.

Wednesday night will be beaten on Thursday night, when the Karnivals officials definitely promise.

Gets Hair Waved at 81 Years, to be Back in Year

A sunshiniest visitor to a local Beauty Parlour yesterday was a charming lady of eighty-one who called for a perm. Madam for her first permanent wave. The latter-day customer had definite ideas about having her hair bobbed but the staff of the Beauty Parlour persuaded her that this type of hairdressing would not suit her features.

The lodious business of permanent waving was a novel and entertaining experience for this customer who had seen style after style in hairdressing come and go and who still took a keen enough interest in matters pertain to what to "go modern."

I'll be back next year for another permanent," she promised the attendant as she viewed the results of the operation in the mirror with a pleased smile.

HAIR DRESSERS WORK WONDERS

Marinello Beauty Parlor Caters To Discriminating Women

One not only feels at home in the Marinello Beauty Parlor but the work done there is so satisfactory that once one visits this establishment their return is assured. It is a women's desire, not to say birthright, to look her best under all circumstances and nowhere will one find operators better qualified to perform those little touches of feminine beauty than at the Marinello Beauty Parlors. They simply do wonders to one's personal appearance once you turn your problems over to them.

They are adept at all phases of the work and cater to the discriminating, those who desire the best in the latest methods of beauty culture. After all beauty is contour. It is symmetry that created a pleasant sensation in our minds when we see things that are lovely. The proprietress, Mrs. E. Cummings, of this establishment has made a close study of types and hair for so long that she is well able to advise in these matters. She realizes that each individual type must be met in creating or bobbing the hair. She waves the hair as best suits the contour of the face, type and personality, or gives the style bob that fits.

Marinello Beauty Shop, 212 1/2 Front street, employs specialists in the treatment of the scalp and hair. There is no phase of beauty culture in which the manageress has not proven herself an artist. Her personally supervises those in her employ and employs only skilled operators. Do not neglect your appearance, keep yourself up-to-date, visit the Marinello Beauty Parlors today. They keep in touch with all new developments and one is assured of that personal touch so necessary to successful beauty operators.

A Mediterranean Pilgrimage — or — Sights and Scenes About the Great Middle Sea

Under the above title a series of letters will appear in the Ontario Intelligencer depicting an ocean and cruise during the past summer of 1933. The first of these may be expected in the issue of the coming Saturday, September 16th, and in following Saturday editions for seven weeks this fall. The writer and traveller is a fellow citizen, Mr. F. T. Grafton, B.A., B. Th., of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Staff. This is not his first trip abroad or around the Mediterranean and these experiences together with a careful study of both ancient and modern geography and history of the Near East should mean something of much interest to many readers, interested in what is transpiring in these lands or Southern Europe, Western Asia and North Africa. Special emphasis may centre about present day Syria, Palestine and Egypt, the centre of much of import of ancient and sacred history. Other lands visited by Mr. Grafton were Madeira (Portugal), Spain, Gibraltar, France, Italy, Sicily, Algiers, Jugo Slavia, Rhodes, Greece, Turkey, and Southern Russia on the Black Sea.

"The first of the series appearing Saturday will be on "Madeira."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

Stocks Roll Along To Higher Prices At Close of Toronto Board Though Waves of Selling Slow Trade Down At Times—Barrage of Inflation Reports Boosts Mining Market—Grains Drop With Peg Removed

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 14 (CP)—A new barrage of inflation reports from Washington started heavy buying in the base metal and silver shares today on the reduced National Silver quiet while some of the senior gold shares were under accumulation. The whole market moved into higher ground, and held the big end of the gains made in profit-selling in the late afternoon.

McIntyre put up a new all-time high price at $40 and closed at 39.75, up $1.50. Wright Hargreaves advanced 50 cents, Teck-Hughes and Lake Shore 25.

In heavy trading International Nickel advanced to $22 and closed at $21.86 for a gain of 70 cents.

Noranda chalked up a gain of 50 cents and the other base metal shares held firm.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

Winnipeg, Sept. 14—Bereft of their supporting props which were removed today by unanimous vote of exchange members, wheat prices dropped abruptly on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and closed 3¼ to 3 cents below yesterday's final quotations.

Largest Canadian export business in months was estimated at more than one million bushels was insufficient to stem the flood tide of heavy selling from elevator interests against country deliverance swept the market.

All options closed well below the previous minimum quotation. October wheat dropped to 66⅞, December finished at 67⅞ and May delivery wound up at 70⅝ cents.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Stock prices moved irregularly today and a brisk forenoon demand for stocks carried prices 1 to more than 3 points before profits were pared in the afternoon, but trading turned dull on the selling. Alcoa and Gold Mining shares were the most buoyant divisions. Utilities were a trifle irregular. Consolidated Gas lost a point. Steel ruled about unchanged. Homestake was up 19 points; National Distillers and U. S. Smelting registered gains of about 5 each. Curtiss, Cerro De Pasco, American Telephone and Case were up 2 or more. Transfers approximated 2,700,000 shares.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 14 (CP)—Industrial stocks rolled along to a higher close today on the Toronto Stock Exchange although it was slowed down at intervals by waves of profit-selling. Initial prices were firmer in leaders but wide trading interest was shown also in metal and food shares, due to expectation of new steps at Washington to raise the commodity prices.

International Nickel swept up to $22 up 75 cents, Brazilian, C.P.R. and Steel of Canada added two points each and Hollinger 1 while other fractions to the good at the close. Trading was heavy in the distillery shares and most of them closed unchanged. Walkers common weakened from $3 1-4 to close unchanged at $2 3-4. Distillers Seagram at 5½ and Industrial Alcohol at 22 were steady and Brewers and Distillers dropped about 75 cents.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

If you have ever had family troubles you will want to see "Another Language," the new Metro-Goldwyn Mayer feature at the Belle today and Friday, matinee and evening with Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery, co-starred.

The picture, adapted from the famous play by Rose Franken that proved to be the biggest dramatic comedy-drama to reach Broadway in several years, is truly an epic of the American home with the daughters and mothers-in-law in particular, it has a moral you will like or dislike, but it is here just the same—that mothers who "mother" their children over it by keeping out of their affairs after they are married.

Miss Hayes as the young wife who finds herself smothered by her husband's family, gives the most moving performance of her entire career. Her spirited denunciation of the Hallams, one and all, is by far the finest scene this writer has seen in many a month. It is worth the price of admission.

Montgomery, as the ineffectual husband who finds his backbone in the right place when he springs to his wife's defence, is excellent. His portrayal of a boy of Wickie will be remembered when some of his more flagrant roles have been long forgotten.

Edward H. Griffith directed the picture with an admirable restraint. He allowed the play to unfold itself smoothly and with unwavering tempo. His reaching of the climatic scenes added power and strength which few films achieve.

Louise Closser Hale is the selfish mother and she turns in another of her brilliant stage performances in the role of Jerry. The splendid cast includes Henry Travers, Margaret Hamilton, Wilfred Roberson, Irene Cattell, Muriel Watson, Hal Dawson and Maidel Turner.

New Torchy Comedy

Torchy comedies have always been very popular with Belleville fans and Manager Anderson's choice for his next successful in securing the first of the new series, this one titled "Torchy Buys a Horse," "Captain Henry's Show Boat," a clever Vaudeville, and the popular Belle News with all the latest news events, including the Schmeling-Paine-Carr Wood Harmsworthy trophy world premier speedboat race.

Coming Attractions

For the first time since their successful appearance together in "Daddy Long Legs," Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are co-starred again. They have another role in "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," the new Fox romance coming to the Belle Saturday and Monday, matinee daily. The production was directed by Harry Lachman from the famous novel by Gertrude Page.

Walter Connolly, Harvey Stephens, Margaret Lindsay, Andy Devine, Joseph M. Kerrigan, Charlotte Granville, Clara McDowell, Merle Tottenham, Roger Imhof and Trevor Bland are other members of the cast.

Oklahoma Cowboys

Ken Hackley and his Oklahoma Cowboys, nationally known radio artists are coming to the Belle Theatre to appear in person on the stage, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 19th and 20th, matinee daily.

Each and every member is an accomplished cowboy musician playing and using the total of twenty-eight instruments. As they say, they do plenty of playin', singin', cowhidin' and ropin', and they specialize new to the show going public. In addition to the stage presentation, the screen program includes

FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

"The Great Jasper Now at the Capitol Reminiscent of "Old Eratish"

The chronicles of a reprobate! Such is the theme of "The Great Jasper," the hash attraction which opens the Capitol Theatre screen yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

Unhurried, yet unflagging, high class, yet not highbrow, "The Great Jasper" deals simply with the lives of seven people, whose destinies hinge on the early discrepancies of Jasper Horn, a man with a soul, but whose conscience has not the scrupulous guidance necessary to allow the soul to be uppermost.

In other words he is something of a roue, and he is first introduced to the audience as he was in 1900, when he was the driver of a horse-car in New York.

Where walks were wasp-like and hats were hats, our Jasper had presumably become a business man of short duration, and of the union there was a little boy—Andrew.

Jasper's wife, Jenny, was a striking contrast to Jasper. Her mind was pure, whilst his was palpably weak. He loved the saloon whilst she preferred home. Jasper was consequently the upbringing of the son was more or less left to the mother, after whom he took.

At that time Jasper was working for the elderly McCowell, president of the street railways. McCowell's wife, Norma, being many years his junior, became a little fragile favor on Jasper, because when her son was born, each passing day added to McCowell's conviction that the boy was not his but Jasper's.

Jasper's wife eventually hears of Jasper's affair with Mrs. McCowell but does not guess the truth. However, she decides to leave him and take her boy, but Jasper forestalls her and he gets the boy and his Andrew in Atlantic City. Here Jasper, by his kindness to Mome, Tatters, all girls dancer at a low-class eating establishment and is known as "The Great Jasper."

Time passes and Andrew has attended university where he has met Sylvia.

Mrs. McDowell's son, Roger, also meets Sylvia while in college and is struck by the beauty of Sylvia.

There then commences a fight between Andrew and Roger for the affections of Sylvia with Roger as the winner.

Unfortunately Roger has inherited Jasper's nature and his intentions towards Sylvia are not honorable, yet they are quite agreeable to the fickle Sylvia.

Jasper intervenes, but, realising Sylvia's worthlessness, tells Andrew that he is not good enough for Sylvia.

The final episode of this really excellent chapter of life gives the audience the ending desired.

In their several roles the cast is excellent, and introduces Richard Dix as "Jasper"; Florence Eldridge as "Jenny"; Edna Marcin as "Mrs. McGowd"; Edna May Oliver as "Mdme Talma"; James Bush as "Andrew"; Eleanor Coke as "Roger" and Betty Furnets as "Sylvia."

The Harry Langdon comedy is very funny and the Canadian News, as usual, a welcome rest.

Three games of softball between teams of Frankford, Sidney, Lake Brash's Imperials of Trenton, proved interesting, it being the only sport on the grounds. Sidney and Frankford played first, the result being:

Sidney . . . . . 004 010 22x—9
Frankford . . . . . 100 100 001—3

The second game between Sidney and Trenton resulted in a win for Trenton.

The Frankford band was in attendance and played a number of pleasing selections.

In the Ladies' Fancy Work class the press was unable to secure the awards as the judges neglected to register them in the book.

The various booths did considerable business considering the small attendance.

Put them through the chopper
Soak 2 lbs. of white onions in brine overnight. Drain them and put throughthe food chopper. Pare 4 lbs. of sour apples and put them through the food chopper. Mix 2 lbs. seedless raisins with the apples, pour 1 pint of cider vinegar over them and let stand overnight. Add the onions and 1 head of celery, 4 large red peppers, 1½ lbs. of sugar, 2 tablespoons Keen's Mustard, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon turmeric and 3 pints cider vinegar. Cook until the vegetables are clear and tender. Seal in sterilized bottles or jars.
Now you have pickles to delight the palate. And that subtle, appetizing tang is traceable to the mustard you've used. Nothing like Keen's for giving pickles distinctive, delightful flavour. Don't forget to include it whatever you do.

CHAPTER XI

Lida, on the way home from the detective's office, decided to drop in at Cleo's and try on the blue sports frock she had admired. But her suspicions about Barrett Colvin were correct—and they were! It was wrong—she could buy the frock and a hat, too. She would add them to her charge accounts and tell Cleo that in a short while she would be awake for everything and make more purchases.

She would be able to have everything she wanted, once she discovered Barrett's secret. The thought that Barrett might refuse to pay her for her services did not even enter her mind.

Cleo, the proprietor of the fashionable 71st street shop, was none too cordial in welcoming Lida but after a few words her slightly frigid smile became warm. Cleo herself was soon ordering afternoon, to bring out the newest imports.

It happened that Barrett decided he would drive in connection that afternoon. The day was fine and he had had a disappointed Gerald on Saturday because of work at the office. The boy had come to depend upon seeing Barrett once a week and Barrett felt he had a right to depend upon this. He ordered Hatson to bring around the roadster which he said he would drive himself.

He wanted to be alone that afternoon. He wanted to be able to think of Elinor without feeling that some one might steal a sly side glance and read his thoughts. Barrett felt that he must have an understanding with Elinor. He wanted to ask her to help keep the year without that taint that starts gossip.

Marcia had told him the day before that Bob Telfare had been in Alden. The cause information had made him suffer with anger. It wasn't fair of Elinor to decide—it was not fair! She had promised outward, if not inward, fidelity for a year.

The spring day meant nothing to him, driving swiftly and carefully and considering how he could talk it through with her. He felt that he must keep from becoming angry and for some reason which he did not fathom the idea of Elinor thrilling with Bob Telfare made him see red. He wanted to be as king about the situation as a man could be. Elinor was very young. Her career bringing had given her no chance of knowing right from wrong.

He thought suddenly how sweet she had looked that night when she called him to her room after the party first quarrel and because this memory warmed him he felt a shame that he was humiliated. He was not not love her, he was certain, knowing her as he had come to, and yet the faintest thought of her made his heart plunge and filled him with deep and sometimes torturing longing.

Funny enough, he mused, if he weren't the sort to demand so much. If he could love a woman he could not honor, if he could feel his hunger between moments of understanding and scorn. But he could not do that.

A small car passed him. On a rise of the next hill he passed it. Thereafter it kept rather close to him, sometimes passing, sometimes lagging behind. It gave Barrett a rather pleasantly companionable feeling. He waved at the driver who grinned apologetically as he returned the salute.

The driver of the small car rather wished Barrett were not such a "nice lookin', friendly chap." However, business was business, and maybe he had nothing to hint you never could tell.

When Barrett alighted before the gateway of Gerald's home on the Phillip's place, the small car, which still followed, also stopped. It came to a stop. The man who had driven it leaned out and called to Benton.

Barrett again saluted him. He enjoyed the casual friendships of the road, the giving a hail to the voyager who would probably not appear and never reappear.

"I'm afraid," he said, "you have taken the wrong turn. You're miles out of the way. I couldn't if I not certain myself of the spot where you cut east."

Gerald came running from the house. He showed a mysterious and perturbed distressed. "I'll be cannoned!" he exclaimed. "I'll be cannoned might who is thinking backward to ring the bell he didn't take. His eyes seemed filled by worry and irritation, but within him he was triumphant. "The kid is a goner," he thought. "No doubt of that! Same chin, eyes, and hair."

Was the woman, who now stood in the doorway, the boy's mother? "Maybe your wife could tell you about the roads," said the driver of the small car as he looked at the woman who had now stepped from the house and to the porch.

"Not my wife," said Barrett smiling. "But I can tell you the road from selling you and she doubtless knows. Mrs. Phillips!" he called. "Can you tell us the best road back to Benton?"

She came hurrying down the steps toward them.

"It's been a good while since I took that way," she confessed, "and I hear there's been changes."

"Maybe your husband can tell me," said the young man.

She flushed and paled. Barrett said quickly, "Mrs. Phillips is a widow." Her trembling ended in short time she had been one and regretting the brutal reminder.

"A widow", echoed in the stranger's mind. It was the old tale! And the big guy looked so straight and "May I use your telephone?" asked the driver of the small car.

"Why surely!" Mrs. Phillips answered with pleasant, rural heartiness.

He called a blind number to tell "Lacy" that he would be late for dinner. Then with his cellphone, he asked for a glass of water, drank it slowly and chatted with the unconscious woman. She took care of the little boy for Mr. Colvin, the boy was Mr. Colvin's adopted son. A nice, pleasant little fellow, the boy was. She was that fond of him! Mr. Colvin came up once a week. The boy was to have a new tutor soon. He hadn't liked the old tutor. His name was Dexter, he thought. It seemed "kind of hard" to get good tutors to stay for the country.

The sleek young man with whom Lida had had a talk early that morning called her by telephone as she sat in the beauty parlor and he had been able to locate no one who would time with her and Carra Woodbridge on being asked had been so for as to be insulting!

"I've good news for you!" she heard over she wire. "It was pretty smart work, to me, I'll admit, to do it so quick."

"Oh, indeed yes." Lida murmured. Then a sharpening, "What is the news?"

She heard the man clear his throat. Then he said, "It would be better, Mrs. Stafford, if I ran up to your place to tell you. It ain't—it isn't a matter I can say so easy by 'phone."

"I shall instruct my butler to admit you," she drawled.

She hung up, triumphant. She had the whip now and Barrett would cower! She would show him that she, Lida Stafford, was not the woman to forget such rebuffs as he had given her.

Smiling, she left the telephone booth and in the drawing room there she studied herself before a mirror. Lida was pleased with her reflection. The man was coming to see her would be quite frankly overcome by her dress, cut daringly low, and the jewels on her arms. She thought of the man's glittering eyes and warmed as the memory.

CHAPTER 34

Barrett, riding homeward after his visit with Gerald, decided that he would run down to Aiken without forewarning Elinor of his coming. It was a small form of spying he knew.

He quieted his conscience by telling himself that he might thus discover the extent of her failure to keep their agreement and to deal with the situation before any gossip had begun to be whispered. He did not want her a subject for gossip. It would destroy her last chance to succeed in anything.

Yes, he would go down without telling her that he was coming. And he would then learn the truth. He had forgotten how, months before, he had warned Miss Ella Scriou that she could find what she is looking for.

Nearing the suburbs of New York he decided to make the trip by airplane. The need to be there was urgent. It was partly his ardent wish to see Elinor and save her from the danger into which the undisciplined feet might lead her and partly his flaming, jealous determination to put Bob Telfare in his place.

He would show young Telfare where he belonged. He would show him that Barrett Colvin's wife was not to be involved in cheap flirtations. Where had she been those long afternoons spent with Bob Telfare in New York? He told himself he must not think of that now. If he did he would go mad.

So he came to the conclusion that the scenery he reached Aiken the better. He would say, "Elinor, I am much older than you are. I have studied that for a year. In that year while our marriage endures you are not to see Bob Telfare. I will confer with him. I am sure he could he would say it. She was young. She was very beautiful. Suddenly he heard Elinor's low voice saying, "Cheek!" and saw her pitch smile as she looked across the chess men at him. Again he was striking for her.

Higgins packed the clothes that night and made a reservation for the air trip. The plane was to start at 10 next morning. He would arrive at Aiken between five and six in the evening. There, were several matters to attend to before he could go for his start. It was just possible that he might return that night and all depended. The house had been lonely and quiet and he had, he thought with satisfaction, been born rather hard on Elinor. After all, she was but a child, and much a child he would reason with her quietly, and they would be friends. These sad weeks have been hell!"

When he awoke he gave to hide his eyes against her throat after the long night of unsatisfied longing. Bob had contented the understanding from her face, and as he sometimes did, in a way that made her more mistress of all things Elinor did not want to hurt Bob as she herself had been hurt, knowing how painful heartache can be. She had been happier too because her father seemed a little better that day.

"Two lumps, isn't it, Bob?" Elinor asked.

"Yes, two."

Bentwell Stafford looked at the young man with pitying eyes. Bentwell understood. Bob reached quickly for a cigaret. He was smoking too much these days, he realized.

The motor was pulsing before the house. Soon the maid would step from one of the French windows that opened on the terrace, bringing a card on a tray. Then Elinor would disappear. Bentwell wasn't strong enough to see many visitors.

"Your tea, Bobby."

"Thank you."

But the maid did not step from the long window. Instead Barrett Colvin rounded the corner of the house and moved swiftly toward the group. He called out with mock heartiness, "Well, this is fine!"

Elinor rose, flushing. Barrett!" she cried under her breath.

Bob's heart broke anew as he saw Barrett hold Elinor close, and kiss her, saw her clinging to him while tears brimmed in her eyes. Barrett did not see those tears. He might have swiftly, blinded by the emotion of the moment, to Bentwell Stafford.

"It's good to see you out!" Barrett murmured, his hand in Bentwell's. "And it's good to be out."

"Bob—" Barrett said next. Shut that greeting and short the hand clasp.

"My Lord!" Bob reflected bolly, "Does he think I'm cutting in? Does he think I could — with Elinor?"

"Any tea for me?" Barrett asked as he dropped in a solid garden chair near the small table.

"Firstly! It's so good to see you!" Elinor repeated. She was sitting in a wicker chair with a spreading peacock back. It framed her and made her seem delicately small. The gold of her autumn brown hair was accented by a jaunty sport frock of gold colored linen. With her ashen latex skirt and flat, tanned shoes she looked no older than 16.

"Barrett," she murmured, "this is the pleasantest surprise!"

He said, "I hope so."

What he thought, was, "You beautiful little liar!"

I had no idea you were coming."

"I know you hadn't." She did not catch the implication but Bob Telfare did and his level-looking eyes grew cold.

Then Jed rubbed his palms together and smiled as he unfolded his scheme. It consisted of having Simbol, their American prisoner, kill Zaraan. I think perhaps we may get rid of both the unbelieving dogs without a stain upon us when the ape-man's Mazri is trampled upon the sleeping mat, while the silent figure crouching outside the Sheik's tent, disappeared in the darkness.

Neither the Sheik nor Tolleg would have been so pleased with themselves had they known that Aieja was listening. Or had they seen the silent figure crouching in the dark. Simbol was summoned by the Sheik and Tolleg departed to await events. He trembled upon the sleeping mat, while the silent figure crouching outside the Sheik's tent, disappeared in the darkness.

Simbol, cautioned to come stealthily to Ibn Jad's presence, was angered at having his sleep distorted. "Ill, Harang," invited the Sheik. "I have sent for thee this late to tell thee that Tarzan of the Apes demands thy life. He claims that thou hast slain thy companion, Blake, that he, himself, is going to kill thee tomorrow." "But—surely you won't let him murder me, Ibn Jad," Simbol pleaded.

ROBBERS STEAL $46,000 SECURITIES

Amery, Wis., Sept. 13.—(CP)—A masked, armed robber quarietie today held up an assistant cashier of the Union State Bank and fled with $46,000 worth of cash and negotiable securities. They were believed by Melvin Pusch, chief of the Minnesota Crime Bureau, to be the same band who robbed a railway express agency in St. Paul Saturday.

The loot included between $11,000 and $12,000 in cash and $33,000 in securities most of them negotiable. The raiders left the bank last night and overpowered two employees when they reported for work this morning.

GUEST CELEBRATES 90TH BIRTHDAY

An interesting visitor in Corbyville is Mr. Jesse Lee of Yarker who celebrats his ninetieth birthday next Friday but who is as active and youthful in appearance as many in middle age. Mr. Lee is a guest of his daughter, Mrs. Herb Prindle.

Mr. Lee took a roundabout way of arriving at Corbyville since travelling is a pastime he enjoys. He was born in New York state. He took the train from Yarker to Tweed, spending some time with his son Mr. Stanley Lee before motoring to Corbyville.

Mr. Lee is very active for his age and is especially fond of walking. He is a great reader and has never had to use glasses.

Annual Duck Shoot Has Healthy Start

A conservative estimate of the number of hunters in the city who hied forth to the nearby marshes at dawn this morning, fully equipped and well armed for ducks was in the neighborhood of seventy five and one hundred. The chilly, rosy streak of dawn in the early sky found the hunters well concealed in their hides and blinds waiting patiently for the low coveys or ducks to make their belated appearance. At sun up the cannonnades of shotguns rang out, and up to a late hour in the morning gun fire could still be heard. According to one well known hunter the marshes in the vicinity of Big Bay were filled with men and guns. Ducks, however, were scarce and shy.

Silver Cups To Be Presented For Races

One of the features of this evening's Kiwanis Karnival will be the presentation of the silver cups to the winners of the punt races who have been awarded the handsome trophies in their regular weekly races during the summer. Four cups in all will be presented to the champions of the four class. A 1st class cup, donated by Judge J. P. Ellis will be presented to Mr. Maurice Callaghan; 2nd class cup donated by the Belleville Conservative Association; 3rd cup, the late Chas. Hanna trophy which has been up for competition for many years, will be presented to Mr. F. Pepper, and the White Rose cup donated by Mr. Hicks, will be given Mr. E. Seller. It is expected that Mr. T. Daly, well known sporting columnist of the Toronto Evening Telegram will make the presentation.

SCHOOL FOR DEAF REOPENS

Superintendent Welcomes Pupils, Forecasts Successful Year

The sixty-fourth session of the Ontario School for the Deaf was opened on the 14th with bright prospects for a successful term. There was a record attendance for the opening day, 96 having been reported by Wednesday night, which number has already been increased to 225, with a score or more yet to come. To the assembled school on Thursday morning, Superintendent Peterby extended a hearty welcome, expressing his pleasure that so many were present, and his anticipation of a pleasant and successful session. The pupils were then dismissed and the onerous work of classification entered upon and on Monday morning the work of the session will be in full progress in every department.

Staff Changes

Six members of last year's staff have not returned. Mr. Arthur Glaze, who has been granted a year's leave of absence to attend his second year at Normal, Mrs. Blanchard, Mrs. Glenn and Misses Percy, Ketchenson and Hales. The vacancies have been filled as follows: Miss A. Brown of Point Anne, Miss Myrtle Reid of Thurlow, Miss Loella Burnside of Iroquois Public School, Mr. Arthur Styles, transferred from the Hamilton Technical Institute School, who will carry on manual training work, Mr. Mildred Hancock from Prince Edward County, who will be Mrs. Glenn's successor at Assistant Teacher of Household Science, and Miss Evelyn Reddick of Belleville, who will be assistant Director of Music. All of these have had several years' successful experience in educational work and possess all of the required qualifications.

Staffs Addressed

On Thursday afternoon, Mr. Peterby addressed the members of the staff of the School, calling attention to several matters of special importance to the successful work of the school. He thanked each and all for the good work they had been doing and for their loyal cooperation in the past, and expressed his ardent hope that this would continue as surpass all previous ones in the results achieved.

Dr. Tennent, the School Physician, also spoke briefly, indicating ways in which he hoped he might have the continued and increased cooperation of every member of the staff in conserving the good health of the pupils.

MRS. JOHN M. ARMSTRONG

Following a short illness, Mrs. Margaret Jane Armstrong, beloved wife of John M. Armstrong, passed away, Wednesday last, at her late residence, No. 62, concession of Sidney.

The deceased was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Mackey. She was born in Bancroft 36 years ago. She had resided there till 13 years ago when she came to Sidney to make her home. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church at Ashley Frankford, and highly thought of throughout the municipality of Sidney.

Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved husband and family which includes, besides wife and mother, and for the sisters and brothers left to mourn her loss.

Surviving are the husband and eight children at home, Helen, 12 years; Beatrice, 11; Allen, 9; Ruth, 6; Robert, 5; Hubert 3 and Audrey 2 years of age, and a baby 10 days old; two brothers, Thomas and Francis in Detroit, Mich.; John of Montreal, and James of Wyevale, and three sisters, Mrs. Alexander Munro at Bancroft; Mrs. J. Shannon at Ashley Falls and Mrs. A. Takey of Detroit, Mich.

The funeral to take place Saturday morning from her late residence to the Church of St. Francis d'Assisi, Frankford, for Mass at 9.30 o'clock.

LATE MRS. F. DRUMM

The funeral of the late Mrs. Patrick Drumm was held this morning from the family home to St. Michael's Church where a large number of friends were present to pay their last respects to the memory of the deceased. Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., paid an eloquent tribute to the celebrated Requiem Mass and also officiated at the graveside. The pall bearers were Messrs. Harry Morris, Patrick Hayes, William Smith, Allan Schryver, Jos. Legault and Frank Corrigan.

LATE MRS. WILLIAM HUCK

Many friends and neighbours were Thursday morning in attendance at the funeral of the late Mrs. Florence Buck, which took place from her late residence, Point Anne to St. Michael's Church. The mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock by the Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson V.G. who also officiated at the graveside in St. James' Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. T. Bowler, S. Bowler, Osbaughnessy, G. Winters, G. MacDonald, G. McConnell and R. Gilmour.

F. H. NEWMAN ENTERTAINED

Commerce Directors Hear Reports From Their Representative

Ex-Mayor Fred H. Newman, of Picton, past president of the Ontario Associate Boards of Trade and Chamber of Commerce, was the honored guest of the officers and directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, at their regular weekly luncheon Thursday noon, in the board room of that organization.

Mr. Newman returned to Canada the first fortnight in August after attending the 13th. Triennial Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire which convened in the Guildhall, London, England, July 3rd. last. The last assembly of the Empire's outstanding business men, Mr. Newman was a delegate representing the local Chamber of Commerce and carried with him the presentations and resolutions formulated by that body and drafted by Col. W. H. Ponton, K.C. Three days' luncheon provided the Belleville representative an opportunity to make many of the points contained at the sessions of the Congress.

President W. A. Parker conveyed the thanks of the directors and members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce to Mr. Newman for so ably representing them in London and thanked Mr. Ponton for preparing so ably to introduce the speaker.

Col. Ponton, himself had attended like Congresses in London, as delegate from the local Chamber and after paying high tribute to the ex-Mayor or Picton he reminiscently told of those in which he and Mr. Newman had taken part. He also spoke of the activities at those Congresses which concerned the unity of the Empire in loyalty as well as commercially. It was a pleasure for him to introduce Mr. Newman and he was appreciative of the directors' invitation to address them so soon.

Several days after Mr. Newman's return to Picton he was interviewed by a representative of this paper an interview, regarding his trip to the United Kingdom and that intangible asset of the Empire Congress. Report of the latter was published in issues of the Ontario Intelligencer of Aug. 22nd. Mr. Newman's report to the Belleville Chamber of Commerce he has already been noted in these columns of The Intelligencer.

Following acknowledgment of Col. Ponton's complimentary remarks relative to himself and thanking the directors for naming him as their representative to the 13th. Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire, Mr. Newman stated that it was a long time between years and that the conference, just passed, had been postponed two years on account of the visit in New Zealand, but world conditions and the holding of the World Economic Conference in London last summer had led the "arrangements committee" to change the venue of the assembly to the capital of the Empire. Members met in the 1933 at a time of unrest and gravity in the history of the Empire, trade was one-third of what it was a few years ago with consequent lack of employment throughout the unit countries comprising the British Commonwealth of Nations, as well as throughout the countries of the world.

Three years ago when the Congress convened, England was a free trade country, since then it had been forced to raise certain tariff barriers to protect her higher priced employees and labor against the inroads of manufactured goods from countries with low priced labor and depreciated currencies. Three years ago was the chief of such countries from which such imports originated. It was now Japan that contended most with British manufacturers, not alone in the home market but in the markets of the world.

Much of the time of the Congress was devoted to the monetary problems of the Empire, and a most elaborate endeavor was made to find the solution for the stabilization and stabilization of the currencies of the units of the countries comprising the Commonwealth.

The cheap labor and depreciated currencies of foreign countries and the subsequent effect on internal trade was the chief theme taken up by the business men of the Empire, and unanimous regarding the deliberations and findings of the Congress were duly drafted. To have countries agree to a certain standardization of their currencies and then to ensure that the gold contents agreed upon, was the solution arrived at.

Mr. Newman in his report gave the expressions of several Empire statesmen regarding the Congress and the various matters that had come before it and in concluding said: "I have been pleased to have acted as your representative and to have brought my report to you today. After meeting men from throughout the Empire and having talked with outstanding men from other countries in my travels and over conditions in the United Kingdom, which are better than they were when I visited it three years ago, I am convinced that Canada is at present in a better position than any other country in the world and that Canada has a greater future than any other. R. B. Bennett was the biggest man at the World's Economic Conference and it would not be fair if I did not so report to you," said Mr. Newman.

Mr. E. V. Hiller, past president of the local Chamber of Commerce, eloquently conveyed the thanks of the Chamber to Mr. Newman for so ably representing it at the Congress and for the report of his mission which he had so concisely put before the directors.

Schoolmaster Recalls Old Days in Old Style Schoolhouses, His Views on Modern Education

Reporter Questions Mr. M. W. Mott On Long Career As Teacher

HIS COMMENTS

School bells are ringing again this week, and thousands of Belleville children, refreshed and browned from their summer holidays are trooping back to their desks, but for the first time in nearly forty-three years, Mr. M. W. Mott, 174 Charles street, this city, former principal of Queen Alexandra School, will be missing from the master's desk, he has occupied so long.

It is well earned rest that Mr. Mott is enjoying during these latter years of his life. Almost forty-three years of principalship of various school in this section, from the first ungraded school in Potter Settlement School in 1888 to the modern well equipped Queen Alexandra School over which he presided for the last twenty-one years is a record which should bring a glow of success to anyone who has accomplished it. A reporter of the Daily Ontario commented on this as he sought an interview at the home of Mr. Mott today.

"But people are not interested in me now: I'm sort of a back number since the retirement this fall," was Mr. Mott's polite refusal. "Besides," he added, "there's nothing much I can say." Insistence finally won out. Good-naturedly, Mr. Mott waved to a chair in the cosy study.

"What is it you want to know about first?" he questioning asked.

His First School

"Your early days. The struggles of teaching school back in the 80's. All the things connected with the school days of long ago when the majority of scholars were bigger than the teacher, and when teacher had to be only that, but woodcutter, janitor and janit-of-all-work combined," requested the reporter.

"Hardly as bad as that," smiled Mr. Mott. "I'll admit, we did have to get there a little early on cold mornings and light the fire to have the school room warm, and then could have to shovel a path through the snow to the door now and then, but take it on the whole, it wasn't so bad."

The first school I taught," he continued after some further urging, "was the Potter Settlement School in the 14th Concession of Hungerford, that was very the place called Actinolite now. I started there in 1888 with a district teaching certificate that I had written on in public school No. 6, Elzevir."

They were big, husky scholars attending that first school he ever had, recalled Mr., many of them. There was little trouble with them. Most of them could attend school only when the duties on the farm permitted around the settlement permitted them, and they were really in earnest about getting some book education. The majority of them were book, only when the snow was on the ground.

Salary Not Munificent

The pay for a school teacher in a school like that was not munificent by any means. During the year and one-half that Mr. Mott boarded there in the Potter Settlement, like other school teachers in other districts, he managed to eke out just a bare existence. But he had other plans ahead. So he quit that job and prepared himself for a third class certificate. This one enabled him to take over No. 16 Thurlow School where another year was spent in much the same surroundings as at Potter Settlement.

Children are much the same no that certificate, is two years at

Teacher at Foxboro

From Ottawa, Mr. Mott, bearing his new certificate, journeyed to Foxboro. Here he took over the Foxboro school, and was made principal, with one other teacher helping him. It was the first graded school he had ever had. Here the scholars were graded according to their ages and intelligence, and work proceeded more smoothly and gratifyingly. It was a relief from the incessant strain of attempting to teach a whole room full of scholars, lessons of different classes in the same day. Under the principalship of Mr. Mott, the Foxboro school gained the reputation of being one of the best in the district. For eight years and six months, he held this position, graduating old scholars into the world of business, receiving new ones and starting them off on their first A.B.C.'s, making friends with their parents, and enjoying the contentment of the people of the little village, but then again came a change.

A principal was needed for the old Girler Street School in Belleville and the application of Mr. Mott was accepted. In 1909 he took charge of this important school and settled down again to making new friends in the city. Six years were spent in this large brick school. Many local business men now solid citizens of this city had their first start here under Mr. Mott and his staff of teachers. Even the younger generation can still recall the large structure which now houses an important local industry.

New City School

In the fall of 1913, a larger, more modern, new school, perhaps the finest ever built in the city, to date, was finally finished on the vacant plot of ground facing Ann street. It was named Queen Alexandra School and was the last word in education-al centres. It was all complete, except for teachers and scholars. Accepting the call of the Board of Education, Mr. Mott took over the principalship of this school in the fall of 1913. At that time the school had a total enrollment of three hundred pupils, and seven teachers. In June of 1923 the number had increased to over five hundred and fifty children and thirteen teachers.

Grudgingly, under pressure of questioning, Mr. Mott agreed that with this appointment, he had reached the goal he had set out for as long ago.

For twenty-one years Mr. Mott held guidance over this school. Out of that period, records reveal, only five girls were lost from the desk through illness. Six hundredd and fifteen successful candidates passed their high school entrance from that school during that period, and during all that time only four were recommended candidates by Mr. Mott failed to pass! One class he recalls consisting of sixteen successful entrance students, was probably his "prize class". Out of the sixteen he has followed through their varied business careers two of them turned out to be doctors, two are now dentists, two are lawyers, two are druggists and two are all present teaching school. Such a consistent record made while principal should be rewarded by successive Boards of Education even without saying; on his retirement last spring, Mr. Mott was presented with many sincere expressions of regret and tributes paid by the grateful present Board of Education, and also enriched by a substantial gift. The staff of the school also showed their regret at his retirement by marking expressions of appreciation and the presentation of many beautiful presents.

BETTY WINKLER

Pretty Betty Winkler is glad she was not present in the school room the day she had her first radio audition. The cold gave her voice a nasal twang, just the tone the role for which she was competing required, and now she's a regular of the other wave entertainers.

Loyalty of Staff

"But, whatever success I may have had during my term of principal, stated Mr. Mott, "it has been due solely to the untiring efforts and efficiency of the staff of Queen Alexandra School.

There have been no outstanding events in the life of the local school teacher and principal, he stated, but the daily life has flowed smoothly and evenly for him, for the most part, for years. There isn't very much advice he can offer to the retiring generation, except concentrate and study hard while you're to be, and then work toward that goal. Teaching is a splendid field to be a school teacher. "I wanted to teach some other profession," he stated, "and I studied along it school with that view in end. But I've no regrets. I'm satisfied with that direction, so I concentrated. Perhaps it was for the best.

Too Many Subjects

School curriculum these days is too diversified, intimated Mr. Mott. Perhaps that's why children do not have the thoroughness of study they had in the old days. There are too many subjects," he added hastily, "but I don't want to appear as if I were criticizing present day methods."

Was the method of teaching school changed much in the past decade? No—not greatly. In the old days there were simpler subjects, and scholars were perhaps taught to concentrate to a greater extent upon them. Children these days may appear to be smarter than they were in the old days, but it is merely the result of a greater interest in certain things. They learned just as readily as the good medal scholars of the present day."

During his lengthy reign as principal, Mr. Mott has had fifty-five teachers with him. Of the four school inspectors under whom he worked only Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., remains in the service for South Hastings alone remains. The rest have gone the last John Johnston; the late Wm. McIntosh, Inspector for North Hastings; and the late J. C. Morgan.

One of Mr. Mott's prized possessions is a personal chart of the years by entrance classes, with names of boys and girls in each class, from those who fail. And it has already been pointed out just how small the latter percentage has been.

To BELLEVILLE motorists we say

thank you

These last few years have been hard ones for all of us . . . as hard for industry as for individuals.

Industry has been tempted to offer sub-grade merchandise simply to get the dollar price down.

Individuals have been tempted to buy that merchandise, often knowing that it did not represent full value, simply to save a few cents.

Here at British-American Oil our problem has been no easier than any other. So we feel it pardonable if we take pride in the fact that through this whole period there has been no compromise with our long established standards. On the contrary, the quality of Nevr-Nox Gasolene and Autolene Oil has been constantly improved.

Belleville has confirmed our judgment. The motorists of Belleville have consistently recognized the true economy of B.A. quality fuels and lubricants. Through all these trying months the British-American service stations in Belleville have served more cars, have served them oftener than ever before!

So we say sincerely, THANK YOU!

President

If you are one of the minority who have not discovered the balanced performance and the sound economy which British-American fuels and lubricants give, make the trial some day soon. You will find a station conveniently near you, offering friendly, efficient service.

SHE LOOKED FAT—AND FELT IT

Now Getting the Pounds Off

Takes Hot Water, Lemon Juice—and Kruschen Salts

A few surplus pounds of fat can make a lot of difference. A woman who has taken 11 lbs. off her 128 lbs. says she "feels so fine and happy." She writes: "Two years ago I suffered with pains in my arms and shoulders, so I decided to try Kruschen Salts, seeing in the papers what it had done for others. Although I only weighed 128 lbs., I felt fat and flabby. I felt ill, too, after taking a spoonful of that wonderful Kruschen every morning, in hot water and lemon juice, I went down to 128 lbs., and I must say I feel a lot better for it. I have no signs of any pain whatever. I am not quite sure, but I think this is my sixth jar. I feel so fine and happy that I had to write and let you know what Kruschen Salts have done for me. I have a friend here that has started taking it, and she has reduced from 155 lbs., to 122 lbs."—(Mrs. E. H. Start taking Kruschen Salts—that's the common-sense way to reduce—but don't take them with the idea that they possess reducing qualities in themselves. This is what they do: they clean out the impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working shape, and fill you with vigor and tireless energy you'd almost forgotten had existed.

And after two weeks your excess flesh is on its way—you'll look—feel fit—see it—the scales will tell the story. Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

ON CASH BASIS

While the depression has crowded many towns of the U. S. to the brink of bankruptcy, Atchison, Kansas (population 15,000) has kept on a cash basis throughout, and in the past twelve years has cut its bonded debt seventy per cent. and its tax rate thirty-five per cent.

The reason, according to Ed. W. Howe, founder of the "Atchison Daily Globe," who writes in the current Notarian Magazine, is simply a determination by Atchison business men that their city be run like a business. This has led to the commission-manager form of government with three business men as commissioners. They appoint a city manager as they would hire a general manager for their own businesses.

"Although it has been said business men will not consent to accept office, and that citizens will not support them," says the veteran newspaperman, "this did not turn out to be true in Atchison. During the twelve years since the commission-manager form was adopted, one commissioner has been elected four times, another died after serving five years, and one resigned after serving ten years. The two appointed to fill the vacancies are still serving. I have continuously been really excellent men.

"The new plan was successful from the start; the commissioners inherited an old bonded indebtedness of $1,260,000, and paid it all off except $180,000."

RELIEF TO HOME OWNERS

Promise of action which will allow in worthy cases relief to home owners will be welcomed by those of that class who have their own homes, but who have through the depression run out of funds after a long period of unemployment.

This relief has a double edge, of course, some one is to have aid and some one has to pay for it. But all in all it does appear that the balance is in favor of making the relief grant to this type of citizen, who has been farsighted enough to lay by money in order to purchase a home. Then it must be remembered that the home is probably not worth as much today if it were put up under the hammer than it cost four or five years or more ago. It would be a hardship if he were forced to sell at a bargain to somebody.

Of course relief of any kind is only an emergency and so any relief system must have flaws but the purpose in which it is administered ought to make up in part for the condition which makes relief necessary.

One thing is certain—such persons on relief have enough to bear without the added difficulty of being forced to sell their property at a loss or being asked to reimburse at some future time for the aid.

To have as large a part of the population able to take care of themselves now or after the depression lifts is what is to be desired; as few dependents as possible is the motto in good times as well as in bad and it would be an unwise thing to have an independent class made dependent.

SKY-WRITING

Zipping hither and yon across the heavens, darts the sky-writer, leaving a smoke-made inscription which too often begins to blur before completed, says Literary Digest. Or he hits a cloud that damages his chirography. All needless, these partial failures; at double the attitude, they would not occur.

So the men who appear to take sky-writing a bit more seriously than we do, are for elevating the art literally—and an aeronautical correspondent of the London Times tells us:

"It is likely that before the end of the season sky-writing with smoke will be done at a height of 20,000 feet. The pilots will have to do their work in electrically-heated suits, and the smoke emitted from the apparatus will probably be kept half frozen on coming into contact with the air. Aircraft having a high service ceiling and a fairly high speed will be used. Although the image will be shown twice as high above the earth as hitherto, and will be visible over a much wider area, it will not be made on a much bigger scale.

"At a height of 20,000 feet, it will be practically out of the area of 'bumps.'

"Night sky-writing will be undertaken by the new search-light projector invented by Maj. J. C. Savage, which is capable of projecting light patterns in various colors 60 the clouds up to a great height.

"The projector has been in constant use in Germany during the last three years and has met with so much success that a small yacht has recently been equipped to take the apparatus along the canals and coasts."

Love and you shall be loved. All love is mathematically just, as much as the two sides of an algebraic equation.—Emerson.

FREEDOM

At last the gift is mine, this freedom desired
As far more dear than any other thing
That restless hearts have ever yet devised
To heal the hurts of life, to soothe its sting
At last!
To be released from nagging care,
From little frets and dreads that vexed my days,
And like a potent amulet to wear
This sense of peace which brightens all earth's ways!

To have escaped the clutches of desire
And fierce ambition's mad, relentless urge,
To feel my kinship when the waves conspire
With winds in freedom where the billows surge!
And strangely, now at last to understand
I forged my fetters with my own rash hand.

BELLEVILLE AND BERMUDA are closely joined in ties of friendship, and the folks down in Bermuda are more familiar with Belleville than they are with New York or Miami—the reason being that so many of the young people of Bermuda have lived in Belleville while securing business education at the Ontario Business College. When they go back they talk about Belleville to their friends and former O.B.C. students and whenever chance offers in after years return to visit their commercial alma mater. Recent visitors from Bermuda include J. S. Vallis, member of the Legislative Council of that little island nation, situated away out in the Atlantic far from the mainland, far from the West Indies, a community unique in many respects and rich in historical legend. Mr. Vallis had his home in Sidney township and visits every summer at the home of his brother-in-law, A. C. Latta, third concession of Sidney township. Mr. and Mrs. Vallis live in Hamilton, capital of Bermuda, where Mr. Vallis carries on a large importing business. Another prominent Bermudian, Sir Harry W. Wellington, was a visitor in Belleville a short time ago. Both gentlemen of Bermuda are O.B.C. graduates.

A BLACK SPANISH (Minorca) HEN which turned white once a year—favorite story of Front Street business man, who says that when he tells it at bridge parties and the like, he gets the Baron Munchausen laugh. However, in a world of doubting Thomases he still sticks to his story which he says is absolutely true that this black hen which was owned by his father, shed its black feathers every year and came out in a brand new dress of white feathers which as time went on gradually changed to black.

WHITE SPARROW is now centre of interest on Charles Street, north of Victoria Avenue, where a lady throws out a supply of crumbs every day for the birds. A flock of sparrows are always on hand waiting for the door to open, and in the flock is a pure white sparrow—more of a freak than the white robin which frequents the same locality but can only claim to be white in spots. Believe it or not, Ripley.

BARNEY GILMORE, who will be remembered by old time theatregoers of these parts as a member of Canada's ten-twent-thirt' "dramer" of 1905, '06 and '07, is now doing character bits in Hollywood for one of the big film companies. Barney was last seen locally the Next Best Thing", starring Janet Gaynor, booked for early showing in Belleville.

A man was fishing some strictly preserved water in Scotland when he caught a fine salmon. As he did not want to display any evidence of his crime, he tied the fish through the gills to a stake on the bank and returned it to the water.

A keeper came along and accused the man of poaching.

"Oh, no," said the angler, disarmingly, "I'm just having a little innocent amusement, practising casts and so on."

The keeper was reassured and was about to walk away when he observed the captured salmon plunging frantically at the end of his leash. "What's this?" he asked.

"Oh—er—well?" replied the angler, "that fellow kept sneaking my flies, so I thought I had better tie him up out of the way."

Briggs was discussing the ups and downs of life with Brown. "My brother never met with a disappointment in his life," he said.

"That seems almost incredible," said Brown, "seeing that he led a pretty full life."

Briggs smiled. "It was easy in his case," he explained. "He never looked for anything but trouble."

HOW TO KEEP CHILD HEALTH AT ITS BEST

Nursery Conditions Are Important In Health

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

As soon as it can be so arranged the baby should have a sleeping room of its own. In fact if again perhaps, the custom of having the baby sleep alone, in a room by itself, should be instituted the first day of its existence.

The conditions maintained in the nursery, as such, are highly important so far as the child's health is concerned. We must not forget that a baby passes fully four-fifths of its time in such a room during the first year. Even during the second and third years it is likely to remain in its own nursery about two thirds of every twenty-four hours.

For proper growth and vitality, sunshine and fresh air are essential. Therefore a nursery with southern exposure is to be preferred. In fact, a sunny room always contains less humidity, while the air likewise is purer and hence freer from organic matters of various kinds that may irritate or cause disease.

It is always ideal when no work such as washing, ironing or cooking is done in the baby's room. An open fire likewise is a blessing. Regarding temperature, 72 degrees Fahrenheit is desirable, but a little lower is always better than a little higher. At night the temperature of the room should not be allowed to fall below 65.

Protect the baby always from draughts. Likewise keep the nursery quiet. The theory that it is best to get a child used to noises, such as the radio as early as possible is erroneous, for it overlooks the fact that noise irritates the infant's delicate nervous system, even if the child is not awakened by it.

A metal bed for the baby is better than a wooden one because it is more easily kept clean. Those where one side lets down are a great convenience. A hair mattress should cover the wire springs, and over this there should be a rubber sheet; then a draw sheet and lastly a plain sheet.

Infants do not require pillows, and care must be taken not to have too many blankets; nor should the child be tucked in so tightly that the normal muscular movements are interfered with.

Be careful also that the baby is well dried and powdered after his daily bath. The room in which the bath is given should also be warm, but not hot. Always allow the child to kick and play in the bath a few minutes; it is good exercise.

Speaking of exercise brings to mind the fact that crying is a form of exercise; namely, exercise for the lungs. Babies actually should cry now and then. With a little observation a mother soon learns whether the cry of her infant means illness, temper, discomfort or whatnot.

By taking the child out-of-doors, which should be done twice a day and for as long as possible, keep it in the sun but do not let the sun shine directly into the eyes.

Rocking the baby and taking it up too often are both bad practices.

The average mother, especially when the baby is her first, is likely to be over-solicitous rather than the least bit careless. Fretting over the child does neither child nor mother any good, and often it leads to nervousness in both.

Where the welfare of her infant is concerned let every mother try always to get the proper perspective and to be as scientific as possible.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Ten rules for eating: Eat at regular hours; eat slowly; do not read or talk excitedly while eating; chew the food well; eat a variety of food; eat what appeals to the appetite, but guard against excesses; never leave the table feeling "stuffed"; cut down water intake during a meal to the minimum; start the meal with some sort of appetizer when not hungry; rest after each meal.

LOOKING BACKWARD
GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

SEPTEMBER 15, 1913

Burglars were busy in the city last night. An entrance was forced into Smith's Hardware Store, and an attempt made to enter ex-Mayor Allan McPee's Jewellery Store, but in this of Morrison, was unsuccessful. In Smith's Hardware store $5.00 from the till and a number of expensive pocket knives, safety razors and other articles were taken. Shortly before one o'clock this morning a citizen saw a man in the Smith's store, but as the lights were, on he thought it was someone connected with the establishment. The police are working on the case and hope to capture the guilty person or persons shortly.

Mrs. George H. Brokee, who is probably the oldest resident of the city, is seriously ill at her home.

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Bills are visiting friends in Ottawa.

Mr. Harry Lake has returned home from Kingston where he has been living for some time.

Thomas Hodgson, better known as "Copper" is again in the city after a successful season in professional baseball.

Rev. C. S. Bland, M.A., of Orillawa, who is well known to many in this city, has accepted a professorship in the Manitoba Methodist College and will leave at the end of this month for the Prairie Province.

Mrs. D. N. DeMill is spending a few days in the city with old friends.

Mrs. C. R. Hamm, who has been visiting at the home of Mr. Adam Henry, Church Street, left today for her home in Philadelphia.

Mr. Howard Bazson has returned to New York after visiting his aunt, Mrs. Wilkins, in this city.

40 YEARS AGO

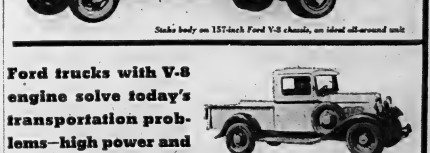
Mr. R. J. Bell has a little dog which he considers very valuable in view of the fact that he was offered $100 for it last night. The dog is a silver colored terrier and is one of the "cumningest" little dogs in the city.

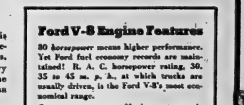
Men are now engaged in putting up the telephone line between Napanee and Deseronto.



A free fair for the barter and sale of household knick-knacks and produce generally will be held in the village of Plinton, in the township of Sidney, on October 17th.

The track is laid several miles beyond Bannockburn on the Central Ontario Railway.

MORE IMPORTANT THAN BEER.



Hamilton, Sept. 15—With thousands of citizens destitute, problems more important than the sale of beer should be solved by those in authority, Capt. Elmore Philpott declared last night when he presided at a meeting in the Alexandra Academy sponsored by the C.C.F. clubs of Hamilton.

FORD V-8 TRUCKS
meet today's new needs

Stake body on 157-inch Ford V-8 chassis, an ideal all-around unit

Ford trucks with V-8 engine solve today's transportation problems—high power and speed combined with low running costs

Ford V-8 commercial car with light delivery body

THE 80-horsepower Ford V-8 truck is being chosen by Canadian business because it meets perfectly today's conditions.

Some firms have had to abandon heavy trucks, and use lighter ones for the same tasks. Ford power, strength and stamina make this change a real economy.

In other cases, hand-to-mouth buying has increased the number of trips per day, while lowering the weight of the average load. Ford V-8 speed meets this condition perfectly, making possible more trips per day.

Again, some fleets have been cut in size, and each truck must carry more. For such extra burdens the extra power, strength, endurance and long life of the Ford V-8 truck are essential. If economical operation is to be obtained.

Never before have the unique advantages of the V-8 engine been available to all truck owners. Modern Ford design, engineering and manufacture bring you the Ford V-8 truck at typically low first cost, and with all the economy in operation you have always associated with the name Ford.

Thus Ford trucks and commercial cars have changed with the times, meeting new conditions with the new economy, power, speed, durability and reliability of the Ford V-8 engine. See your dealer.

Ford Engine Features

80 horsepower means higher performance. Yet Ford fuel economy records are maintained! R. A. C. horsepower rating, 30. 35 to 40 m. p. h. while trucks are usually driven, is the Ford V-8's most economical range.

Great reserve power. Maximum torque is 149 foot pounds at 1000 r.p.m., but torque is over 140 foot pounds between 750 and 2200 r.p.m., giving ability to pull steadily under varied conditions and maintain speed under full load.

Aluminum cylinder heads. Provide increased power and smoothness and save fuel.

One-piece cylinder blocks and crankcase. For rigidity and long life.

Oversize 65-pound crankshaft. Bearing area 3615 square inches.

Exhaust valve seat inserts. Double mileage between valve grindings.

Aluminum alloy open-skirt pistons.

Diaphragm fuel pump.

Downdraft carburetor.

Automatic spark control.

Big four-wheel brakes. Total area 465½ square inches. Entirely enclosed.

High tension shielded ignition.

Low parts prices and low flat-rate labor charges.

EXPERT LOOKS OVER ZWICK'S

Noted Landscape Artist Here To Offer Suggestions

H. J. Moore, one of the most prominent and best known landscape artists and lecturers on the continent, whose work in connection with the proposed International Peace Garden on the border of Manitoba and North Dakota has further distinguished him, arrived in this city at noon today from Islington and on the invitation of the local Kiwanis Club will spend some time during the afternoon on Zwick's Island where a survey will be made and advice given on the proposed work on the island.

During his brief stay in Belleville Mr. Moore will be the guest of the Rev. Harold Reid, Dundas Street.

Later in the afternoon Mr. Moore left for the Island in company with Mayor Tice and members of the city council, Parks Commission and representatives of the Kiwanis Club.

In presenting the invitation to come to Belleville the Kiwanis Club did so with the idea of receiving advice on the proposed work on the island and of laying plans for the future. This is in line with their creed of civic service, and is done so merely to assist the city in obtaining expert advice on the matter before any actual steps are taken regarding the work.

Mr. Moore, a stranger to Belleville, having visited this city on previous occasions when lectures were delivered by him to the local Horticultural Society. As well as a landscape artist of note, Mr. Moore is an expert horticulturist, and was for twenty years in the service of the Ontario Government of the Provincial government.

REV. J. BECKEL IS SPECIAL PREACHER

Melrose, Sept. 15—The anniversary services in the Melrose United Church on Sunday were largely attended. Rev. J. Beckel, Napanee took charge of the services and delivered inspiring sermons. The evening meetings at the morning and evening services. The choir rendered very efficiently appropriate anthems and Mr. Mallory Hubbard gave a solo at the evening service.

The church was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and plants for the occasion which added greatly to the impressiveness. Flowers have been done recently to the interior of the church.

The Salem and Melrose W.C.T.U. held their September meeting at the home of Mrs. E. Badgley on Monday evening with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. G. Badgley, Salem, presided during the meeting. Mrs. J. C. Millgate and Mrs. C. Bates gave readings. Mrs. G. Bates favored with a piano solo and Mrs. E. Badgley told the story of William Hall, Toronto.

The hostess served a dainty lunch at the close of the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hill, Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Simpkins.

Mrs W. Townsend and Mrs. W. Gallabury, Belleville were Tuesday guests of Mrs. J. D. English.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Bennett and the Misses Lillian and Mae Wesse attended Peterboro Fair on Wednesday.

Mrs. E. Pasco has returned home from a visit with relatives at Toronto.

The Misses Elaine Anderson and Evelyn Badgley have commenced their studies at the Belleville Collegiate for the fall term.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Badgley entertained Rev. J. Beckel and sons Boyd and Cayman, Napanee, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Sherman, Belleville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Lazier.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Badgley and Miss I. Murphy, Salem were Sunday guests of the Misses McLaren.

A large number from here attended the shower of Miss Helen Prentice on Tuesday night.

W.C.T.U. Holds Parlor Meeting

A parlor meeting under the auspices of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, was held at the home of Mrs. Scantlebury on Highland Ave., on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. H. Pearsall, superintendent of parlor meetings, presided. The hymn "Stand up, Stand up for Jesus", was sung to the tune service followed by Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn leading in prayer. Mrs. Georgo one of the Field Workers of the W.C.T.U. was expected to be present and address the meeting, but sudden call made it impossible for her to be present. Mrs. Baker spoke on the work of her department—Scientific temperance. Mrs. Baker expressed the belief that we have come to the place where our greatest weapon is that of education, especially along the lines of what science has revealed concerning the nature of alcohol and its effect on the human system. She was splendidly illustrated for us the overwhelming power of an active and insistent propaganda. So subtle and insidious has been this propaganda, that it has effected a change in the attitude of many people toward the liquor traffic. Temperance forces have been handicapped through lack of funds, to carry out any adequate educational campaign as an effect.

The use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage has had a long and tragic record. Long before the Christian era it had become the curse of many nations. It had only to read the Hebrew prophets to discover what ravages it had made on the people of that day and also in those days only fermented liquors were in common use. It was until centuries later that distilled liquors were known and used. Many attempts have been made to control and curtail the use of the drink evil, but in the memory of the writer every such effort has met with much opposition from the liquor interests. Doubtless the shorter hours of safe labor will lessen the evil of drinking there in recent years.

The World War brought the nations face to face with the ravages that drink had made on the manhood of the world, leading to drastic prohibitions of its use. Doctors and scientists made a study of alcohol, the intoxicating element in all liquors, with the result that we now know it to be a racial poison instead of being a food it has been proved to be a narcotic poison, drug, instead of a stimulant it is a depressant. Thus was when it was thought to be an aid to digestion, we now know that it hinders digestion. However its greatest harm is to the brain which is the first centre to be affected and as a result the brain does not respond when we feed alcohol and so loses his centre of control, in these days of high mechanism, this becomes a very serious matter.

It would seem our duty as all right-thinking people to spread as far as possible the facts about alcohol that science has disclosed to us and at the same time carry on a campaign for education and insistence from all forms of alcoholic beverages.

Miss Forman gave a very inspiring solo, "Have Faith in God".

Mrs. Farnsworth led a round-table conference on the outlook of temperance work, our needs and our encouraging features.

Mrs. Pearsall expressed the thanks of the meeting to Mrs. Scantlebury for the use of her spacious home and to the one who had contributed to the program. Was served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfist and me said to pop, Have you any ideers about supper, Willyum?

Yes, I liver and onions, pop said, and his said, No seriously, Willyum, I mean, no kidding.

I wasn't joking, pop said, and me said, But Willyum Shakespeare sakes we've had liver and onions twice this week already and there's such a thing as a limit and when it's already be passed why try to pass it again.

O well, perhaps I was joking, pop said, and me said, What would you say to this menu, Willyum? Porterhouse stake smothered with onions, mackerony baked with cheese, fresh pears, hats of lettuce with Russian dressing, and strawberry shortcake, ala mode.

Yee gods am I dreeming, I feel like a protrest reviewing a parade of his favorite foods, pop said and me said, Yes, isn't that strange that's what I thort when I saw the menu.

You see it? pop said, and me said, Why yes, when I was downstairs yesterday, Mandy Hews and I had tea on the roof of the Ding Hotel, and it seems they have a very clever new ideer there. They post up the dinner menu for the entire week and that's menu for today is what I just told you.

Yes pop said, Mandy's favorite place to eat being home, and me said: So if you want to take advantage of it I would recommend you downtown this evening.

It's a wonderful world, you win, pop said.

Meaning all rite.

KLONDIKE KATE TELLS OF OLD DAYS AT DAWSON

Los Angeles, Sept. 15 (AP)—Dettling a cigarette, her eyes misty with memories of gold rush days in Alaska, Klondike Kate told how she had $750 in Dawson one night "as easy as falling off a log."

But first Kate, now Mrs. Kate Rockwell Matson, here for the International Sourdough Reunion, rose in defense of the Alaskan girls, of whom she was hailed as "queen."

"I want to state," said she, "that a more decent set of girls never existed than those of us who gambled or sold merrily in the dawson dance halls. We asked for and demanded respect and we made it pay.

"About that $750—all I had to do was to play with a gentleman who was buying wine. He bought $1,500 worth and I got a 50 per cent commission.

Kate is married to John Matson, gold miner who "stayed in" and they live at Matson's Creek, 100 miles north of Dawson.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Daily Use of Bicarated Magnesia Overcomes Condition Caused by Acid Indigestion

Gas in the stomach accompanied by a bad breath and other gassy ailments is almost certain evidence of too much acidity in the digestive stomach juices, causing so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomach juices irritate and too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leads to gastritis, accompanied by more serious ailments. Bicarated Magnesia is very soothing. The distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

Bicarated Magnesia is a powder which when mixed with water forms such a perfect carbonated digestive alkalizer which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get a little Bicarated Magnesia from any druggist and take a teaspoonful in a glass of water right after eating. This will drive out the gas, wind and bloat, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation. Bicarated Magnesia is sold in both powder and tablet form—never in liquid or pill! Is harmless, inexpensive, and is the remedy for acid stomach. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no fear of indigestion.

RUNAWAY RABBIT SHOWS TREASURE

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 15—A rabbit was given credit for the start of a buying "orgy" that swept Puyallup, Wash., and Tacoma until it was finally traced to the discovery of $6,000 by four boys who set out to spend the money.

The money, hidden under a house was found in a gunnysack by one of the lads when the rabbit escaped and vanished under the building.

The quartet's joy was rudely shattered, when police investigated and began the difficult task of restoring the money to its owners. Owners of the house, Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Nelson, were away at the time.

The four youths were at home after a grilling at the police station. Puyallup police had recovered more than $4,000 of the "loot" and were seeking the remaining $2,000.

Holloway St. W.M.S. Meeting

The first autumn meeting of the Holloway Street Missionary Society was held in the Sunday School room, on Tuesday, Sept. 12th. Mrs. Denton, the president, presided. The meeting opened with hymn 88, followed by a dedicatory service, conducted by Mrs. Denton, who also requested that all supplies for the missionary box be taken to Mrs. L. Hall, Coleman street, before the fifteenth of the month.

Reports of all the departments of the work were presented by the various secretaries and were encouraging. Mrs. (Rev.) Neal, leader of Group Seven, took charge of the program, and introduced the visitors and members. Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Blackburn. Devotional talk by Miss Sweetman, taken from the fourth chapter of St. John's Gospel. Trumpet solo, Mrs. Leavens. A talk on peace was given by Mrs. Mason, Bible by Mrs. Hagerman, Mrs. (Dr.) Bishop addressed the meeting in her usual capable manner, her topic being, Human Resources. Miss Sweetman moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Bishop. Hymn 327 was sung. Mrs. Neal closed with prayer.

A social half hour followed. Refreshments being served by members of Group Seven.

Mrs. Mollison Will Reach Toronto Today

Toronto, Sept. 15—Word was received in Toronto yesterday that Amy Mollison would arrived at the Barker airport by seven late in the afternoon. While preparations were under way to greet her, a wire arrived stating that the intended flight had to be abandoned owing to weather conditions. She was not expected to make the journey from New York by train and reach the city today. Captain Mollison landed at Quebec yesterday, bringing with him a new plane to replace the Seafarer, which crashed at Bridgeport this summer. Upon their arrival in the Capital the Mollisons and his wife will speed up their plane to attempt another record world non-stop flight, with Wasaga Beach as the take-off point.

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

On Tuesday evening, September 5th, the Tyendinaga East W. I. held a corn roast at the home of Mr. Robert McFarlane, 3 miles west of Marysville. The evening being a most ideal one, was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present. A huge fire was lit at one side of the lawn, seats being placed around and as the fire burned to coals everyone was given long sticks with which they roasted the corn, sandwiches and cake were then passed. And all enjoyed lunch very much. In the house tables were placed and some enjoyed a game of cards. The programme consisted of a song, "Trolling on the Old Camp Ground"; a reading by Miss Helen Doxtator; a duet by Mrs. H. McMath and Mrs. R. Tucker; music by Thelma and Ralph Melhourne; a reading, Mrs. R. Withers. Mr. S. Syench acted as chairman and brought a very pleasant evening to a close by the singing of the national anthem, and a very hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. and Mrs. McFarlane for the use of their home and lawn.

AIKINS W. M. S.

Aikins W.M.S. met for September at the home of Mrs. S. Westover with an attendance of twenty members. Mrs. Grills presided over the meeting. The programme was prepared by Mrs. E. Hubble and Mrs. S. Weslover. Opening hymn, "Far and near the fields are teeming," and prayer by three members; The Scripture lesson, John 15-31. "There are lonely hearts to cherish" was sung and watch given by three heralds on West Chains; Temperance and Korea. Mrs. A. M. Lawrence and Mrs. A. Wright favored with a beautiful duet.

Mrs. B. Hogle and Mrs. W. Hamilton led in a questionaire on systematic giving. Roll call was answered by a favorite Bible verse. A number of articles were brought in for the supply work which is in charge of Mrs. A. Page.

Mrs. Wm. Bush gave a reading, "Mother Finds a Way". Mrs. S. Spafford gave a reading on Temperance, "How to tell the story" was sung and the meeting closed by all repeating the whichword. The hostess served lunch and a social half hour was enjoyed.

CENTRE AND VICTORIA W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of Centre and Victoria W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. L. R. Brickman, on September 8th, with the president, Mrs. F. Townend, in charge of the business, after which Miss Audra Brickman, leader of Group 3, conducted the meeting. The meeting opened by singing "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life" followed by prayer by Mrs. Mullin. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted and arrangements were made to have a booth at the school fair. Mrs. R. L. Brethen gave the Scripture reading, the 15th chapter of John which was followed by The Devotional Leaflet, "The Woman of Quiet," given by Dorothy Gilles. Mrs. Mullin gave a very instructive temperance reading. Hymn, "Sky, How Great a Plane Aspires" was sung after which Ruth Townsend gave a reading, "Introducing Mrs. Shimado." Mrs. Mullin and Miss Livingstone rendered a very delightful vocal duet. The roll call was taken; there were 16 members and 3 visitors present. Mrs. Earl Poe gave the chapter of the Study Book in a very interesting manner. The meeting closed by singing "O For a Closer Walk With God" and prayer by Mrs. L. R. Brickman. A delicious lunch of fruit and candy was served by the members of Group 3.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)
(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CORRECT USE OF GLOVES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Your daily small point of etiquette is delightful, It is so much more to the point than those weighty volumes displayed in book shops and in libraries; the questions asked are so "every-dayish".

1. Will you please tell me what the note paper it is correct to use when applying for a position? Is it proper to use this type, or should the large business paper be used?

2. When one attends a banquet in a hotel, does one remove completely one's long evening gloves, or simply roll the hand partly inside? If one takes them off, does one put them on again for the dancing?

3. At a tea dance, does one don one's gloves again after tea has been served?

Student

Aren't you a friendly person to say such delightfully appreciative things about my column! It is one of the finest tributes I have ever had, for what I have always wanted my column to be is "every-dayish". Grand word, that.

1. The paper on which you wrote to me seems more note-paper than letter-paper, and it would seem vastly more appropriate to use a letter-paper also when writing to apply for a position. It isn't necessary to use the large size associated with typewriting, but a generous size would be just the thing.

2. Before the dinner remove your gloves, but after you have taken your place at the table. To roll back the glove at the wrist inevitably looks awkward. If you wish, put your gloves back on after the dinner, but don't wear them all evening if they are uncomfortable during the dancing.

3. No.

NEED NOT CONSULT ESCORT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been going with a young man for a year and a half and very often we go out with another couple making it a foursome. When the other gentleman of the other party asks me to dance, what should be said by the young man I am with, if anything?

T.

With a foursome of this kind it would not be necessary for the other gentleman to ask the permission of your escort to dance with you.

MARRYING A WIDOWER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine is going to marry a widower with one child. Is it proper for her to wear a white dress and a veil? Wouldn't it be better if she wore a light-colored dress with a hat? Also, what color would you suggest?

W.

If this is the first marriage of your friend, there is no reason why she should not wear the traditional white dress and wedding veil of a bride. I take it from your letter that you think she should adapt her costume to the fact that the bridegroom has been married before. This is not necessary. Let her have all the joy of wearing the traditional bridal costume, if she wishes. Of course, if she prefers to wear a dress of some becoming light shade, that would be correct, too.

CORRECT STATIONERY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me if it is proper for a girl to have her name and address, on writing paper?

A. T.

Letter paper with her name and address printed or engraved on it is correct for a girl to use for business or professional letters, but for social letters her paper should be monogrammed with her street address only, her monogram on the left and her street-address on the right.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners (submitted by readers.)

Beauty .... By Helen Jameson

Lost: The Spring time Complexion

ion jogs along pretty com

From Autumn until Spring the complexion jogs along pretty comfortably. Except for cold winds that rumple up its velvety surface, it doesn't have much to contend with and when the lilacs bloom, it is whiter than at any other season. The springtime complexion sounds pretty and is.

Then Mister Al Fresco beckons and the gals heed the call. Every year there are more and more outdoor activities. Here mermaids clowing through the waves, more members of the fluffy sex trailing over golf greens and smashing tennis balls, more young mamas mahing it a habit to loll out twice a day with the sunpeen. No hats on any of them. Hair flying. Spirits soaring. Yes.

And what about complexions? Some of them, right now, look as if they were veterans of a 100-year war. Poor orphans they are that didn't get any cream to eat when the sun started to roast them. The girls were warned in plenty of time. There have been other autumns when they beheld the mottled plaids, all-variegated and dappled. They found out they couldn't change the spots in a jiffy. But they didn't stay mublin'.

Next year they'll remember—like fun they will. When middle age grabs them by the cowlick they'll have skins like old mummies. That forecast ought to scare them.

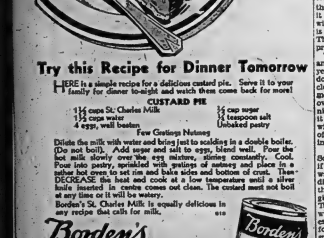
Nobody bowls down tan. Tan is all right, makes a girl look roosist and full of ginger. Many a beauty's sapbrain will keep here for a long time, boosting it with the rays of a sun dandy. But the time comes when tan sickens and dies.

It doesn't die decently all over, just expires in patches. And unless early tan is directed and checked, it doesn't spread on evenly. Observe outdoor fans whose faces are tanned and whose necks and chests are barely fitry red. Such a beauty mess as that is!



And observe too the white haired sisters who have browned. What they need is the delicate, transparent complexion. The wrinkled face looks particularly weathered and toughened when it has been toasted. We do think the not-so-young darlings should step out of the tanner's parade. Next spring let them stick to good old fashioned ideas and their brimmed hats, carry sunshades duck sunbaths.

At any rate, whether to hang to tan or to chuck it, we see clearly the need of beauty culture for the tanning portrait when leaves begin to fall.

Every night the gop suding with friction; it shakes off dead, discolored scales, and the tubular, lapping with a heavy massage cream to nourish cells below. Every morning a dash of cold water, the astringent, then the foundation cream.

It has been a hard summer on some faces. Let the poor things have a rest from sunlight. Let them lap up sweetly odorous oily concoctions. Let them start on that forward march that will lead them back to the condition of the spring-time, and their beauty world will be right again.

Try this Recipe for Dinner Tomorrow

HERE is a simple recipe for a delicious custard pie. Serve it to your family for dinner to-night and then come back for more!

CUSTARD PIE

½ cups St. Charles Milk
½ cups water
4 eggs, well beaten
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
Unbaked pastry

Dilute the milk with water and bring just to scalding in a double boiler. (Do not boil). Add sugar and salt to eggs, blend well. Pour the hot milk slowly over the egg mixture, stirring constantly. Pour into pastry, sprinkled with gratings of nutmeg and place in a rather hot oven to set sides and bake slow and bottom of crust. Then DECREASE the heat and cook at a low temperature until a silver knife inserted in centre comes out clean. The custard must not boil at any time or it will be watery.

Borden's St. Charles Milk is equally delicious in any recipe that calls for milk.

THE HALF-CUP OF MILK DID IT!

"I want Cadbury's" was the instant response to fresh milk flavour

People saw the picture of milk pouring from a cup in Cadbury advertisements. "What?" they said, "half a cup of fresh full cream milk in a 5c bar? Let's look into this!" And the first taste told them how different, how much smoother, more delicious milk chocolate can be. Eat a bar of Cadbury's Dairy Milk Chocolate today.

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 15.—(CP)—Group leaders in the Standard Mining Exchange market gradually worked higher in today's session, supported by a considerable pick-up in investment demand. The advance was restrained by waves of selling in the New York markets to which the leading gold issues here particularly sensitive and the close was up for the day.

Nickel successfully combated a second decline to go down on the New York market only to slip in an afternoon near decline, closing at 32 1-8c. Noranda had 15 cents to the good at $31.50 and Hollinger's gain was 20 at $10.50.

Dome Lake, Dome McIntyre, Kirkland Lake, Hollinger, and Teck all closed unchanged or higher, by 5 to 25 cents. Dome was off 60 cents. The bulk of the buying was in McIntyre, Dome, Teck and Hargraves.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 15.—Stocks seesawed today with heaviness in utilities, rails and alcohols. A late rally in the issues helped to stem the list, although the general tone was unconvincing. Homestake was up 13 points at one time, but lost most of that. Shares steady to firm in the final hour included Lagash and Myers B., Cerro de Pasco, American Can, Case and Air Reduction. Losses ranging from major fractions to around 2 points or so occurred in U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, American Telephone, Western Union, Pennsylvania of New Jersey and American Sugar. Transfers approximated 2,300,000 shares.

TORONTO BOARD

Toronto, Sept. 15—Profit taking on the Toronto Exchange caused a quick shake-down of the price level before noon, but this distiller's stock particularly appearing sensitive to a general sell-off in the New York market. International Nickel was outstanding for firmness, holding around the $32 mark after traders were sold. Expectations of a Washington boost for commodity prices firmed the metal shares. Smelters rose the list, although the general tone was uncertain. Homestake was up 13 points at one time, but best most of that. MOLLISONS ORDER SUITS

Belleville Firm To Make Outfits For World Flight

Belleville will be particularly interested in the proposed flight of Jim and Amy Mollison from Toronto to Bagdad by reason of the fact that they will make a flying outfit made in this city. On the flight from Wales to New York, which ended disastrously at Bridgeport, Connecticut, almost all their clothing was lost, the Mollisons, Amy and Jim, were special flying outfits from Grenfel cloth, a material famous by Sir Wilfred Grenfel, of Labrador, and very popular with flyers and open air adventurers generally by reason of its durability and lightness. The Deacon Shirt Company, Limited, of Belleville, specialize in sporting outfits made of Grenfel cloth, and this morning received a telegram to meet the Mollisons in Toronto at once to measure them for a flying outfit of the desired material.

Fred H. Deacon, Jr., left for Toronto, today, to take the necessary measurements and the factory here will turn out the complete flying outfit from Grenfel cloth for the 17,300 Francs.

TWO MILES OF HOT DOGS FEASTED ON

Two Tons of Sauerkraut Eaten on Sauerkraut Day

Forrestion, Ill., Sept. 15 (CP)—This town of Illinois nearly 600 inhabitants held its annual observation of "Sauerkraut Day" and this is what happened.

About 30,000 visitors came to see how much sauerkraut and "hot dogs" they could eat.

Two tons of sauerkraut were consumed, and if the "hot dogs" that disappeared during yesterday's celebration were placed end to end there would have been a string two miles long.

There was no charge for this culinary festival. It's an old Forrestion custom. Just one and all to free food once a year.

CRIPPLED ORGANIST

London, Sept. 15—Although three fingers are missing from his right hand, Reginald Silby Lewis was among the successful candidates at the last examination for the Associateship of the Royal College of Organists. Here is a story of triumph over exceptional difficulties.

His right hand was shattered at Ypres, where he was an artillery officer, and it was feared his profession as an organist was entirely frustrated. However, after several operations he bought a "game back" and passed his examination, without any support.

He had studied law for a while but music was his natural bent.

IN MEMORIAM

McRAE—In loving memory of our dear son Ross, who passed away Sept. 16th, 1931.
The garment of his soul has passed away,
The shining spirit and the love light stay
The echo of his voice, his eyes, his smile
Just as they were are with us all the while.

SECOND GAME TO CUBS FROM N. Y. GIANTS

Fine Record of Season Continued With 4-2 Win

HOME RECORD

Giants Still Five And Half Games Ahead

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Reporter)

Whether or not they succeed in their uphill struggle to overtake New York in the National League pennant race—and their chances look good today after two straight victories over the league leaders—Chicago Cubs can at least point with pride to their record at Wrigley Field this season.

When they put on a ninth inning uprising yesterday and took their second rainy day decision from the Giants 4-3, the Cubs lifted their home game percentage to .765. They have won 52 and lost only 16 so far.

The Giants still 5 1-2 games ahead, have won only 46 and lost 22 at home for a .676 percentage but they have been considerably more successful than Chicago on the road, winning 37 games and losing 31 where the Cubs have turned in 36 victories and 44 defeats on foreign grounds.

The rest of the programme seems to be a test between the Giants' consistency and the Cubs' ability to keep on winning at home. New York has nine more road games, including the Saturday-Sunday Chicago today and tomorrow, and seven at home while the Cubs play only two of their remaining 13 games away from home.

SOMERVILLE LOSES CROWN

W. L. Little, 23-Year-Old Dark Horse Champion

Cincinnati, Sept. 15 (CP)—County Somerville was just a spectator at the United States golf tournament today and the tall champion's chip held in Canada's future hand.

What had already come to be known as the inconsistency of upsets was delivered its crowning blow yesterday when William Lawson Little, Jr., a 23-year-old dark horse from San Francisco, defeated the titleholder and favorite son of London, Ont., by a two-and-one margin.

Sandy could not get on top of his game during a day of rain fell almost throughout to turn its ways into veritable marshes, traps into soup-bowls and greens into tricksy surfaces. He was just outstrided in a step-light.

Carrying the challenge of youth with Little into the semi-finals to meet Jack Munger, Dallas 18-year-old, and George T. Dunlap, of New York, 34 and—well known in national tourney play, Somerville's conqueror yesterday zoned hiccoughs by three-and-one in Thursday's quarter finals while Dunlap ran away from Eddie Held, of New York who once won the Canadian amateur crown, by six-and-five.

RANGERS TO TRAIN ON MONTREAL ICE

Montreal, Sept. 13 (CP)— New York Rangers, Stanley Cup holders, will do their pre-season training on Montreal ice, it was reported here today.

Lester Patrick, coach of the Rangers has moved his family from the Pacific Coast and will make his home here, it was further learned.

COLLEGE HILL WIN FIRST

Firemen Lose Opening of Play-Off Series By 13 To 9

With the aid of lusty extra base hits the College Hill Cubs drew first blood in the play-off series in the Senior Park League when they downed Gerald Vance's Firemen by a 13 to 9 score at Coleman Flats last evening. Following the contest President Harry Rollins announced that the second game of the play-off would be played next Tuesday evening.

The Cubs opened the affair by scoring in the initial frame and kept adding to their long list of runs until they amassed 13 big runs. Home runs by L. Jenkinson and Lapenette aided the home.

Geo. Jenkinson was on the hill-top for the Cubs and managed to keep the "fire fighters" hits well scattered until the end when he weakened slightly but his teammates rose to the occasion, and with the day over, Cubs hurled for the losing nine but his slants proved no great mystery to the Tebworth-led outfit.

The line-up:

Cubs—McDonald, Rigby, Sinfield, Ethier, J. Murray, Geo. Jenkinson, J. Murray, L. Jenkinson, Lapenette, Burley and Robinson.

Firemen—Weir, W., Morgan, Gray, Baker, H. Morgan, Bennett, Wade, Darnell and Jenkins.

Score by innings:

Firemen ..... 022 113 0— 9 runs
College Hill ..... 135 301 x—13 runs

Umpires—Rollins and Ethier.

INTERNATIONAL PLAY-OFF LEADERS

(By The Canadian Press)

Buffalo Bisons today reaped in the final brackets of the International League play-off with their powerful slugger Crog. "Mulleavy, was completely tamed by Baltimore hurlers in the final game of the series. Mulleavy who had pounded the pill for a fat average of .777 in the first four games of the series against the Orioles, failed to get a hit in five trips to the plate yesterday, as a result his mark dropped to .500. He held a commanding lead, however, over the regulars although Earl Mattingly, Baltimore first baseman, is hot on his heels.

The batting leaders are:

	AB	R	H	PCT.
Mattingly Baltimore	11	0	2	1.000
Mulleavy, Buffalo	14	2	7	.500
Clabaugh, Baltimore	2	1	1	.500
Blake, Rochester	2	0	1	.500
Schalk, Newark	7	0	3	.428
Hinkle, Rochester	7	0	3	.428
Perkins, Buffalo	10	2	4	.400
Gallivan, Buffalo	5	1	2	.400

The batting leaders:

	W	L	PCT.
Perkins, Buffalo	1	0	1.000
powerful slugger Crog.	Mulleavy,
Mitchell, Buffalo	1	0	1.000
Murphy, Newark	1	0	1.000

CURRENT SPORT

Of all the Belleville baseball and softball teams to bravely end their season of championship last May but one lone club today is still in the hunt. On Saturday when the Corvettes journey down the St. Clyrian kids of Toronto at the local ball yard the Art Young-led clan face elimination in detroit.

The "Lac" kids will be at full strength for this all-important Junior O.B.A.A. semi-final game on Saturday. Despite the fact that the kids took a rather drastic drubbing in Toronto last week they are full of confidence and predict victory on the morrow. Of course if the kids rise to the occasion a 13-10 game will be necessary. The winner of this contest will advance in the Junior O.B.A.A. finals for the championship of the province.

We see where Belleville's old favourite, wrestling Odette will be back in our midst Saturday evening when Frankie Hart meets the Frenchman. The Jewish lad from Detroit appeared in B. local ring about a year ago and judging from his aggressiveness was somewhat of what the fans term as "bad man."

Al Getzwrich, the ex-masked marvel, who meets Mayor McLean in the main bout is no stranger in this man's town. Everytime Al and his bemasked opponent appear in a local ring the fans can be assured of action guaranteed. As for McLain his recent Toronto bouts with Malverich, Szabo and Sandwich have stamped the ex-Oklahoma football star as one of the best grapplers at the business. McLain plus his hopes on the use of the flying tackle, a hold that is always thrilling and punishing.

Frontier Jack Corcoran assured the Kiwanis Club a real big time show and is accompanying his boys to Belleville. A banner night for show should be a novel way in which to terminate the Kiwanis Karnival on Saturday night. We are not sure but in all probability Jackie Forbes, another favourite in Belleville, will be the third man in the ring. The Kiwanis Club have gone to considerable expense to present this holiday evening show as they even had to erect a special ring for the occasion.

"Chuck" Fournier with his wow and deliberate delivery came into his own when he pitched the Kingston Frasles to victory over the New Toronto scribes at Peterboro the other day. Fournier has been used more since the Frasles entered the play-off than he was during the playing season it seems. The slight little left hander has demonstrated that he can hold his own with the best of them. The Frasles now meet the Riverdale Grads of Toronto in the Senior O.B.A.A. semi-finals, May they continue in their good fortune.

NEVER TOO LATE —By Jack Sords

Cecil Smith May Be Rated 10-Goal Man—Deserves It

By HAROLD K. GEORGE
(Central Press Sports Writer)

Westbury, L.I., Sept. 13.—When the national open polo championship is concluded on Long Island and the annual polo rankings announced, one is very apt to find Tommy Hitchcock, jr. sharing that top rung of ten goals with Cecil Smith.

Several polo authorities have announced the opinion that Hitchcock won't even be on the top rung at all and that Smith will have it all to himself, but it must be remembered that control of this sport is still in the hands of the east, and the west should be satisfied if one of the men could get one-half the claim to the best polo playing in the world.

Smith has been ranked at nine goals and throughout the eastwest series at Chicago must have convinced every one of nearly 40,000 customers, who put on their best front and attended the three games, that Texas raised as good, if not better, a player than Tommy Hitchcock.

x x x

COWBOY SMITH was very much in evidence in the first and third games. He showed up in the second game, which the west lost. But that is no alibi, for he could not play a whale of a game to win. However, Smith's all-around play in the series was a considerable factor in the west wearing the crown and the east a frown.

The hard-riding Texan scored 14 of the west's 35 goals in the series —six in the first game, two in the second, and six in the third. He also exceeded any other player's total by four. Twice he was thrown from his mount and in the first game in the fall was serious, necessitating a delay of 45 minutes, but he got up again and finished the battle. In the last game a foul by Hitchcock resulted in the easterner momentarily losing his head and slamming the ball. It hit Smith in the knee and he suffered great pain, but again refused to allow a substitute.

SEVEN YEARS ago Smith had a rating of only two goals. And his rise in the polo world isn't attributed to his form, for he has none of that. He's a cowboy rider from like his teammate, Hubert (Bube) Williams. He has been in the saddle since he was five years old, learning to ride on the Llano, Tex., ranch of Williams' father. Williams made a cowboy out of Smith and seven years ago they took up polo. Smith's now 29, 5 ft. 11 inches tall, weighs 195 and is powerfully built.

The Texas cowpuncher is not the only polo star who is expected to have a better rating. Eric Pedley, eight-goal man from California, who answered an SOS when Williams suffered a fractured leg and helped the west win the third game and the series, may get a boost to nine goals. Elmer Boesche and Aidan Roark, other westerners, also are in line to get a raise from seven goals. On the "eastern team Raymond Guest and Marie Hopping seven goalers, are due for recognition.

Guest there ought to be some reward for Carleton F. Burke, manager of the west's team, too. Burke has been known as the "20-goal manager".

Spying on Sports

BY
William Ritt
Central Press Canadian

THOUGH THE NEXT Davis Cup matches are about as far away at your next vacation—some 10 or 11 months—things are already happening which may have a bearing on the United States' chances to win the International tennis trophy from England.

For instance, Australia and Japan are contemplating challenging in the American zone instead of the European as heretofore.

At first thought, this would seem to place added obstacles in the path of the American team as it strives to reach the challenge round. It does. However, in the long run, the benefits from such an arrangement might prove greater for the United States team than the difficulties.

ONE OF THE REASONS some tennis experts gave for the sudden collapse of the United States players against England was that they had not had sufficient strong competition in the early rounds of play.

England had already beaten the tough Australians and were going full steam ahead when they met Sam's boys.

Heretofore, the United States met only Mexico and Canada or Cuba before going abroad to meet the European zone finals winner. Australia and Japan will make the American zone division a real group productive of better tennis than this European zone for, on this side of England and France, there is hardly any other nation on a par with the two United States, Australia and Japan.

OF COURSE, with Australia and Japan permanently members of the American zone there will be times when the United States, if not the strongest team, will be barred from playing in any but the challenge round. Of course, playing against the boys from Down Under or the Little Brown Brothers will be an improvement in Canadian play the American zone may without the necessity of having to have a group of four nations pear-like as the present British zone.

However, this all depends on whether or not Australia and Japan will enter the American zone play. The chances are they will.

GOLF FACTS
NOT THEORIES!
By ALEX J. MORRISON

ALEX MORRISON says:
Let the left arm lead the club back and forth before starting your swing should help you to a very free, easy and easily, but there are ways of waggling the club.

The motion should be made with very little arm and body action; most of the movement being covered by an action of the wrists. Then you can be sure to benefit by the action.

If you find your elbows bending instead of your wrists, as is the case with a great many players, you have failed to loosen up your shoulders or body generally.

Start over again and move the club back and forth slowly until you can produce more of the action just in your wrists.

TRY THIRD GAME AGAIN

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 15 (CP)—Rochester and Newark will make a second attempt tonight to open the Rochester end of their international league playoff series, yesterday at one apiece after two games in Newark. Rain and cold weather combined to call the third game of the series last night after the teams arrived from New Jersey City.

THIRTY-POUNDER CAUGHT NEAR O.S.D.

Charles Barnhardt, St. Paul 'Ite, is out this year to let the lunge in the New know he is about. Two weeks ago, one of the lunge family fell for the lure of his troll, in front of the dock of the Ontario School for the Deaf. But that one which weighed 18 pounds, was but a youth compared with the catch he made Thursday evening, in the same vicinity. The Thursday lunge weighed 30 pounds, was 5 feet and measured 4 feet, 6 inches in length.

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE RESULTS FROM COLLISON

Gives Fine Swimming Exhibition At Trenton

Carrying Place.—Ushering in the autumn season with a vengeance, two slight frosts made themselves felt on Monday and Tuesday nights this week. Although neither was sufficiently severe to do any damage, warning has been thus served to the farmers that their buckwheat may suffer if the cold snap continues.

Fifty local school children enjoyed to the full their annual visit to the School Fair at Wooler on Tuesday. With a glorious crisp day for the event, one could not help envying the youngsters as they gaily climbed aboard Westfall's transport and went whooping and singing away. Competing with about six other rural schools, the local pupils showed up well and were successful in winning many prizes for sports and competitions. They were met on their return, after arrival home late in the day.

Mr. J. M. Hanthorn, assisted by Mr. Gordon Hanthorn, dismantled and wrecked the barn owned by Mrs. G. Weller on Friday and Saturday of last week. With this building removed there is a great change in the appearance of the corner near which it stood, and the improved visibility thus accomplished should make the Trenton corner much less dangerous. Mrs. Weller does not like to see anything her barn, but will have built an up-to-date poultry home instead.

Mr. Alex Campbell is in Hamilton this week, having made the trip west late last week.

A few hardy souls still frequent the canal on summery days to enjoy a few last dips before the season is over; but for most of us the water holds little appeal, especially since the recent cold snap.

Ameliaburgh Township held its School Fair at Ameliaburg (Roblin's Mills) on Thursday. On the day, the same day of the Wooler School Fair, Miss Elsie Pilchett of Young's Cove attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewart Hennessey spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hennessey here.

An accident which occasioned plenty of excitement and did considerable damage to two cars, occurred Sunday afternoon at the corner of the Picton highway in front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Dunenburg, when a large touring car and a smaller local car collided at the turn. Both cars were damaged about the fenders and running boards, one having the one side cleaned completely off. This turn is dangerous, owing to the sharpness of the bend has been the cause of trouble, perhaps in recent years, and should be equipped with warning signs on both approaches.

Miss Ethel Hodge, ordered by her doctor to leave the marathon swim alone this year on account of a minor throat infection, did not train for the C.N.E. women's swim, but in the mile race for women held at Trenton on Labor Day, after a big handicap and won by a large margin. Miss Hodge, a consistent winner of this same event in Trenton for a number of years, became a professional two years ago when she entered the "swim" at the C. N. E. and again last year; thus was unable to compete for prize, in this amateur event. Nevertheless her convincing victory does her credit, and her friends will be hoping to see her in the money next season.

Among those who motored to the School Fair on Tuesday were Miss L. Black and Mr. Herrington, the teachers, and Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Tait, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Art. Hayes, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry La Tour with Mr. and Mrs. Will La Tour and Bobby.

Shingling has done much to improve the looks of a number of local houses recently. Two that have lately completed are the Hicks house and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Young and family.

Mrs. Hugh Murray and Buddy of Trenton and Mr. and Mrs. A. Norrington and Barry motored to Picton on Saturday.

Meeting in the first game of the league finals at Mountain View on Saturday afternoon, Redneravill- pounded out a comfortable win over the Victoria A. C. team. Softball fans from this community attended in large numbers, and voted it one of the best games of the year. Local opinion seems to favor the Redneravillites to take the Vic but this is not safe to predict. There may be many an upset.

Mrs. Greer Black and Mrs. A. Norrington motored to the York Road community on Monday evening to inspect a new building. The Women's Association are thinking of buying it.

Service was held in the United Church on Sunday morning.

A jolly party of local young people, members of the Hennessey and Hanthorn families, with Mrs. Clifford Baker and Louis Tyer motored on Sunday to Colborne to the home of Mr. Jim Wilson, later in the evening enjoying a weiner- and-marshmallow roast on the beach at Colborne.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Campbell of Trenton called on Mr. and Mrs. Norrington on Sunday evening.

Misses Kathleen and Aileen Hanthorn were Monday evening guests of the Hennessey family.

Kiddies Win Hearts of Huge Crowds at Kiwanis Karnival

Premier Entertainers of Juvenile Ranks On Stage

One years ago at the Kiwanis Karnival a group of kiddies from Toronto, unheralded by glowing press accounts or concentrated advertising, came to Belleville and won the hearts of thousands of young and old with their extremely clever and versatile acts so smoothly presented. Thursday night again, with the surety and aplomb of veteran troupers, even though the oldest of the group is scarce thirteen years of age, Canada's premier juvenile entertainers, the Toronto Kiddies came to the city again and gained hundreds of new friends with their talented presentation of a sparkling and snappy revue which ended all too soon for the six hundred or more who packed the seats in front of the stage.

It was the best show of the week. The same solid hit that the kiddies scored on the larger stages of the Uptown and the Imperial Theatres in Toronto were enacted on the smaller but beautiful if decorated stage in the Armouries last evening. It was worth the wait to the patient and loyal holders who were forced to undergo before the revue finally swung into its song and dance.

To differentiate between the various tiny actors would be hard. All did their sparkling bit in a manner that would or should envy many of the hardened veteran actor's heart. Urged by the repeated encores of applause which rang from all sections of the seated audience, the diminutive players excelled themselves.

Johnny Anderson, the little twelve year old boy who waltzed to the piano and with the ease of one to whom crowds are old hat, calmly played and sang through the microphone airs and ballads that will well remembered, later to double in varying skits and fast moving acts was probably the shining light of the show. Helen White, tiny "blues singer" par excellence, who rendered several dusky songs in th best approved Helen Morgan manner, came a close second. Those who like the melodies of the early naughts and the cabling in the cotton down south, would probably have voted for the three in March Brothers' youngest one sight years old—who played guitars and harmonicas simultaneously, and found time between their strumming chords to harmonize in songs that went deep down to the last row of seats and the hearts of listeners. There was little Ruth Wilson, who duplicated some of the hardest stunts in professional acrobatics; Thelma Perks and Eleanor Hartman, dancing belles of the show who doubled and singled in tango and eccentric; Buddy Hanley with his eccentric and tap dancing, and many many more.

A touch of the Montmartre in Paris was given by the cancan-like presentation of the Apache dance by Joyce Brown and Ruth Wilson. These were no love taps that Billie Min, Wilson and Brown were showering apache, Miss Brown, who dressed and acted the part. They were real hard slams on rough flooring that added realism to the act.

With the precision and timing of precision, Thelma Perks, Eleanor Hargreaves and Buddy Hanley, terror of the smallest actors stepped onto the stage and offered an act of fast tap and eccentric dancing that brought repeated encores from the delighted audience. Most smaller dancers had but few moments at their strenuous exercise, but not this trio. A full act and two encores were the due of these artists.

That was Joyce Brown in "Sanandra from the farm", a novelty skit of a country girl in the city—and liable to go wrong. Fortunately she came to no harm before it was too late. The tear-jerking song she sang and acted, told of her tribulations since she left the old homestead. Then there were the Gollwogs who appeared in one of the most unique costumes and went through a highly intricate dance routine and drills much as the little characters of bed time story book fame. Hazel Denny, just to limit things to a minimum, her version of a little Dutch dancer, complete with wooden shoes and all. The finale of the evening found the little Kiddies in a long line, bowing to the aisles, applauding for encores, with the whole troupe of the Kiddies on the stage doing a corps de ballet drill, with the invulnerable Master Johnny Anderson in charge of the whole shebang, giving the unintelligible orders. The act wound up with the versatile Johnny, who sings as well as he plays the piano without accompaniment, executing as a dancer of note, hitting the deck and scrambling.

The Toronto Kiddies will again be at the Kiwanis Karnival Friday evening. The same troupe with present different acts and time that have all been rehurnished over for the entertainment of Belleville citizens. To miss it would be missing one of the best shows that has come to Belleville for a long time. Forgetting for a time the fact that the majority of the youngsters in the troupe are in the neighborhood of seven and eight years of age—none have yet reached fourteen—and considering the cleverness and versatility of the performers and the fact that a real drawing card of guaranteed entertainment. Officials of the Kiwanis Club are frank in stating that they have been lucky to secure such a revue and expect to pack the house to the rafters on Friday evening. Don't miss the attraction. They ask you to come early and see for yourself. Doors open at 7.30. Particular will enjoy and—and there won't be any school to worry about the next day.

BRITAIN HAS PLENTY CAPITAL FOR CANADA

Sir Herbert Samuel Protests Growth of Tariffs Around World

Toronto, Sept. 15—"The same qualities in a nation which lead to intolerance and injustice are the qualities which bring that nation down in a moral scale, and, ultimately, in economic and political influence," declared Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the Parliamentary Liberal Party in the United Kingdom, in addressing yesterday's lunch meeting of the Canadian Club, and the speaker added: "The enormous of the predominance of military forces in the Germany of today demands the attention of the whole world there, even more than the risk taking place there in relation to the Jewish people."

Sir Herbert protested urbanely but declatively against "the growth of tariffs and quotas" around the world. Give attention to the need for a greater population for Canada and continued: "Great Britain used to be the main source from which capital was drawn for the development of these vast territories; but in the post-war years you have, I believe, largely turned to the great sister nation to the south. Yet, only a few weeks ago, once more the British government came to London for a very considerable sum. It was quickly subscribed—in a few minutes—and if ever you have again the need of capital, there is plenty here, ready waiting to be invested; almost a plethora, which we are most pleased to lend, especially to our own Dominions, and especially to those who can be relied upon to repay, as Canada always can."

NRA of the United States To Be Studied

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP)—National and international questions affecting organized labor will be discussed here when the annual meeting of the Trades and Labor Congress opens Monday.

In the Canadian field, unemployment relief and recovery programs will be foremost. Two international questions that will be on the agenda will be the Recovery Administration of the United States and its effect on Canadian industry and a proposed boycott of German goods because of Adolf Hitler's anti-Semitism and general attitude toward trade unionism.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY MEETS AFTER HOLIDAYS

Plainfield, Sept. 15.—Over thirty young people gathered at the parsonage on Tuesday evening to renew the friendships broken by the closing of the Young People's Society last June. A short program presided over by Mrs. Harry Harrison, president of the Society, was given, beginning at eight o'clock. Mrs. Harrison led in the singing of several hymns. Miss Ruth Deming gave a paper on "What Is a Christian", Mrs. Ivan Mitchell offered prayer. Cards were passed around which bearing a Scripture verse; these were read consecutively as a lesson. A duet was rendered by Mrs. Everson and Mrs. Harry Harrison. Mr. Everson gave a short talk on the topic and closed this part of the meeting with the benediction after which a quarter hour was spent in community singing after which an hour or more was spent in games. At 10.30 a delicious lunch was served by the hostess. Miss Mary Marshall moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Everson for their hospitality. This was seconded by Mr. Frank Hicks and unanimously carried by singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

The men's service on Sunday evening was an overwhelming success. The church was filled with an appreciative audience. Mr. Earl Denyes and Mr. Sherman Parks acted as ushers. Mr. Elmer Dinnis, of Belleville, read one Scripture lesson. Mr. Frank Hicks led in prayer. A male choir of twelve voices led in the singing of the hymns and also rendered three special numbers, including a solo by Mr. Joseph Gow, The pastor, the Rev. F. Everson delivered a splendid address based on St. Paul's words: "I Thank God," in which he praising the people for goodness attained and urging greater purity of life as the road to influence and power in the service of God.

On Sunday the Rev. F. Everson enjoyed an experience which will long be remembered by all the gospel. He baptized Marilyn Joan Culver, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Culver, of North Bay and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Everson of Thurlow, at whose home the baptism was performed. Some forty years ago, while minister on the Bath circuit, Mr. Everson baptized Sheldon, the father of the baby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Culver of Bath and at the same time he baptized Mr. Everson and received Dalton, another son, into church membership.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rollins, of Queensboro and Master and Miss Ellis visitors at the parsonage, Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hill, Master Willie and Miss Gertrude of Toronto are spending a holiday and Thursday with her brother, the Rev. J. F. Everson.

ENGLISH ALE IS POURED ON EARTH

Dunbalk, Irish Free State, Sept. 14 (CP)—A dozen men carrying arms held up the staff of the Dunbalk Junction railway station today and when a freight train from Dublin arrived, broke the seals of several cars and destroyed a number of barrels of English ale.

The barrels were smashed with hammers and the tracks were sprinkled with the bubbling brew.

The attackers did not touch the Irish beer aboard the train.

Bright School Boys and Girls of Tyendinaga Compete at Fair, Melrose Hall Appealing Scene

Judging Young Exhibitors' Entries Is Very Close

HOME GARDENS

Delightful Rivalry of Scholars of Township Schools

Though it rained heavily early Thursday morning and well on toward noon, the annual Rural School Fair of Tyendinaga township was decided success during the beautiful clear afternoon of Thursday. The Town Hall at Melrose was the scene of the event and annual visitors to the fair since its inception declare the attendance on Thursday to have been the largest they had yet seen at the children's fair there. The exhibits inside the hall were fine and most artistically arranged, and there were heaps of them; while outside the poultry, calves and sheep drew their full share of attention.

Competition was keen and it seemed a long time to the boys and girls—and perhaps to the parents also—before the judging was completed in the hall and they were admitted to learn who the fortunate prize winners were and for what they attained awards.

Parade

The parade of schools and the Strathcona exercises by the various schools of Tyendinaga was only an exhibition with favors going to all.

Mr. Jos. Wilson, Ontario Agricultural Representative for the district was in charge and he was, as at all similar affairs, most capably assisted by his secretary, Miss Aletha Spry of Stirling.

Most worthy of note was Evelyn Badgley's "home garden collection" exhibit. Evelyn attends No. 11 School and other township fairs will have to beware of her in future competitions of this kind. Her collection and the arrangement of it would have done credit to senior exhibits at any township or county fair.

The boys' and girls' races and the softball games, which attracted many, were held in the Melrose athletic field some 300 yards from the hall.

The following are the boy and girl directors for each of the school sections comprising Tyendinaga:

S.S. 4, Harry Clarke; S.S. 5, Beryl Little; S.S. 7, Marjorie Price; S.S. 9, Annetta Godsfellow; S.S. 10, Edna O'Sullivan; S.S. 11, Clarence Chamberz; S.S. 14, Sherman Lasher; S.S. 15, Doris Murphy; S.S. 17, Rita McWilliams; S.S. 22, Russell Sheffield; S.S. 23, Meria Jordan; S.S. 34, Patrick McCormick; S.S. 36, Jack Bennett.

"Here's my Star Salesman!"

When Jim Bowen was appointed Sales Manager last May he knew he had a hard summer ahead — reduced sales staff — men away on holidays — uneasy customers wanting extra attention.

But now, with the summer over, Jim can look back at his record with satisfaction.

"We filled up the gaps by using Long Distance telephone," he explained to the General Manager. "By telephone we were able to keep in close touch with all customers and get quick action."

"And I notice you've cut selling costs considerably," the General Manager said.

"Yes," Jim replied, "Long Distance is surprisingly inexpensive. In fact, the telephone has been just about our best salesman."

BARGAIN BRIDE

By Katherine Haviland-Taylor

It was rather awkward, too, to try to show another man his wife's good qualities. Bob didn't see how he could do that. Lord, wouldn't Colvin freeze him if he should try such a thing? He could almost feel the congealing air. Nevertheless Bob decided he would tell Colvin all he knew of Elinor if Colvin were hurting her by misunderstanding their friendship. He'd knock Colvin down, sit on his chest and tell him, if he had to. He'd give them a month, and then none around a bit and find out how things stood. Maybe Jessie Thrope could help him out if help were needed. Beside was a peach; he did the most adroit, flattering job of human maladjustment, while Bewicker looks who would have botched the job spoke of her with affectionate amusement all dear, good; bungling Bessie."

After dinner and some telephoning for a message northbound reservations Bob did the worst thing he could have done. He left for New York. His own honesty made him see this as the best thing for all concerned. He did not for a moment imagine that Harriet Colvin would convert his departure into a confession of guilt.

Bob paid his hotel bill, left instructions for shipping his car and was driven to the station to board a hot, odious sleeping car. He lay awake most of the night, worrying out of the situation with himself.

He could not forget the menace of Colvin's silence because it menaced Elinor. She was a peach and she had had a damn hard break. She had always been surrounded by the sort of life she loathed. Darn it, if he had to he would have it out with Colvin. He'd say "Look here, you give Elinor a square deal or—" He planned on in the naive, blind, paternal way of a young man who knows more of blue ribbon mares, blue ribbon farming and soft trophies then of diplomacy.

Miss Hemmingway, the nurse, came to the terrace after Bobby had gone.

Miss Hemmingway was a compound of stiffly starched, rustling linen, smooth hair, pert, small cap and "ready sense that did nothing of scientific reserve. Her smile in the few days had been as artificial as the stiffness of her raiment. She had been nursing for 13 years but she still felt the oppression that comes from losing a patient. She always felt it more when she had had the patient for a long while and she'd been on this case several months.

She had pitied Bentwell Stafford, as first, knowing him through Lida. Now pity being akin to love, she really cared for him as a poor, broken human being who had led a terrible life with "that woman," and who had not enough reserve strength to make the fight to get well. Elinor she worshipped. And Elinor, she knew, was going to take what lay ahead with the keenest suffering.

On the terrace she shook hands with Mr. Colvin after expressing artful surprise at seeing him. He was a wonderful looking man, she thought. It was seldom one saw two such fine looking people together.

Miss Hemmingway stood with cool, gentle fingers on Bentwell's thin wrist, eyes on her watch. Then she said, "Well, I think we'll pack you to bed for your dinner. You've had a full day with all these visitors."

Bentwell nodded. He knew he wasn't equal to much more effort.

Elinor murmured her disappointment and Barrett seconded, it half-ashamed. He could not be sorry that he was to dine alone with Elinor.

At eight they sat down at a tiny little table in a small, attractive dining room. Tall candles with flames dancing gently in the moving air and a low bowl of flowers made a frame for Elinor's face. She wore a primrose frock of soft chiffon, and her hair was dressed low as she liked it. She smiled at him and sighed. She was so happy! Tremendously, unbelievably happy!

"It was so good of you to come!" she said.

"It's good to be here," he answered hotelishly. As always he was weakening under her charm. Nothing mattered now to him but the knowledge that she was near.

He gave her the message Higgins had sent—that she servants had missed her and spoke of his interviews with Lida. That silenced her for several seconds.

Elinor asked about his work and he told her what he had been doing. He was surprised to find that she knew a good deal about it.

"I didn't know you were interested in that sort of thing," he said slowly.

"But it's your work—" she said, and laughed. "Since coming down here I've read everything you've written that I could lay my hands on. I think you write beautifully!"

"Why—my dear child—I can't write as all-in!"

"But you can!" she disputed firmly.

"I think you'd like expedition work", he said. He had never before considered taking her on a trip with him. If he could do that what a trip it would be!

"I've often dreamed about something of that sort," she said. "I only know one kind of life—and it's such a narrow kind When I was little—furnished.

May I buy it for you?" Barrett asked carefully.

She looked startled, losing her face to his.

"I'd like to leave something with you that will make you remember me," he said wistfully, "I should think you could let me do that—if you leave me. Let me get it any way and you can decide later about keeping it. Will you, dear?"

He had said, "if you leave me—" The thought churned in Elinor's heart and set her pulse racing. Then he had thought she might not leave him!

"You're very kind" she whispered. "Not a bit of it!" He drew his hand away, moistened his lips and sat back away from her. He was going out again, he warned himself. Nevertheless he could not stifle the mood nor stop stretching out a hand to rest lightly on hers. He wanted to cry out, "I'm mad about you darling!"

He said instead, "Very good coffee, Elinor."

"Yes, isn't it.? The cook must have caught a glimpse of you and decided to show you her skill. She can be a genius when she wants to be." At other times she's rather careless. We've never had a better dinner than the one tonight."

"It was first rate," he agreed, trying to remember the dinner and failing to recall a single dish, aware only that she was near to him.

"How about the house?" he questioned after a silence as she set her cup on the tray.

"I'm tempted," she admitted. "They even have the books I like on the shelves. Could you buy the books too?" she finished eagerly.

"I should think so. I understand the house is offered just as it is."

It was offered as the result of another domestic tragedy, he knew, but he didn't want Elinor to know that. It might change her feeling for the place a bit. Later she playfully for him softly, so that the piano could not be heard in the wing where Bentwell Stafford slept. Finally, regretfully they got to the terrace.

He laid a light wrap about her shoulders, remonstrated that it wouldn't keep her warm. She answered, as women always do, that she was very warm and they stepped across the window-sill into the night.

Rain was coming and big, billowing clouds raced across the moon. Now the terrace was bathed in silver now black. The lights of the village pricked the sheer curtain to the north. The soft air was in the air that comes before a tempestuous southern downpour. Leaves trembled, and somewhere a shutter swung. From the nearest house a half acre away, came the hushed strains of a radio, sentimentally appealing waltz. Some blossoms proclaimed themselves and the dark night was moon. Elinor felt by loosing a heavy, sweet odor.

Barrett wanted to be beyond reach of the house, beyond a point where the swinging radio could reach even so much as a chance phrase. Drawing her arm through his, he led her to balustrade that guarded the terrace from a dramatically steep drop.

"This is a charming place," he murmured a little thickly as she withdrew her arm.

He leaned against the balustrade against which she too, was leaning. It was difficult to begin.

"Cigaret?" he asked.

"No thank you."

She watched his face as he held lighter with a wind guard to his cigaret. Something had made him rather nervous she saw. Long lines were pulled at the sides of his lips, which were stiff, yet uneasy.

How long can you stay?" she asked.

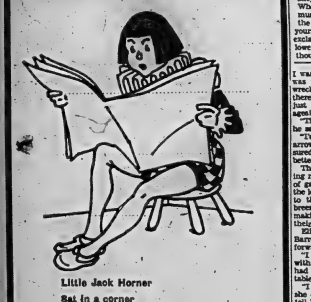
TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs



"No one questions the acts of this great jungle sheyah", said Ibn Jad. "He is all-powerful! Who was I to prevent his taking your life? There must be something you can do to prevent it," wailed the frightened Stimbol. "No one can save you—but yourself," replied Ibn Shnik. "What do you mean?" exclaimed Stimbol, eagerly. The Jad's voice sank even lower as he said: "Get lies asleep in you beyt; and—thou hast a sharp khuna!"

"I have never killed a man," whispered Stimbol.

"Tonight you must, or yourself be killed on the morrow," reminded the Shnik. "It is late. I go to my sleeping mat. I have warned thee. Do what thou will." Stimbol groaned in anguish of spirit, then staggered out into the night. A moment he hesitated. Then crouching, he crept silently toward the beyt that had been erected for the ape-man.

Hearing all this, Ateja ran ahead of Stimbol to warn the ape-man of the danger to his life. She was almost at the beyt when a figure stepped from another tent. Suddenly a hand was across her mouth and an arm held her securely. "Where goest thou?" whispered a voice she recognized as her uncle's. "Get thee back, at once, to the women's quarters!" Ateja was forced to obey.

Even as Tolog spoke, a hand reached out of the darkness, seized him by the throat and dragged him away. . . . Grasping the hilt of his keen knife with trembling fingers, Stimbol entered the beyt of the ape-man. He did not want to kill but he was a cornered human rat, seeking escape. Steeling himself to accomplish the deed, he crept to the side of the figure lying in the darkness, wrapped in an old burnous.

I was little my happiest day dream was imagining I had been shipwrecked on a desert island where there were no bills and no deceitful business and congenial ages!"

"There ain't no such animals!" he said laughing.

"I'd be glad to trade poisoned arrows for poisoned talk," she assured him. "I know I'd like them better!"

They had their coffee in the living room, a charmingly gay place of gay chintzes, softened in tone by the low lights. French doors opened to the terrace and the night breeze crept in to stir the hangings making the room and likes hold it their vases.

Elinor sat on a low stool and Barrett in a deep chair, leaning forward toward her.

"I want to have a long talk with you," he said after the maid had left a coffee tray on the low table near Elinor.

"I want to talk to you, too," she confessed. She was going to tell him she could not endure still more of his bowing hot and then cold". It must be one thing or the other continually, in order to make the rest of the time they were to spend together endurable.

He could soften her so utterly by being as he was now. Then when he grew cold again she suffered doubly. She would tell him that finally she had decided, admitting that she was happier when they were friends than she had ever been before.

CHAPTER 35

"What attractive cups," Barrett commented, glancing at his.

Elinor nodded. "Everything here is attractive. I understand the owners haven't much money but they certainly have excellent taste. It's a darling house." I love it!"

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

Explanations!

If you have ever tried to explain as a "light-ster" to an intractable wife you'll know how George felt when a beautiful blonde vamp, and a $1,000 necklace were added to the list of things needing explanations. Returning in the early hours George encounters sir Irate Angela to whom he explains he spent the night with Cyril Merrywether, a sculptor and next-door neighbor, but the necklace, which he had pocketed for safety the night before is not so easily explained. He presents it to his wife, but on the arrival of the vamp, and Cyril, Iredness as he remember's "wife," he learns the necklace is the property of a Rajah and had only been lent her by the boy friend.

The hilarious efforts of George to get back the necklace from his wife without giving the game away provides endless amusements and the complications which set in thick and fast add considerably to the laughter provocative skits which "Let Me Explain Dear" abounds.

Genial George, the brilliant and versatile star-director of "Let Me Explain Dear" which will be showing at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow (Saturday) heads an outstanding cast which includes the inimitable Claude Hulbert, as Cyril, the Sculptor; Jane Carr, a lissom and charming ingenue "find"; Ralph Ince as "the wife," and Amy Veness, the inevitable mother-in-law. "Wifie's Family" fame, as a maiden aunt.

Back Jones R.N.M.P.

Back in the days of silent pictures, the adventurous life of the Canadian Royal Northwest Mounted Police used to be featured frequently on the screen, but since the talkies have come in, these gallant-mannered, silent men of the Canadian wilds have been sadly missing. What is will come as good news to many picture-goers, who prefer the stirring action drama type of pictures, to know that Buck Jones' latest Columbia feature, "McKenna of the Mounted," which will be the second screen feature tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre, is the first talking picture of consequence with a Mounnie background.

"McKenna of the Mounted" is hailed in advance reports as one of the best films Jones ever has appeared in. It gives him an opportunity to demonstrate his acting ability, it is said, as well as to perform a great many of the thrilling feats which have lifted him to the top rank of western stars.

Jones plays the role of a sergeant in the Mounted, who voluntarily submits to disgrace and expulsion from the service in order to trap the mysterious master mind of a group of rascals who have terrorized a town with ten baffling robberies. These crimes have brought bitter criticism on the Mounted, and Jones joins the outlaw gang for the purpose of catching the actual ringleader. After a series of heroic exploits he cleans up the outfit and brings its leader to justice.

One of the finest casts ever seen in a Jones picture appears in "McKenna of the Mounted." Greta Granstedt, blond beauty who hails hiked hundreds of miles to get into the movies a few years ago, plays Buck's heroine. Niles Welch and Mitchell Lewis play the principal villain roles. On the side of law and order are Walter McGrail,

AT THE BELLE

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are to be seen in their newest film on Saturday and Monday, matinee daily when "Paddy, the Next Best Thing" is packed from the studios of Fox Films opens at the Belle Theatre for an engagement of two days. The two stars were last seen together in "Daddy Long Legs" and their success was so great that they were assigned to complement each other.

Her thirteenth characterization for Fox, "Paddy," the madcap Irish Lass, offers Janet Gaynor something absolutely new. Paddy's greatest asset is at the same time her worst liability. For she possesses the uncanny faculty of enslaving the affection of those with whom she comes into contact. It is a blessing in so much as it smooths the rough spots of life—a liability because it makes her an utter stranger in his most powder elements.

Miss Gaynor has what is reported as her greatest role to date. For in addition to her well known wistfulness she is here required to display her dramatic strength. She is a rogue—and she is irresistible! Warner Baxter who brings her down to earth, convincing her of his love. Warner Baxter is said to be in his most powder elements. He is suave, handsome and the gentleman of leisure.

The cast gathered around the two stars is one of the most notable that has been seen in many a day. Walter Connolly, star of the Broadway stage; Harry Stephens, Margaret Lindsay, Mary McCormick, Joseph M. Kerrigan, Fleke O'Hara, Arthur Aldridge, Dudley Clements, Roger Imhof, and Trevor Bland.

The locale of the film, is the rugged coast of Ireland.

Exceptional Sherlock

Jack Buchanan, the uproariously funny comedy, "Sait Water Daffy" and "Over the Counter," a smart and different musical-ed. Revue will be presented on the same program.

A special extra attraction at the Saturday matinee only will be the exhibition of the second episode of the daring adventure story, "Clancy of the Mounted," starring Tom Tyler and his horse "Samarang."

Helen Hayes Tonight

Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery are the stars in "Another Language," a new Metro Goldwyn Mayer picture that opened at the Belle last evening. Edward H. Griffith directed the picture from the play that ran more than a year on Broadway. Although the screen has a swiftly paced, brilliant story that sparkles with tense interest from start to finish, Miss Hayes is more sufficient in her role and Montgomery is fine as her leading man. Their performances leave little to be desired. They are a great trio together and appreciation is shown with the unbounded approval of the audience. "Another Language" is augmented by an array of varied and entertaining short offerings will be presented again for the last time tonight and the program is one that should not be missed.

Island Park Scheme Discussed at Special Relief Meeting

Decision on Zwick's Island Scheme Laid Over Until Thursday

Reclamation of River Is Another Project Mooted

LARGE MEETING

One of Council Objects To Presence of City Reporter

Whether or not construction work on Zwick's Island which has been suggested as a relief measure for the coming months by Mayor G. O. Tice will be undertaken rests solely on the vote of the City Council at the next committee meeting to be held next Thursday night, September 21.

It is believed that the suggested scheme of making the island a recreation park will meet with some opposition, following a special emergency relief meeting of the City Council, the Parks Committee, and members of the Central Relief Committee, held in the committee room of the city hall last evening. Several councillors, who have indicated their disapproval of the project, have, it is believed, suggested alternate work which may place the unemployed.

Results of this special meeting which was held were learned in meagre fashion after the adjournment, and through questioning several members who were present. At the start of the meeting a reporter took his place among the councillors and committee men, but was discouraged to stay. His presence was objected by Alderman A. E. Bennett, who queried the mayor on the reporter's presence.

Press Is Wanted in

"I don't believe," he said to Mayor Tice, "that it is necessary for a reporter to be present. He can learn what develops after the meeting. I understood this was to be merely a discussion of suggested proposals."

Although no vote was taken on whether or not the press should remain, no further comments were made by councillors or others present and the reporter withdrew. What was learned was gained from conversation with members following the meeting.

Mayor Tice outlined again the scheme for the proposed development of Zwick's Island which would make it a central recreation centre. He related his conversation with an outside landscape architect who had been brought to the city by the Kiwanis Club and told also of the trip made by himself, members of the council and the Board of Parks Commission and the city to the Kiwanis Club to the island during the afternoon.

Expert to Draw Plans

The landscape expert had been empowered to draw complete plans for the layout of the proposed park, following a trip of inspection over the area affected.

A strong advocate of the scheme, Mayor Tice asked the meeting to consider what the amount of work that could furnish hundreds of the unemployed with a feeling of good fellowship in coming months. This would be at a material cost of only a few hundred dollars. Other schemes suggested had been investigated but the outlay of the citizens' money would be considerable to carry it through, he said.

Opposition to the contemplated work on the island, several aldermen were said to have made, were that suggestions which would put the unemployed to work, and as they claimed, result in greater and more noticeable returns for the expenditure.

Among the suggestions was that the Moira River could be cleaned out and new retaining walls built. The esplanade again found its supporters, while other suggestions were also brought forward.

The meeting was said to have adjourned until little being accomplished in the line of work, except the private discussion regarding it. On Thursday night next a vote taken on the Zwick's Island scheme will decide its fate.

Mayor Answers Questions

The following questions were addressed to Mayor Tice by the press and answered:

Will the government recognize this work on Zwick's Island?

"Yes, as soon as we know definitely whether or not it will be undertaken then the complete plans of the work will be taken to Toronto where it will be submitted for their approval."

When is it planned to start?

"Just as soon as council votes favorably on it, and it has received the government okay."

Will teams and wagons be used to haul this material, or will it be all shovel and wheelbarrow work?

"We won't use any teams if I can help it. This work is intended as a relief measure to give men work We're not going to rush through it like that."

Has the council fallen in line with the project?

"Some of them haven't."

How will these men register for work?

"Right at the Central Relief Office where they will list their names so that our investigator can assure himself that they are bona fide residents who have resided here for at least three months previous."

Will any outsiders have a chance at it?

"Absolutely not."

EVEN MONEY WON'T DAMPEN TROUBADOUR

Man Mows Lawn for 13 Cent Meal but Finds $18. Bill

Oklahoma City, Sept. 16 (CP)—Truly, the spirit of the wandering troubadour yet lives. Alt. Dink Williamson.

When Dink was mowing the lawn yesterday at a filling station a stranger appeared and offered to do the job for "15 cents—to get some breakfast." Dink agreed.

The stranger found a $10 bill on the lawn.

"Now," said Dink, "you can get a real meal."

"No," said the stranger, a gleam in his eye, "I guess coffee and rolls will be enough for me. I'll bet I've got a saxophone in hock. There's where the ten bucks are going."

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

New York, Sept. 16 (CP)—Next time Joseph Strecansky will keep his hands in his pockets—and he won't be so public.

Joseph, 12 years old and always willing to do a new trick, was standing on a street corner when a woman walked up.

"Please hold my baby a minute, will you?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am," said Joseph with a bow. "I'd be glad to."

Joseph held the baby until the shadow of night overtook him and then appealed to a policeman. The child was taken to a foundling home.

Chicago, Sept. 16 (CP)—A mere matter of 94 years doesn't keep Henry Cowles Smith from "tickling the ivories."

A professor emeritus of Latin and music at North Central College, Naperville, Ill., he was selected to play the piano tonight in the Hall of Science at the Century of Progress Fair.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 19 (CP)—He's quiet, unassuming man, Police Court Clerk C. Cosell, but when it comes to hog calling, he's a champion. He won the title at a combined police department and city council picnic.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 16 (CP) — Five horses and a pack of hounds were among the indirect casualties of a hurricane which swept the ranch home of W. A. "Uncle" King, Jr., near Brownsville. King said today the animals were killed by a native lioness liberated by the storm. King shot the lioness.

Shelton, Conn., Sept. 16 (CP) — The turkey turkey in Fred Nichols's flock used sound logic, but just too much faith in the watch dog.

The turkey picked out the top of the dog kennel as a good safe place to roost at night. Nichols was responsible for his turkey and a purchaser for his dog. A thief stole the bird and the dog escaped.

Twin Turricanes Rage Along East Coast And In Gulf

HOTEL UNROOFED

Thirty-Four Deaths Caused By Two Hurricanes

Thirty-four persons were feared dead today in twin hurricanes that slashed toward the north Carolina coast and ripped Mexico's northeast seaboard.

A report to Pan-American Airways from its office at Tampico, Mexico, said 23 persons were believed to have been killed and 1,000 made homeless by a storm which struck the Mexican coast line yesterday.

Details were lacking because of smashed communications.

Another storm of moderate howled toward North Carolina and Norfolk, Va. Two persons were known to be dead as gales and high tides swept the coast in advance of the tropical terror's core.

New York, Sept. 16 (CP)—A wireless message picked up today by coast guard communications here said presumably sent by a ship said all docks and buildings at Pamlico, North Carolina, had been swept away in the storm that lashed the coast.

The message was fragmentary and was sent from a low-power transmitter at Cape Henry, Virginia. Some of its contents indicated that inland communications here had been disrupted by a coast guard ship.

"All docks, piers and buildings completely swept away," the message as picked up here read. "Lights and communications cut off. Landing survey damage and determine casualties if any.

"Last reports indicate property damage considerable. Cher Hotel unroofed. Base personnel patrolling waterfront."

Coast guard officers here were of the opinion the hotel name was garbled in transmission.

FIFTEEN FLEE IN BED GARB

Laval Hotel At St. Rose, Quebec, Is Destroyed Early Saturday

St. Rose, Que., Sept. 16 (CP) — Fire destroyed the Laval Hotel here early today as fifteen guests and the hotel staff fled in night attire. Montmorency firemen were summoned to aid the St. Rose force fight the flames, which were reported under control shortly after dawn.

The blaze, which started in the room of the proprietor, completely demolished the hotel and for a time threatened to destroy the whole town. Chief L. Ouimet of the local fire brigade sent his men to Montmorency for aid. The cook, Clermont, owner and manager of the hotel, woke up the guests and by a hasty retreat in their night clothes as the flames roared through the lower floorings.

Several guests had to be carried from the building by firemen. An unidentified young man jumped into the burning building at the last moment and had to be carried out unconscious as she tried to escape. The damage was roughly estimated at $25,000.

PRIES JAIL DOOR LOOSE WITH BAR

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 16 — Arthur Grandmason, 17, was sought by police after escaping from the city jail by prying open a door with an iron bar he found in the boiler room. He had been held for the chief parole officer after acquittal on a theft charge. He had been on parole from the Ontario Reformatory.

Wilbred Luscelles, 19, who had been remanded a week in custody, was arrested charged with aiding the escape.

BODY LASHED TO MAST IS DISCOVERED

Lifeguards At Toronto Dare Storm To Recover Victim's Body

SAILING DINGHY

Wife of Toronto Man Just Misses Being On Doomed Craft

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Another tragedy of the lake was discovered early yesterday morning when an overturned sailing dinghy was washed ashore, near the foot of Woodbine Avenue, with the body of Martin Flowersmith, aged 27, at 67 Bertand Avenue, lashed securely to the boat.

Lifeguards at the Leuty Avenue Station noticed the dinghy out in the lake, and when it was washed near shore swam out through the terrific undertow to pull it up on the beach. It was not until they were near shore that they noticed the young man's body floating undermeath the boat.

Flowersmith, with his wife, had been on a camping vacation, having left a week ago today, sailing eastward until they reached Oshawa. Yesterday morning the young wife, who was resting, ill and cold, decided to take their dog and make the return trip by bus. Flowersmith was to tow the boat as far as Frenchman's Bay, where he was to meet his wife, who had stopped off near Pickering to visit her husband's mother.

At noon yesterday Flowersmith's wife and mother prepared a lunch and left the cabin and the boat, and said that he would sail the dinghy back to Toronto in spite of the heavy wind which made the lake dangerous. His wife continued the trip by bus, and arrived here only to learn of the tragedy which left her husband and the father of their 1-year-old son Schaefield.

The mast of the boat was broken off at the gunwale and had fallen out, but the rest of the equipment was intact. Whether Flowersmith lashed himself to the boat before it overturned or afterward is not known.

ARCHBISHOP FLEMING 'BISHOP OF ARCTIC'

New Diocese Is Established, Also New Yukon Diocese

Winnipeg, Sept. 16 (CP)—Archbishop A. L. Fleming is Bishop of the new "Diocese of the Arctic" and Rt. Rev. Dr. W. A. Geddes, who has been Bishop of the Yukon, is Bishop of the new Diocese, is the new Bishop of the Yukon.

The appointments were made last night at the closing sessions of the Provincial Synod of the Ecclesiastical Province of Rupert's Land.

Earlier in the day Archbishop had been made to form a diocese of the Arctic by eliminating the diocese of Mackenzie River and making other diocesan boundary arrangements. The appointments were formally announced by Archbishop I. O. Stringer in bringing the Synod proceedings to a close late last night.

Serious Turn In Condition of James Seymour Develops

James Seymour of Campbellford the victim of the shooting accident near that town Thursday evening, and now a patient in the Belleville General Hospital is reported this morning as in a serious condition.

Dr. George Hall, Dr. George H. Stobie, was called to his bedside at 6 o'clock this morning, and said later conditions have developed which make the case more serious and doubtful.

LEAK FIRES CARBIDE CARGO

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 16.—Water seeping through a leak ignited a cargo of carbide on the barge W. H. Simons last night in Lake Huron off Alpena, Mich., and the barge was burned. The Simons, one of a string of four barges, had loaded the carbide at Sault, Mich., and was down-bound. Spontaneous combustion caused the leak.

WITCHCRAFT TRIAL ENDS

All Men of Village Are Involved In Case

Aressalaam, Tanganyika, East Africa, Sept. 16 (AP)—A mass "witchcraft" trial in which all the male inhabitants of an isolated Tanganyika village were involved resulted today in the conviction of 71 assailants of two women believed by villagers to be witches.

Sentences ranging from six months imprisonment upwards were imposed. The original charge of manslaughter was reduced to rioting. This district is British mandated territory.

Urged by an agnieni superstition, men of the village allegedly attacked a mother and daughter as witches. The women were so badly mutilated they eventually died.

OPERATORS SIGNING CODE

Unanimous Agreement Is Expected By This Afternoon

IRELAND DEFEATS SCOTLAND

Glasgow, Sept. 16—Ireland defeated Scotland 2-1 today in the first international game of the season. The match was played before 22,000 spectators at Celtic Park. Ireland led by two goals at half time.

The Kingston Penitentiary Riots

We have not been discussing in this paper the question of Penitentiary administration which has been so much in the public eye of late, and we are not just now discussing the administration as such, but we have been hearing so many people asking so many questions about the riots which occurred last October that we thought it might be interesting to our readers to give answers to some of those questions.

There seem to be three questions uppermost in the minds of the people,

FIRST—Just what did occur on October 17th. last in the Kingston Penitentiary which constitutes a riot?

SECOND—If we are to believe all that is said in the newspapers these days about the conditions in the Penitentiary, then why were these men found guilty by the judges of rioting at all?

THIRD—Since the offence charged was punishable with seven years, why—if the men were guilty—were the sentences so light?

These three questions are answered in the judgment rendered by His Honour Judge Deroche in the Murray Kirkland case, being,the first case tried by him which occupied nine days.

Judge Deroche has very kindly consented to let us have this judgment, and we will in the next three issues of this paper answer these three questions by quoting from that judgment.

In Monday's issue the question will be answered just what did occur in detail on the afternoon or October 17th. in the Kingston Penitentiary.

Constable Wickett Arrests Quartette Only To Lose Them

OFFICER IS UPSET

Men Suspected of Stealing Car From Port Hope

Four unidentified men travelling in an allegedly stolen automobile escaped from County Constable Wickett at Stirling following their arrest by that officer about 2.00 a.m. Saturday. The quartette had been arrested as they sat in a car, that had been reported stolen some three hours previous at Port Hope, with the vehicle well secluded behind the C.N.R. station at Stirling. The officer came upon the car after reports had been received relating to suspicious-looking characters being seen on the side streets of Stirling.

After their arrest the constable took the men to his own home where he had intended informing the Provincial Police and turning his prisoners over to that department. As they were about to enter the house one of the men made a wild dash for liberty, momentarily upsetting the officer. The remaining three then successfully took to their heels also.

The Provincial Police were soon at the scene of the escapade, but despite the fact the surrounding community was well searched the quartette had apparently made a successful escape. A vivid description of two of the car thieves was given out by Constable Wickett.

The escaping prisoners reduced the pursuing constable by way of their actions and back streets through the north side of Stirling. The automobile at Port Hope was notified of the recovery of the stolen car. Owing to the fact that only a little gasoline was found in the tank of the stolen car it was thought likely that the four men in the quartette were but biding their time until they could successfully break and enter a gasoline station nearby to equip their stolen car with gas and oil. The police are still scouring that section of the country for traces of the escaped quartette.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 16—The severe tropical storm centred this morning near Cape Hatteras, is moving slowly northeastward and there is a high over Quebec and the Maritimes. Light showers have occurred in the Lake Ontario and St. Lawrence and moderate to heavy rains have been general in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Northern Alberta. It has been fair and cool in Quebec and the Maritimes, and warm and quite fine over the western Provinces.

Forecasts: Ontario — Southeast winds: cloudy tonight and Sunday with showers.

Lake Superior—Fresh to locally strong east and southeast winds; partly cloudy, followed by showers.

Ketora and Rainy River—Fresh shifting winds; cloudy with occasional rain.

Manitoba—Unsettled with occasional rain.

INCREASE OF CURRENCY

Hon. Chas. Stewart Favors Increase For Payment Public Works

Blue Ridge, Alta., Sept. 16 (AP)—Issue of currency for the payment of public works to the extent of $100,000,000 was in Canada advocated by Hon. Charles Stewart, M.P., for West Edmonton, and former Minister of Interior, in order that "800,000 of our people in the bread line might find places in society."

Mr. Stewart made this suggestion in an address to a large meeting here last night. W. R. Howson, Alberta Liberal leader also addressed the meeting.

GUILTY, SAYS GEO. BAILEY

Admits Eight Charges of Theft, While Wilson Pleads Guilty

Changing his plea to that of guilty, George Bailey, Palm Avenue, who was arrested after a wild chase through the woods near Thomasburg, last Saturday by the Provincial Police after the alleged breaking and entering of Oliver's Store in Thomasburg, was remanded for sentence until Monday when he was Frank Wilson, Jr., who had previously pleaded guilty to the same charge. The cases were heard in the local police court Saturday morning.

Bailey also pleaded guilty to seven other charges of theft, ranging from the theft of gasoline for cars stolen by him to an indictable offence of breaking and entering a store at Read recently. Wilson, in the same court pleaded guilty to six previous charges.

Both apprehension of Bailey and Wilson and their pleading guilty clears up a large number of thefts and robberies that have terrified the district from north of Belleville during the past three months. His Worship, Magistrate Mikel, enlarged the cases until Monday for sentence following a request from Crown Attorney A. C. Ponton, that Provincial Police investigated the entire case.

STEAMER BECKWITH BLOWS OUT BOILER

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—The Radio-Marine Corporation today picked up a wireless message that the steamer Beckwith, of Reedville, Va., blew out a boiler off Fourteen Foot Land Light and was leaking badly.

The message was sent by the steamer New Brunswick and said that a coast guard ship had the distressed vessel in tow. No casualties were reported.

L. F. GREEN GOES TO CONFERENCE

Lorne F. Green, superintendent of the Government Employment Service office of this city will leave the city on Monday to attend the three day convention of the Ontario Office superintendents of the Employment Service of Canada, being held in the Parliament Buildings, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. The functioning of the employment services during the period of depression will be the chief topic of discussion. Experts from Cleveland and Rochester are to be present at the convention which will be opened by Hon. Dr. J. D. Monteith, Minister of Labor, and his Deputy Minister.

THOUGH GUNS BLAZE NO ACCIDENTS YET

Despite the large number of duck hunters, who are invading nearby marshes daily in search of the elusive ducks there have been no accidents reported in this district directly attributable to the duck shooting season. Veteran hunters believe that the critical period for accidents is over. They point to the fact that the first few opening days have always attracted the tyros at the sport, with the consequent danger connected with the inexperienced handling of firearms. But the hunters now have managed to return to the city with the limit, or even a small bag of the birds.

THURLOW LIBERALS HOLD BARN DANCE

Held under the auspices of the Thurlow Liberal Association, a huge barn dance in the new barn at Mr. Wm. Mathews on the Geo. Thomas Road, Thurlow, last evening was a decided success. Over four hundred visitors from Thurlow, Belleville and from throughout the district enjoyed the novelty of the old time and modern dances which had been arranged. During the evening several addresses were given by Liberal candidates, including Dr. Faulkner, of this city, Peter MacLaren, of Wellington and Sam Campbell, of Ameliasburg. Buffet lunch was available for the many visitors who attended the function. The dance was held under the chairmanship of Joseph Brazden of Thurlow and Mr. Wm. Mathews was the host. The Artill's orchestra furnished the music for the entertainment.

Little Damage Done By Friday's Blow

One battered skiff, washed into open water from the north shore of the Bay or Quinte some distance east of the city is believed to be the sum total of damage following Friday's severe blow on the lakes and the bay. The craft is believed to have been blown and washed by the wind and waves out through the gap at Massassaga. It is owned by Freddy Marsh, who is at present searching for the missing boat.

FRUIT DAY ON CITY MARKET

All Kinds of Produce Offered On Local Market

Although Belleville's Saturday market was not as large as that of a week ago, purchasers and vendors were present in large numbers before 7 a.m. there was a creditable showing of farmers from the district, on the outside market with their commodities arranged for early buyers. The inside market fell off considerably from last Saturday's, both in numbers selling and the amount of produce shown. Butter principally is a minus quantity on the Belleville market of late.

It was very much of a fruit day on the market square, melons which have predominated the market days of the past several days were shown in quantity but the slacking off had started in; peaches are also on their last run and grapes have not yet been offered for sale in any great quantity.

Flowers made bright the outside market and one horticulturist had a nice display of dahlia blooms to enable purchasers to place orders for tubers the coming year. Potted chrysanthemums in miniature bud brought 50 cents a pair. Cut flowers in profusion were offered for 5 and 10 cents a bunch and gladioli 15, 20 and 25 cents a dozen.

There was a wonderful offering of tempting appearing home-cooking offered for sale and was readily purchased.

Apples, all varieties, 20 and 25 cents a peck, 75 cents a bushel; pears 45 and 50 cents a peck; peaches 50 cents a basket; grapes, Concords 25 and Niagara 35 cents a basket; grapes 35 cents 11 quart basket; plums, Damsons 30 and 45 cents a peck, other varieties 25, 30 and 35 cents for like measure. Melons sold from 5 and 10 cents upward to 25 cents. Several huge native muskmelons were on sale weighing from 22 to 25 pounds each and were sold at from 40 to 50 cents.

Egg plants 5 and 10 cents each; cauliflower 15, 20, 25 and 30 cents each; Chinese lettuce 10 cents; celery 5 and 10 cents a bunch; corn 10 cents a dozen, 3 dozen for 25 cents; squash, green and yellow, 10 and 15 cents each; pie pumpkin 5 and 10 cents each; green and red peppers 10 cents a dozen; radishes, white and red, 5 cents a bunch and 3 for 10 cents; tomatoes 45 and 50 cents a bushel; cabbage, white, 5 cents, 3 for 10 cents, red, 5 cents and some 2 for 5 cents; turnips 3 for 10 cents; potatoes 25 cents a peck, 90 a bushel; carrots, beets, parsnips and onions 5 cents a bunch; pickling onions 10 and 15 cents a quart and pickling cucumbers 20, 25 and 30 cents a basket. Only a small supply of the latter two commodities were this morning offered for sale, the recent frosts having had disastrous effect on the cucumber vines of the district.

There was a small offering of fish this morning. White fish 15 cents and lake trout 10 cents a pound. With cooler weather prevailing muskrats were sold in considerable quantity at 10 cents a pound.

Inside Market

Butter 25 cents a pound; eggs 20 cents a dozen with a few at 18 cents; cream 35 cents a pint; honey 40 cents for 1 pound pail, 75 cents, 45, 50, 60 to 85 cents each; chickens 65, 70, 90, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 a pair; ducks 65 and 75 cents each.

CHEESE

At Saturday's session of the Belleville Cheese Board, 1,478 white cheese were offered for sale and all sold at 10 9-16 cents, the same price as paid a week ago.

At the Board, the corresponding Saturday in 1932, 1,231 cheese were sold at 11 1-16 cents, the top price during that season.

Big Shots in Wrestling World at Final Karnival Program

This has surely been a great week of variety at the Kiwanis Karnival and as the crowning feature of all they end the Big Show tonight with two high class wrestling bouts, staged in the main auditorium of the Armouries and it is to be clearly understood that these are not to be a couple of pink tea affairs by a couple of amateurs, but just the opposite.

Frankie Hart, Belleville's old favorite, will meet Bert Rubenstein, the Jewish lad from Detroit, who appeared in a local ring about a year ago, and judging from his appearances was somewhat of what the fans term a "bad man."

Al Getzewich, the ex-masked marvel, who met Mayes McLain in the main bout, is no stranger in this man's town. Everytime Al and his bemasked manager appear in a local ring the fans can be assured of action personified. As for McLain his recent Toronto bouts with Malcewicz, Szabo and Savoild have stamped the ex-Oklahoma football star as one of the best grapplers in the business. McLain pins his hopes on the use of the flying tackle, a hold that is always thrilling and punishing.

Promoter Jack Corcoran assured the Kiwanis Club a real big town show and is accompanying his boys to Belleville. A bang-up rasslin' show should be a novel way in which to close the Karnival tonight. In all probability Jackie Forbes, another favorite in this city, will be the third man in the ring. The Kiwanis Club have gone to considerable expense in presenting this wrestling show as they had to erect a special ring for the occasion.

RUTH TELLS OF TRAINING

Swim Star Not of Husky Type Expected of Swimmers

SLEEP, EAT, SWIM

Slim, graceful and friendly, Ruth Tower Corcan, whose exploits as a swimmer have won her an honoured place in the sporting world, charmed Belleville when she appeared at the Kiwanis Karnival last evening.

"She isn't a bit like I expected", was the general pleased comment heard everywhere. Evidently most people had the idea that girl athletes were more hard and her handsome husband, Captain G. H. Corcan, who acts as her trainer, while chatting with the Ontario Intelligencer Mrs. Corcan explained that the business of training for the big swim began eight weeks in advance. The daily program includes four miles, swimming, bed at nine, and hearty meals of steaks and similar foods.

"It's just sleep, eat and swim for the six weeks" she said.

"Especially eat. I put on ten pounds during the swim and I lost three pounds during the marathon".

"You don't have any special training schedule during the year. I do whatever, I like and then begin the training eight weeks ahead for the plunge."

"You make it sound very simple!"

"Well, it isn't very simple," she laughed, "but then it isn't so exhausting if you are in good condition, as I was. Of course you have to be perfect health on the physicians won't pass you."

Ruth Tower Corcan learned to swim when she was seven and won her first contest the same year at Honolulu.

"Mother has that ribbon yet, haven't you mother?" and she turned teasingly to her charming mother-in-law who was here in fact I was so nervous I wouldn't let mother come. I was only seven but when I was fifteen, a fifty yard dash."

"I did come, though," interrupted Mrs. Tower, "I arrived just in time to see Ruth win the race."

"Are you going to enter the marathon next year?" Mrs. Corcan was asked.

"I don't know: It's a long way ahead. You know, it's funny. You think you won't go in the next one but when the time comes you get the urge and start training again."

Mrs. Quigg was also here herself and one of Ruth's fondest admirers, said she wasn't a bit anxious about the proposed marathon swim.

"I was thrilled at being able to follow her in her boat."

Mrs. Tower is very appreciative of the way in which Belleville folks have taken Ruth to their hearts and glory in her success.

"I think the people are just wonderful. They are so proud of Ruth's success, and have been so kind to her," she said.

Mrs. Tower Quigg and her party motored back to Toronto, last evening.

I Stake My Reputation on this "Ad"

This announcement comes from the heart. Every word is true. No word is an exaggeration! This theatre lives by the good will of this city. I stake that good will on what I promise you in this advertisement! I was privileged to attend a private screening of "Paddy The Next Best Thing", in Toronto, recently, and at the end of the picture I left the screen room proud and happy that I was to be privileged to present to my patrons one of the outstanding pictures of the new season. My personal guarantee is behind "Paddy, The Next Best Thing".

GODFREY FINED $200 IN STILL OPERATION

Not Paying Fine He is Lodged in County Jail

Found guilty of operating a still Frank Godfrey of Bancroft was fined $200.00 in the county police magistrate's court on Magistrate Wiggins at Bancroft yesterday or in default of payment serve six months in the common jail. The fine not being paid Godfrey was lodged in the county jail.

The case arose following a successful raid by the R.C.M.P. on a still operated by Godfrey near Bancroft. Seven quarts of illicit liquor were found along with a complete still in operation. Some two months ago the R.C.M.P. missed Godfrey when a similar raid was made by the R.C.M.P. at which time the young man's father was convicted of operating an illicit still.

The younger Godfrey joined his father in the county jail yesterday.

Cadet Training is Not to be Compulsory, Board Will Not Pay Any Costs

County Council Protest Over Fee Rouses Debate

SUMMER BILLS

Board of Education May Consider Reversion To Two Boards

Following an earnest discussion relating to the abolition of cadet training in the local Collegiate and public schools the Belleville Board of Education, at its regular meeting following the summer vacation, adopted a notice of motion whereby cadet training will no longer be compulsory nor will it be carried on at any further expense to the taxpayers. This decision was reached after the members had aired their personal ideas and notions of solution at the Collegiate last evening following the reading of a letter from the Militia headquarters in Kingston relative to the lowering of the cadet training fees and the cancellation of all government reimbursements in the cadet training in schools.

When the correspondence from the Department of the National Defence was first read Mr. Allin immediately spoke in favor of having the discontinuation of cadet training in all local schools. Many points came up during the discussion which followed when it was pointed out by some of the members of the board that a form of compulsion had, it was said, been used to bring the cadets enlisted in the schools cadet corps. "I am not against cadet training if it is made optional at school hours," stated Mr. Allin, "but I know for a fact that too much time is taken up with the training during periods when the scholars should be receiving their tuition."

Mr. Bethyer and Mr. Moncrief were in favor of cadet training while Mr. J. W. Barlow was against forcing boys to take up cadet training if they conscientiously objected to it. "We're paying the instructors to teach during school hours why not teach them to get further remuneration for training cadets when this work is done between the hours of, say 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.?" asked Mr. Barlow.

K. Col. W. Ponton took the floor and pleaded for the cause of cadet training. The veteran member thought that cadet training was an asset to the school and to the individual scholar. He pointed with pride to the records of the past established by local corps. It was following his plea that the board recommended that cadet training remain within the schools but it was no longer to be of a compulsory nature nor will the pupils bear bear any expense regarding cadet training in the future.

Hydro Bill Protested

Previous to the opening of the first meeting of the autumn term, Chairman A. R. Schryver welcomed all the members after the vacation. He especially welcomed back to his duties Secretary J. B. Findlay. The board at once went into committee of the whole with Chas. Hyde in the chair. The matter of passing accounts was passed and all accounts were approved. During the recess the board expenditures amounting to $6,232.25 were necessary. One bill presented, the Hydro bill was questioned, however. The board going on record as protesting the paying of Hydro service charges during the summer months when the schools are closed. Mr. Schryver thought it absurd that the board was forced to take money from the taxpayers and turn around and hand it over to a city utility, such as the Hydro. "It seems a service charge during the summer months we're paying for something we're not getting," said the chairman. The matter was left in abeyance.

In the matter of reports various requests for repairs and supplies were passed. P. C. MacLaurin, principal of the Collegiate, submitted a report showing an increased number of scholars attending the collegiate. He asked for additions to the school library such as new maps, but when a grant for the football team was asked the matter brought up a short discussion regarding the dispensation of the school's registration fee. The board was of the opinion that as this money did not pass through their hands they had no control over it. This and the matter of the football grant were left in the hands of the principal.

Canadian Coal Bought

The supplies committee, Mr. Allin as chairman, reported that some 900 tons of Nova Scotia coal had been purchased at the price of $5.45 per ton, with an additional 100 tons being supplied at $5.50 per ton, the latter named being for schools where no stoker was in operation. Mrs. Florence Carr had been appointed as teacher at Queen Mary School, while Mr. George Laughlin was engaged to assume the duties of physical culture at the Collegiate. A recommendation to provide the basement at Queen Alexandra School was adopted while a request by several teachers to reopen the night school and teach Civics, Physics and Mathematics was refused.

County Council Protest

A letter from the Hastings County Council was read and aroused considerable comment. The board members were being extorted by means of the annual fee of $1 per pupil which is levied on county pupils." The members took exception to the fee and instructed the secretary to inform the county council the truth of the matter. The letter also referred to the fee as being humiliating as those not paying the fee had their names published on the blackboard. This portion of the letter was deemed unfair by the members while others not so certain, stated they had heard some mention of this. The secretary of the Collegiate will be instructed to discontinue this practice.

A lengthy discussion brought to light by Mr. Moncrief relative to the reduction of school supplies was defeated inasmuch as the original motion was to reduce the fees 50 per cent. It was later decided to lay the matter over until next April and if the board had a surplus on hand then the board would look into the matter of dispensing with all future payments on school supplies for the remainder of the year. The advisability of the parents purchasing their children's school supplies from the board was urged.

Board Reconstruction

The notice of motion regarding the possibility of reducing the present school board from one of 21 members to one of ten members, elected by the taxpayers, and one appointed by the Separate School Board was thoroughly discussed by the members and many pros and cons raised. Mr. J. W. Barlow, who introduced the motion pointed out that with a large and unwieldy board the members of various committees were meeting only on an average of one or five times a month. These meetings were costing the board too much money in the lighting and heating of the board rooms. Col. Ponton asked the board to think more seriously of the matter before acting, as it would mean, but two members from the Collegiate on the board. Following a lengthy discussion it was decided to appoint a committee of three to look into the advisability of reducing the number. Mr. Schryver then at or separating it into two distinct bodies as was in vogue some years ago and which was satisfactory and another to operate the public schools. "I would much rather see them revert back to the old regime than reduce our members," said Col. Ponton as the meeting adjourned at 11.45 p.m.

SAYS MUCH CRIME IS DUE TO HUNGER

Mrs. Evelyn Gonzales is New York's Youngest Prosecutor

New York, Sept. 16 (CP) — As Mrs. Evelyn Gonzales, New York's sole woman prosecutor, has delivered answers on a number of crime questions:

Some of her observations:

"Most criminals are undernourished. Much crime is due to hunger and the want of money.

"Most so-called wayward girls aren't really bad. In 99 cases out of 100 their environment and not jail will reclaim them.

"Young women shoplifters steal solely for vanity's sake. Branding them convicts is disastrous to society.

"Girls don't commit crimes of violence. I have never yet seen a gun moll."

Mrs. Gonzalez husband, Antonio C. was recently named United States Minister to Panama. Mrs. Gonzales will quit her role as Assistant District Attorney on September 25, a few days before they leave for the tropical republic.

ATTRACTIONS AT LOCAL THEATRES

AT THE BELLE

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are together again for the first time since they were seen in "Daddy Long Legs," the talking picture for Fox Film, "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," it opens today (Saturday) at the Belle Theatre for an engagement of two days.

In this film Miss Gaynor and Baxter respond to the popular demand for more pictures in which they are both featured. In the roles they portray are the type, which give each of them their greatest opportunities thus far. Miss Gaynor is a young, impish colleen who adds a strong dash of roughishness to her famous wistfulness and thereby creates a new kind of character herself. Baxter has the part of a big-hearted fellow who, much as he may try, cannot help falling head over heels for her.

The story centres around the romances of these two persons. At first Miss Gaynor is interested in Miss Gaynor's for another man, and Baxter's for another girl. But the development of the plot finally does send them to each other and makes them realize their mutual love, even against their will.

The characters that they portray are Irish through and through with the quaint intimacy of a village on the Irish coast contrasting with the cosmopolitan life of a much-travelled sportsman. It is this element of difference that is regarded as the means for giving this film some of its most distinctive qualities.

Walter Connolly, highly reputed for his work in "Lady for a Day" has a featured role in support of Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter, while Andy Devine, Margaret Seehorn, Margaret Lindsay, Mary Forbes, Georgette Harvey, Clarence Muse, Flake O'Hara, Claire McDowell, Marie Trottenham, Roger Imhof and Steve Hlinka.

"Paddy, the Next Best Thing" was directed by John Ford, whose name has shown the skill that made him famous abroad as a director of Irish films. Janet Gaynor, Warner With such supervision, an excellent cast and a magnificent production "Paddy" is perfect entertainment.

An ocean of fun is promised in "Sail Away" which is now at the Capitol for Avondale, 2 B 2 for Ameliasburg and 3 Q 4 Yr. for 2 Adjoining Yrs.

Hailey comedy to be presented on the program with "Over the Counter" is a smart and different local comedy revue.

Original Oklahoma Cowboys

Ken Hackley and his Oklahoma Cowboys, nationally known radio entertainers, are coming to the Belle Theatre to appear in person on the stage as the newest of radio entertainers. Each and every member is an accomplished cowboy musician, playing and singing a total of twenty-two string instruments.

They have been featured over CROT radio station at Toronto this week, where they have made many friends of their listeners. This group, of novel western entertainers have been heard over sixty radio stations throughout the country and also featured by the National Broadcasting Company on their coast-to-coast network of thirty-six stations. Every member of the band appeared in person they have shown to large crowds who were very much enthused with their program and appearance. So when you see them at the Belle Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee and daily, in addition to an excellent screen program you will see many kinds, kinds of laughs, plenty of pep, a typical cowboy entertainment of playin', singin', yellin', dancin'.

AT THE CAPITOL

A Scintillating Comedy

A brilliant cast directed by a famous stage-director in a hectic story with excruciating dialogue against magnificent settings — that's "Sail Away" which opens at the Capitol Theatre today (Saturday) for a two-day engagement.

Gene Gerrard, the popular star of "Rookies" and "Lucky Girl" is the leading light of "Sail Away" which he produced and starred in same, and his chief accomplice is Claude Dampier, famous Australian radio wireless performer. Viola Lyel and Sydney Howard support them.

The story concerns the adventures of one George Hunter, who, to put himself obliged to explain to his wife who wants to leave him his "girl friend," who won't leave him, an old friend, Claude Dampier, and a fat old lady, all on the same day is quite unable to satisfy each one of them, without giving himself away to the other. Gene who is, of course, the unfortunate George, and Claude, as a very amusing Australian, steal the show, however, and all come out right with George's matrimonial ship safely anchored and everybody happy.

Comedy Revealed

Buck Jones does the trim uniform of the Canadian Royal Northwest Mounted Police in his latest Columbia picture, "McKenna of the Mounted," now on view at the Capitol Theatre, and the result is a thrilling north-country picture such as we too seldom see.

Buck is equally at home tapestry of green forests and mountains, in "McKenna of the Mounted" is crammed with emotion, riding, fighting, intrigue and other elements dear to movie audiences, which prefer these virile outdoor films.

Columbia has surrounded Jones with a notable cast, including Greta Granstedt as the heroine, Nles Welch and Mitchell Lewis as villains, Walter McGrail and James Flavin as members of the Mounties. The picture has a skilfully developed dramatic plot, which lifts it far beyond the usual outdoor action film.

Buck Jones plays the role of Sergeant McKenna, known as "the man Mounties, who always "gets his man." There has been a series of robberies which has included ten picturesque custodians of law and order in the neighborhood, and he decides on a plan to trap the gang of male-fakers and its leader. To do so, he joins the outlaws to learn the identity of the mysterious chief. In time, with many skilfully planned depredations are bringing disgrace to the Mounties.

First in this secret service campaign comes the arrest of Nora as a robber, and his humiliating discharge from the service. He becomes a pariah—a social outcast in the town. Not even his own brother knows the truth behind his sacrifice. Nor does his pretty sweetheart.

Finally, McKenna reaches the inner circle of the thieves, herded by those able actors, Niles Welch, and Mitchell Lewis. They discover his track and set a trap to have him killed by the Mounties. Pitched in desperate situation, McKenna sets out-wits the pair. Most of the gang is captured by the Mounties and McKenna brings in the head of the gang, the girl, Nora, in the end, and is honorably restored to the service and promoted to command the Mounties post.

Complete performances today (Saturday), Monday and Tuesday commence at 2.45, 7.15 and at 9.25.

Monday and Tuesday are Dinnerware Gift days for ladies.

Seven Schools in Sidney Tp. Take Part in Rural School Exhibition at Wallbridge

Town Hall, Ball Field And School Grounds Used

PRIZE-WINNERS

There was a noted falling off in attendance and in the exhibits at the Sidney Township Annual Rural School Fair, which was held at Wallbridge, Friday morning and afternoon. Seven schools only out of a large school area took part in the school-room parade, the Strathcona exercises and school choruses. Outside events were held in the Wallbridge school grounds, and took place on the diamond back of the cheese factory and the smaller exhibits were housed in the Town Hall, while poultry and stock were shown in the yard and adjacent shed.

There was good quality in the specimens exhibited, and it is hoped that next year's prize list will receive closer attention, and the boys and girls of Sidney Township will vie fairly, which long held premier place in the school fairs of the county to slip from the enviable position it holds.

The following are the boy and girl fair directors throughout the township:

S.S. No. 2, Avondale, — Jack Livesey.

S.S. No. 2, Bayside, —Cyril Lewis

S.S. No. 2, Quinte View—Phyllis Smith.

S.S. No. 4,—Harold Dickens.

S.S. No. 5—Billa Ketcheson.

S.S. No. 7—Harold Morrow.

S.S. No. 10—Harold Morrow.

S.S. No. 12—Irene Walt.

S.S. No. 13—Mary Emery

S. S. No. 17—Vivian Smith.

S.S. No. 20—George Meagher

S.S. No. 20—Vera Delzio.

S.S. No. 20—Jack Gilbert

The following were prize winners with the number of their school mentioned after their names:

PROBLEM OF YOUTH

One of the greatest tragedies of this period lies in the situation of those who are just entering upon adult life, those who are about to end their education and to take up active callings and those who are held back from education by reason of the very stress of the times.

Will the present condition of affairs leave an abiding influence upon the individual and the entire age itself is a question yet to be answered as probably the complete answer is not yet written?

The middlegaged and older have their problems, very pressing ones, even including the maintenance of their children at school, but their characters were largely set in a day when hard past and which did not demand so much as today does of the young.

Loss of money means a great deal in the modern world which in a large measure is founded on a money basis, and there are very serious problems arising out of the money situation and these are becoming more and more serious. They concern the very soul of the people who are on forced relief and the initial start of the young men and women who find a scarcity of jobs today. It used to be that the man out of a job was looked upon as one who was an idler for jobs were to be had for the asking, but today the jobs to be secured are few and far apart.

There is danger in idleness as is pointed out by social workers. And there is much little to do to make that money which proves him a somebody in the world, the possessor of ordinary talents. And these are the unfortunates of those who are succeeding the last generation which was all but wiped out in the war.

COCKNEYS LIKE ROMANS DROP "H"

Mr. Charles M. Garvey, K.C., has put forward, for the entertainment of our readers an interesting theory as to why London cockneys insert "h's" where these do not belong and omit them where they should occur. According to this theory, they derive this unnecessary aspirate from the ancient Romans who occupied Great Britain, more or less, for several hundred years, and who were the first to make London, or Londinium as they called it, a place of importance. Our correspondent quotes a poem by Catullus to show that a certain class of Romans in that day intruded the aspirate in inopportune places. The Latin poet's malicious verse reads:

Chommoda dicebat, si quando commoda vellet
dicere, et inscitia Arrius hinsidias.
Et tum mirabar quid sibi Arrius, hinsidias cum quantum poterat dixerat hinsidias.
Credo, sic mater, sic liber, avuncubus ejus, sic maternus avus dixerat atque ava.
Hoc misero frustratus est lumine Romulus aures:
audibant eadem haec leniter et leviter,
nec sibi postilla metuebant talia verbo.
cum subito affertur nuntius horrificus,
Lentos fructus, postquam illas Arrius isset,
iam non Ionios esse, sed Hionios.

By a rough and ready translation, the stanza may be said to read thus:— "If Arrius ever wishes to say 'commods' he says 'chommodas' for 'insidiae' he will say 'hinsidias'. And then he considers that he has spoken wonderfully well when he said 'hinsidias' at the top of his voice. Undoubtedly his mother did likewise, and so did his maternal uncle, who is a freedman. So also did his maternal grandfather and ancestors, their mouth had been sent into Syria the ears of all got a rest. They heard these same words spoken gently and lightly. Nor did they fear such words afterwards until a messenger suddenly brought back word that the Ionian waves, after Arrius had crossed them, were no longer 'Ionian,' but "Hionian."

Arrius is the boy who speaks is mentioned by Cicero in his Brutus as a man of low origin and slender abilities, who won his way to eminence by his officious ness. In 55 BC., he went to Syria with Marcus Crassus. Two thousand years is a long time for an accent or a peculiarity of speech to persist, but, in any event, the theory gives students of language a theme over which to ponder. It is unnecessary to say that not all cockneys by any means mutilate their aspirates. All persons borne within the sound of Bow Bells are cockneys, and probably the majority are on perfectly good terms with their "H's."

"HIS BANNER OVER ME WAS LOVE"

Beneath His royal banner
How can I doubt or fear?
Its floatin r folds protect me
When danger lurketh near—
When all the way is weary
And clouds are dark above
I rest beneath His banner—
The banner of His love.

His patience, love and kindness
Have blessed my every path,
Although my trials and failings,
Deserve His righteous wrath—
But, oh! His love constraineth
And draws me to His side,
That I beneath His banner
Forever may abide.

KIWANIS KARNIVAL for the year 1933 closes tonight with a bang—a bang-up program of entertainment and an unusual feature for affairs of this kind, a real honest-to-goodness wrestling match between two professionals. Generally these exhibitions of manly strength and skill between the giants of the mat profession are produced before mele audiences only, and the decision of the Kiwanians to stage a wrestling match between two experts at the Karnival is evidence of the belief that the fair sex of Belleville would like to see one of these exciting battles. Exciting they are, when the mat men are battling for marbles, money or championship belts—they never fail to put on a good show, and no doubt before a mixed audience they will endeavor to please the customers—SO! step up ladies and gentlemen, the big show is about to begin, when the Terrible Turk will try to take apart the Great Russian Bear—flesh, flesh, feet, toeholds, nelsons, half nelsons, and flying mares—nothing will be barred but Stranglers' deadly wrangle hold, which has been ruled out of polite society. Everything else goes, even the ropes, over and under them. And all for the good of community—Kiwanis work all the winter, helping the sick, the hungry, clothing the children and helping them to get an education. Help Kiwanis and help the helpless. Do your one good deed Saturday by helping to put a glorious and successful finish on the 1933 Kiwanis Karnival.

CHAMPIONSHIP BELT for the meanest person in Belleville should be awarded to the person who stole the hand organ, man, Billy Lane, blind news merchant, whose place of business is at the corner of Front and Bridge Street, has a collection of tin discs which have been issued to him in the purchase of goods. Billy is making a courageous effort to support himself and wife and child, despite the handicap of blindness, and it seems incredible that anyone should try to take anything away from him.

NOW IS THE TIME TO DUCK said the old duck who had passed through many seasons with the frost on his head and feet are falling all around him. Jack Dempsey forgot to duck and Gene Tunney took the championship away from him, but the old duck neglects to duck and he goes before the onslaught of Belleville hunters, will be in the soup, or at least in the roast pan.

MOLLISONS, JIM AND AMY, flew from Wales to Connecticut, and landed in a blaze of glory, almost under the bright lights of Broadway which they were aiming at. The plane was put out of business so Jim went back home and brought another one out. This time he plans a more ambitious flight, from Toronto to Bagdad. Amy is a bit dubious, however, thinking the season too far advanced to undertake such a long flight, especially as weather conditions over the Atlantic are liable to be stormy at this time of the year. Notwithstanding Amy's fears Jim is going ahead with arrangements for the flight, and no doubt Amy Johnson-Mollison will be at his side when he starts, if and when.

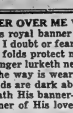
The super saloon car skidded on the slippery country road, and the back wheels landed in the ditch. For over half an hour the chauffeur tried to get it out but his efforts were of no avail.

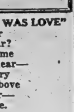
Presently a small "baby" car came along and the driver offered to help. The offer being gratefully accepted, a rope was hitched to the big car, and without any apparent effort the "baby" pulled it back on the road once again.

The owner of the big car thanked the other driver, and when he had gone, said to his chauffeur:



"James, what was that?"

"That was one of the new 'baby' cars, sir," replied the man. "Very popular, too."



The owner nodded understandingly.

"Very well," he said, "see that we have one in the tool box in future."

A Mediterranean Pilgrimage
or —
Sights and Scenes About the Great Middle Sea
By F. T. GRAFTON
Letter 1 MADEIRA

At 12 noon, July 1st 1933 the whistle blew long and loud; the gang planks were lifted and the great steamship drew away from her pier, and from the decks of the majestic S. S. "ROMA" of the Italian line we watched the retreating skyscrapers of New York City, pass as in a panorama. Another hour or so, till we "dropped the pilot," beyond Sandy Hook, we gazed upon the fading outlines of the greatest city of the Western world, and by evening were out upon the much trodden, but still trackless Atlantic.

During the next few days with no land in sight, telephone bells, nor even church bells, we became familiar with certain ship's bells, especially the ones that rang out for lunch ang dinner hours. Also we became adjusted to long days by haven of refuge and hope—the ROMA being a proud product of the home city of Genoa, a vessel of some 23,000 tons, with a length of 600 feet, modern in every respect, and making her first extended cruise of the great Mediterranean empire; manned by Italian officers and a crew of some 400.

A gradual acquaintance with a few of the 1550 passengers, confirmed our suspicion of the term "pilgrimage" for this tour. There were many Italians, and Americans making this voyage because it had been declared "Holy Year" by His Holiness Pius XI, who is the head to come to Rome, for a new crusade. There were also many, of varied social status, who were of the Hebrew faith, orthodox, or not, who were going to the Holy Lands —the Land of Palestine, the Homeland of a new hope for Israel and Palestine as well as be pilgrims to other shores whose peoples were of fame, and have left but faded remnants of their pristine glories.

The dawn of the sixth day found us steaming close to land. The lilting mists of the forenoon showed us the rock bound shores of the Isle of Madeira, some 14 by 36 miles of volcanic origin a possession of Portugal but lying off the western coast of Africa. Of the population of some 180,000 about 30,000 live in the capital city, and other part,—Funchal.

Though perhaps known to the Romans as the Purple Islands, because of a vegetable dye there, it was rediscovered by an adventurer, Zarco in 1418, it was found an uninhabitants. The name Madeira means, "forest," given because of the rare cad hills and ravines. It has been described as "a neglected Eden." Zarco, later knighted by the king of Portugal, lies buried in the Convent Church of Santa Clara, at Funchal, within whose walls his great successor in adventure, Christopher Columbus, was married in 1473 to Menina Perestrello, a school girl in Portugal whom he followed here, thus climaxing a youthful romance. A pillar still marks the spot of their early home; and from her father with his charts and trading expeditions he caught the vision of a new continent which culminated in the finding of the New World.

As we skirted its southern slopes that Friday morning our first close impressions were of a rocky rugged coast, its precipitous heights the result of some mighty upheaval from ocean depths to a mile above the briny deep, and then worn, grooved and carved by the winds and waves of a thousand millenniums. A score of mountains do rise from five to six thousand feet some with, snow capped summits.

As we sailed slowly, admiringly, along the rugged shoreline we suddenly pulsated with all we have noticed scattered white walled hamlets crowned with red tiled bonnets, set amid green vineyard terraces, seemed to cling to the its more gentle slopes. Generations of patient peasants with vast labor had terraced its more gentle slopes and coaxed the vine to flourish and the flower to bloom in—weird luxury.

Zigzag trails, carved and winding led from lofty villas to cottages still more lofty, or downwards to the quaint quiet communities, neighboring along its sea kissed sands. Such were the ties that bound a common fellowship.

Mile after mile we admired this moving panorama. The heights were backed behind a veil of mist. Again a sparkling stream would burst forth from some mountain top down hundreds of feet to be caught in the lap of some Mother rock, only to burst out elsewhere and hurl its laughing freshit another thousand feet, then at evening sink and soaking the terraced gardens of the villagers it made the final plunge into the bosom of old Mother Ocean who welcomed back her child borne cherub.

The villages by the sea were industrious too, for here were spreading nets under which barrels of grape vintage, vats of sugar cane juice, and acres of fish lines were being transformed into, respectively, sparkling Madeira wines, into granulated sugary sweetness, and by the hand of the patient peasants into the famed Madeira lace of beauty and luxury.

Then came a gleaming white city from the "Roma" and soon entered a home crowned bluff we behind a white walled, tree enlivened city which came down to the shores of its beautiful bay to welcome a thousand strangers. It was in the same old cobbled stone streets and flower covered homes that had sent her famous adopted son— Christopher Columbus—across the trackless western wave to discover and open wide the gates to a new land, that of America.

Almost impatiently we boarded the ship's tenders to cross to the landing piers, and to step upon the historic soil of this "diamond in the blue" floor set in the sea of Europe."

The streets were lined with palms and decked with varied colored flowers everywhere. The cobble stone streets were bordered with pavements artistically worked into various patterns by varied colored stones.

But our primary object was to reach Terreiro da Lucta a hundred feet over 3000 feet high, and rising just behind and above the city. An inclined cog railway climbs the height. Recently renovated, another road, curves the rugged mountain sides comes to near the traveller start. We chose the latter. Hiring a roomy car (a modern Rolls Royce by the way) worthy of fine boarded it and our modern John with much horn, and blithe spirited through the narrow winding streets and lanes. Then up and up, curving, twisting and wound and round in corkscrew shapes past homes, gardens, villas, and vineyards. The roadside children threw flowers as in appreciation of permits to return. Then it was misty; we had entered the clouds that hung about the high hills. Then, looking come out above them, we saw the city far below, but still the heights were far above. It was some five or six miles of this leisurely ascent before the driver stopped somewhat above the railway terminal, and still the hills climbed high. The scene almost beggars description, but the hillsides were green gardens far below could be seen through cool rifts and then in the background beyond was the deep blue of the sea as far as eye could scan. Almost beside us sparkling waterfalls dropped sheer into ravines a thousand feet, leaving themselves in the abyss. Long our eyes wondered in admiration.

At last, rather reluctantly, we boarded the car for the thrilling descent but after a mile or so we forsook this for the thrilling and unique toboggan slide. Instead of snow was a cobblestone-paved, curving road with rifts and fine oiled, shaped like a single box sleigh or old fashioned cutter with one seat and accommodation for two. Each sleigh was guided in its downgrade course by two natives alongside holding long rope handles and contributing to the sleepness of the four mile incline. Here was the thrill that was unsurpassable on this exhilarating transportation. Four miles of curves and around curves of danger, you hang on, and trust—and then there is the skill of the ropes—and wonder if the last will and testament you had drawn up before leaving in the courts of the homeland. Then like good electricity the cable way becomes the narrow street of the business section and we pass homes with bowers of beauty, stores, workshops and more gardens. Then we are in the city, the city, draw a long breath, look back, find ourselves safe, and as we sell us things, climb out, and our driver, smiling beckons us to the auto again.

We pay him off. Horse drawn taxis are plentiful and we engage one to see the city. We chose a victoria, and behind a spirited shod, drawn by black or tan oxen we canter through the streets of the city. We get in. The oxen move on. Autos fly past, donkeys patter past, motor cycles fly by, horses race and pull. Our sturdy oxen plod and their drivers walk beside busy streets or narrow alleys in the old Portugal of the 16th century pace. Past the fruit and flower market. Past the fish market. Past the no lines to shove on in this small race. The ladies pile out at the Cathedral square and we follow in a strange land, man like, you and I, and incidentally, to pay the well, and incidentally, to pay the bill.

There is the church Columbus actually attended. We gaze within the dim light. We see the altars. That calm marks the spot his bridegroom at the altar. We partake of a cup of tea at an English Tea Shop, a real Londonish place with modern Mens shops. The last tender soon leaves for the ship out at the harbor and we take a last lingering look. Dinner gong sounds. Lights are on. Ship is under way. As the sun drops into the west-ward. We watch the last twilight. The waters churn as the ship slowly turns and moves away. We linger at the stern for the last fading glimpse of the City Beautiful." The great ship plows her way through the sea to other worlds to conquer. Clear moon lit skies glimmer. High above the stars shine. Below the sea is calm in reverie; and under its spell we try to catch the inspiration and muse thus pay our homage to MADEIRA.

MADEIRA

From out the mystic eons of antiquity
E'er, Mother Earth herself produced
Old Ocean's depths rose up from out the azure main
"Atlantis" was the child, destined a fame to gain.

Madeira reached majestic towering heights
Looked down to where, before, the conquered sea had striven
Then Mother Nature smiled upon her offspring pride,
And wore a garb of gorgeous verdure robe.

With warp and woof, and tuck and seam, and patience too,
She spun and wove the fabric of her and vines of varied hue,
Adorned with streams of sparkling waters from the "Roma" anchored bay
For feet bedecked in ocean blue, cloud crowned her crest.

Then Funchal came, behold and nestled at her feet
Then brought the richest treasures rare, wherewith to greet,
Brought homes with happiness, and Youth's and Maid's caress;
A city worshipped her, a world looks up to bless.

Madeira, forest crowned, from which she took her name;
Ensnared Columbus' heart

WORST OF SEASON

Phillips Fans Home Team Player With Unbroken Regularity

Scoring practically at will the Picton Intermediates won the first game of the fourth round of the intermediate O.B.A.A. play-down at Beaverton yesterday when they spoiled the white wash brush to the village nine and defeated them by the score of 22 to 0. The Beaverton outfit were never in the picture falling before the pitching of "Warpy" Phillips the chaff before the wind. Despite the rather cold weather that existed Phillips was in rare form, allowing but six scattered hows. Never did the homehers get a runner past third base as the diminutive left hander from Wellington rose to notable heights when the Beaverton nine had men on the base paths.

On the other hand Phillips' team mates gave him excellent support and hit the ball well during the entire nine innings, only failing to score in the second and eighth. Mighton, the Picton keystone sacker, was the big hitter of the day collecting four hits in four times at bat. As a matter of fact all of the Picton regulars managed to collect at least one safe blow while the Beaverton nine were kicking the ball around for ten costly errors. According to reports from the village the game was by far the worst ever exhibited by the homesters and then ..and then journey to Picton next Wednesday for the return game when a far different result is being predicted by the Beaverton fans.

Saying it with bats hits the Picton batsmen to the tune of seventeen safeties. Beaverton hurler, West to cover in exactly five innings and went on to administer unto Hurren, who replaced him, the same dose of bats hits that rang in every corner of the ball lot in Beaverton, MacDonald, the home club's receiver was the only Beaverton batter to count over one hit, he got two singles. Pick. Treasurer was umpired by Walsh and Terry of Toronto.

The lineup:

Beaverton—Hurtibese, cf.; Edwards ss, lss; Thompson, 2b, McDonald c, McRae if, Brunning 3b, West and Hurren p.

Thomson rf.

Picton — Burke ss, Leavens and Church cf, McQuaide and Haddon lf, Hudgin cf, Cole 1b, Thomson 3b, Frederick c, Mighton 2b, Phillips p.

Score by innings:

Picton ..... 103 333 405—22 34 2
Beaverton ..... 000 000 0—0 6 10

Batteries — Beaverton, West, Hurren and McDonald. Picton — Phillips and Frederick.

BROADCASTS BY G. MOTORS

Hockey Fans Greet Gladly News of Continuance

Oshawa, Ont., Sept. 16— There is good news for hockey fans all over Canada in the announcement today that General Motors hockey broadcasts are definitely to be continued and on a larger scale than last winter. Arrangements have been made to broadcast National Hockey League games from the Montreal Forum, Montreal, as well as from Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto.

The hundreds of thousands of radio listeners in Ontario, who enjoyed Foster Hewitt's rapid fire account of the swift hockey matches of last year, will be delighted to know that he will be at the microphone again for every game played by the Maple Leafs on their home ice.

In addition a number of the home games of Maroons and Canadiens, who play in the Forum at Montreal, will go on the air. Each Saturday night game in the Forum will be broadcast in the Montreal area.

Provision is made not only for listeners in Ontario and Quebec, but also across the Dominion since, it is announced, there will be a national network broadcast from Toronto or Montreal each Saturday night.

This expansion of the General Motors Hockey Broadcast is a result of the enthusiastic way in which last season's programs were received. The immense audience built up for general hockey broadcasts will be still further increased by the latest arrangements.

JUST HOW baseball fans will take to the hockey playoff idea is being given the acid test by an important minor league—the International, as it settles the question of just which team in 1933 champion.

Under the basis which has prevailed in the International since its inception, the usual method of awarding the title to the team with the highest winning percentage. Newark is the pennant winner.

However, under the hockey plan four\ clubs—Newark, N.J., Baltimore, Md., Rochester and Buffalo, N.Y., engage in a play-off, the winner to be considered the champion.

This may annoy Newark fans who have cheered their team to victories during a long season only to discover that Newark isn't champion yet and bar but one chance in four to gain possession of the pennant.

x x x

HOWEVER, league officials believe that the play-off idea will prove beneficial to club treasuries and that, it appears, is the main idea in this exceedingly lean baseball season.

The International arrived at its play-off plan by studying the method used by the National Hockey League and then adopting the idea.

The International league was divided into two sections—northern and southern. The first two teams of each section meet in a play-off and the second placers clash in a series. Winners then play.

Baltimore and Buffalo were Nos. 1 and 2 in the southern half race and Rochester and Buffalo Nos. 1 and 2 in the northern half.

The division champion series is the best two out of three games. The league champion series is best four out of seven.

x x x

THE INTERNATIONAL league champion will meet the winner of the American association championship, in a post-season group of games which have become generally known as the "junior world series."

In doing so, the International pennant winners will meet a champion evolved by a method somewhat similar. The American association this season divided itself into a western and eastern affair. Columbus, O., won the eastern title and had the highest percentage of any team in the league. However, the 1933 "arrangement" called for a series of games with Minneapolis, western half winner.

Considerable controversy may be expected if Newark and Columbus do not win their respective league titles which in any other season, they would have been clearly entitled to.

However, both league play-offs are interesting baseball innovations and the club department's guess that they will prove more popular than the old split-season idea which has prevailed in the Texas and smaller minor leagues for many seasons.

World Hockey Games in Paris

Montreal, Sept. 16 (CP)—Canadian hockey teams wishing to participate in the world amateur hockey tournament which will take place in Paris this winter must first obtain permission from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, President Frank C. Greenleaf stated in an interview today.

Last year the National Sea Flyers of Toronto went into this series which was staged in London. To date this year, President Greenleaf said, the only clubs to which he would be prepared to grant permission to undertake the trip are the Montreal Quakers and the Moncton Hawks. These clubs, after the finalists last spring, he considers worthy to represent Canada in a world series.

The Saskatoon sextette, President Greenleaf stated, have already secured permission to undertake the series and his information is that the Maritime team are considering the jaunt.

'PHAT' WILSON IN COMEBACK

Retired Year Ago To Coach But "Old Love" Is Strong

Port William, Sept. 16 (CP)— Contradicting a story that he is through, given out last spring by Jack Wilson, former team mate, Will E. Harbour, now of Belleville, Ont., Phat Wilson, the latchend's oldest amateur hockey player, member of Port Arthur's three time Allan cup winners, is planning a comeback this coming winter.

He retired a year ago to assume the role of coach, but the "old love" has proved irresistible and whether he coaches this year or not, he has declared his intention of donning the blades in a players' role again.

CURRENT SPORT

We cannot vouch for the authenticity of the following tale but it was related to us in good faith yesterday. It seems a new "hopped one" should call it big game" sport in the art of hunting has hit town. The hunters are the fishermen and the hunted are reaching but huge unconvinced fishermen who are out certain local places of business.

Having nothing more to do a trio of determined rod fishers evolved the new method of exterminating rats. (Of course none of these fishermen could play a flute or pipe, so the Pied Piper method of years ago was declared null and void). One of the trio hit upon a scheme and sure enough it worked, the fiend that by using a fish pole as a line and some bait he could, with plenty of patience, lure the husky rats from their lair.

Well to make a long story short these three makers met at several a small rat hole practically all night trying to rid the town of rats. They succeeded in getting their allotment, if there is such a thing in the game laws relating to the killing of rats, and called it a day, yesterday, a night, about daybreak. One of the trio merely hailed the hook with a small fish and then dropped it into the rats' nest. Slowly the line was pulled towards the opening and when Mr. Rat stuck his nose out to nibble the bait further "Bang" one of the other members of this trio socked him with a baseball bat. Results—one less mess of rats." The sport was fine while it lasted but the disposition of the dead rats halted further procedure until one of the trio devised another brain storm and invite to dead rats and their respective live ones.

Just whether a wrestling bout would attract the fans on Saturday night has been considered the matter in charge of the Kiwanis Karnival. "Give 'em top notchers and the sporting fans of Bellevill will turn out any night" stated one of the club's officials last evening while Ruth Tower-Corman, present woman's pennsylvania marathon swim champion was being presented to the crowd at the Karnival last evening. The affair was the first that with two men the caliber of Mc-Lain and Getzerville as headliners they have a big time show to present to the fans this evening.

"Jak" Yanever's protegee gave the residents up around Beaverton a rude jolt yesterday when they downed the aerchers village lads 22 to 0. It seems to us that some of the Toronto dailies were calling Beaverton to cop the intermediate "O" O.B.A.A. honors this year. The series is not over and many things might happen but yesterday's score looks like Picton for the semi-finals alright.

Again "Warpy" Phillips snatched off the lion's share of the limelight when he allowed the homesters but six safe blows. Not a bad day's work for the ex-Wellington lad. Jake and his subordinate had better take Phillips' pitching arm. Hay Bay or Salmon Point for the winter or Tim Buck's farm. Say a chee about next "fire cracker" day. (May 24th).

Let's hope that the Picton crew do not succumb to "brush-over" attitude that nearly upset their applecart in the Gananoque series. Just because they literally trampled on Beaverton yesterday does not mean to say that the lads from north of Whitby may not be "there" next Saturday at Picton. They must be a fairly good intermediate team to advance as far as they have. All of which reminds us that the Kingston Frontes journey to Toronto today where they battle the Riverdale Greds. The return game is being played in Kingston next Wednesday. Now the question arises, whether we go next Wednesday to Picton or to Kingston?" You take your choice we'll takes our long ear.

Rabbit Marzarville doesn't mind being kidded about their length of time he has been playing—in fact, he relishes the sergeantmajor razzing as well that he tells a story on himself.

His daughter, a young lady of at least 23 years, was out at a business house one day and the Rabbit stopped to chat with her awhile. Finally, to Marzarville's surprise, she asked: "Daddy, do you know what I wish? I wish I had a baby."

Marzarville startled, asked the reason for that wish, all of a sudden.

"Well," she went on, "I'd like to take him out to the game some day and say: 'Look, sonny there's grandpa out there playing second base.'

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

Canadian Press Golf Correspondent

ALEX MORRISON says:

Most golfers who wear glasses regard them as a handicap to their game. They need not be.

The most important thing in the swing is to keep the head from turning away from the ball or the line of execution by either raising or lowering.

This does not mean that the head must remain absolutely still during the swing.

Careful consideration of these requirements will show that the head can move a bit from side to side without failing to satisfy all of these conditions.

At any rate the proper head position would eliminate any chance of having to look over the rim of the glasses. With this in mind the player could be a help in maintaining the right head position.

GROOM GEHRIG AS SUCCESSOR

Qualification To Put Him In Place of Babe Ruth

(By, Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 16—(AP)—They had started driving the spikes today in the baseball coffin of the great Babe Ruth for what did they do but drag out the dauntless Lou Gehrig, the crown prince of the home run kingdom, and start putting him through the paces that have been Ruth's and Ruth's alone, for the past so many years.

There was the background of Artie McGovern's gymnasium, where every winter and at other odd moments when business was poor, the Bambino had bared his massive torso and gone through trials calculated to reduce his waistline.

There on the walls are dozens of pictures of the Bam, with boxing gloves, golf clubs and baseballs on, all twisted up in offensive gestures toward the featherweight McGowan. He stretches on his bench while McGovern measures above him with a medicine ball, he's about to plump into the Babe's stomach upholstery if, during the taking of one of these last pictures, Babe's nose had ever left the ball go, he probably would not have been around yesterday ot welcome the prince.

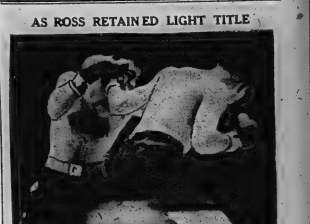
There was something a bit sad about it. In came Gehrig today as if he preferred to be anywhere else but there, and with him, to make the allusion more obvious, was the very manager who has directed Ruth's gestures, his barnstorming tours, even his contract negotiations—and all were separated at least 10 years.

"Look at those muscles — hey get that camera over this way. Are you ready with those measurements? Ozzy Lou, say something for the boys."

There was no gainsaying Gehrig's physical qualifications for the job. Ruth at his heroic best appeared now the Babe is quitting forever. His measurements and all were set down for the first time — better than those that Ruth ever set, apparently on behalf of the Babe each year to prove the king's fitness. Ruth weighed 210 pounds and there wasn't an extra ounce on him. He's 36 years old, and his chest measures 46 inches, his waist roughly the opposite of Ruth's proportions.

FOXX'S HOME RUN HITTING

New York, Sept. 16 (CP)— The continuation of Jimmie Foxx's home run hitting spree furnished about the only thing of interest in four league batsmen during the past week as a surprising plunging forward on all sides.



Foxx made only four hits in the week which ended yesterday but three of them were home runs bringing his total up to 45. His average still the best in the American league, dropped six points.

Chuck Klein, National league leader in batting and batting has gathered in seven hits but his percentage dropped five points to .374. He failed likewise to add to his league lead in homers and doubles.

Neither leader was given much cause for worry, however, all nearly as the other "first ten" batters in both leagues lost ground.

Who's Who In Washington - - - - - - - - - - - - - - Some Successful Senators

SAM RICE

EDGAR CHARLES RICE, veteran outfielder, faces his third world series in 18 years' service for Washington. Sam is a real veteran, having been in Morocco, Ind., Feb. 20, 1890.

Rice pitched for navy teams. Leaving the service he came to Washington and, because of his hitting was converted into an outfielder.

He was a regular until this year, when Goose Goslin supplanted him.

Rice bats left-handed but throws with his right. He is five feet nine inches tall and weighs 160 pounds.

JACK RUSSELL

JACK RUSSELL, Washington relief hurler, was born in Paris, Tex., Oct. 24, 1905.

After bot one year in the minors, Russell came to the Boston Red Sox. His effective hurling attracted the Cleveland club and he became an Indian.

However, his success in the Forest City was not great as a Washington ace him in a trade. This year he has saved more than a dozen games for the Senators.

Russell is six feet tall, weighs 175 pounds. He is a right hander.

WALTER STEWART

WALTER C. STEWART, a Senatorial southpaw hurler, was born right-hander in Sparta, Tenn., Sept. 23, 1900.

Stewart began pitching professionally in 1919. Tried by Detroit in 1921 he went back to the bushes from where he was rescued by the St. Louis Browns in 1927. He was a winning pitcher despite the fact that he had a losing team behind him. He was obtained by Washington last winter in a trade which involved Sam, Weat, Carl Reynolds, Goose Goslin and Fred Schulte.

Wally is a slender 170- pound six-foot man. Ha bats right handed.

BOB BOKEN

ROBERT ANTHONY BOKEN, outfielding Washington athletic, was born in Maryville, Ill., Feb. 23, 1909, of Lithuanian parentage.

He served two years in the bush leagues before joining the Kansas City American association club in 1931. Last winter the Senators bought him but did not use him until the present campaign was a month old.

Boken played brilliantly this year while substituting for Buddy Myer. He is six feet one and one-half inches tall, weighs 170 pounds and is a right-hander.

ED CHAPMAN

EDWIN VOLNEY CHAPMAN, right-handed Washington pitcher, was born in Courtland, Miss., Nov. 29, 1906.

Graduating from Mississippi State university he turned professional and pitched for the next seven years in various minor league baseball clubs.

In August of last season, while a member of the Rochester International, Chapman was purchased by the Senators.

Chapman is six feet one inch tall, weighs 186 pounds and bats right-handed.

FRED SCHULTE

FREDERICK WILLIAM SCHULTE, Washington center fielder, opened his eyes for the first time in Belvidere, Ill., Jan. 13, 1904.

Breaking in with the Waterloo, Ia., team he was a sensation, was quickly sold to the Milwaukee American association team and soon after to the St. Louis Browns.

In the Reynolds-West-Goslin trade last winter he came to Washington and has been a star hitter for the Senators this season.

Schulte is a six-footer, weighing 190 pounds. He throws and bats right-handed.

LIBRARY CORNER

Sept. 16, 1933

The well-known Canadian essayist and critic, William Arthur Deacon has formed the reader's attention in his new book "My Vision of Canada" by his opening paragraph, "Sir Wilfred Laurier said that the 19th century was England's, the 20th belonged to the United States, and that the 30th would be Canada's. Perhaps I am the only being alive who really believes that. For I do—implicitly. I believe that before the year 2000 Canada's world ascendance will be as undisputed a fact as any conclusion of history." Mr. Deacon continues from this point to prove the reason for his faith in Canadian supremacy and culminates in a very amusing if not this great day by stimulating nationalism. "My Vision of Canada" is a series of prophecy founded on fact.

It gives much food for thought and shows wide study of history and economics. From the past and present a new Canada is constructed which in the year 2,000 will have no fewer than forty million inhabitants and world leadership. "To think nationally is a new art," says Mr. Deacon. "To thinking has been predominantly the habit of yesterday; as I feel the truth of the assertions I shall make as I lay my picture before you, is the habit of many phases of far-reaching significance. I shall feel well repaid for this effort if it does no more than teach a thousand young men to consider the nation, its situation and destiny, and to think nationally at all times."

The Canadian Graphic Art Year Book is a fine collection of the work of some of Canada's leading artists and others not so well known. The group is varied including portraits, landscapes and figure studies. Among the artists whose work is outstanding are G. W. Jeffreys, Arthur Fleming, Bertram Hooker, G. A. Reid and Frederick Challener.

Horace Lytle has written of the joys of hunting in his book "Hunt Dog Days". He comments on his associations with the English, Irish and Gordon setters and with the pointers and of many amusing incidents of the chase. He concludes his book with a number of bird dog stories and enlivens the text with numerous photographs of the dogs in action.—K. G.

Champion Swimmer, Ruth Tower-Corsan, is Acclaimed at Kiwanis Club Carnival

Capt. Corsan Acts As Interviewer And Questions Wife

SWIM DESCRIBED

Ruth Tower-Corsan, Canada's most outstanding records of women swimmers today and winner of the C.N.E. swim this year was the guest of the Kiwanis Carnival at the Kiwanis meeting and after an introduction to the Karnival audience was the signal for thunderous applause from the hundreds of Ruth Tower-Corsan fans in Belleville.

Presented by Mr. Jos. Hinds, Mrs. Corsan who made an appealing picture in her smart sports frock of dark brown wool with a dark brown felt hat smiled charmingly at the audience and expressed her delight at being present. Her husband, Capt. F. H. Corsan, was also introduced. Acting as an interviewer, Capt. Corsan questioned his wife about the swim.

The audience learned that the swimmers had not been troubled with eels this year, that Mrs. Corsan had eaten little but chocolate during the swim and that for those being exhausted she had gone to a point in the light of the big ferry and didn't go home till "three o'clock in the morning."

Mrs. Corsan was asked to present the handsome silver cups awarded for the boat races held during the summer off Victoria Park. Mr. "King" Rogers, chairman of the South End Athletic Club, said the season had been most successful. Fifteen races had competed and those sailing them had handled the boats in a splendid manner. The "A" cup donated by Judge Wills was won by Captain Callahan of the class "B", the Queensview Club cup, by Captain Kelly; class "C", the Hanna cup, by Captain Wilson and class "D", the White Rose Service Station Trophy cup donated by Mr. C. H. Clapp, by Captain Salter."

The presentation of the pins came as the conclusion of the stage show which had been presented by the Toronto Eiddies. The second evening of their splendid revue was just as successful as their first appearance at the Karnival. These engaging children sang and danced in a way that made one forget sometimes that they were really kiddies. The acrobatic dance numbers, the toe dancing, tap and eccentric dancing numbers were splendid and won much applause. Modern blues singers must look to their laurels for the Eiddies have Helen Riddle showed that they could steal Helen Morgan's thunder. The old time cowboy ballads were sung by three small boys who played guitar accompaniment and varied their act with guitar and harmonica music.

Between the stage show, the Wedding of the Painted Doll, was a lovely scene. The petite blonde bride in white, the handsome bridegroom, the beautiful bridesmaids in rainbow shaded gowns, and the merry parson made a dancing tableau that will long be remembered.

As the show drew to a close the crowds visited the various booths or took part in the dancing for which Dutch Turney's orchestra provided the music. Miss Mary Doran won the door prize last evening.

Dress Hints For Stout Women

Should Avoid Figured Fabrics And Seek Harmonious Lines

(By Helen Pellett)

When a woman is large of frame, tall with thick, heavy bones, the usual standard of weights and measurements are of no use to her.

Let her give attention to proportion; what she weighs doesn't matter much, if body lines are harmonious.

Her dress problems are vexing. Figured fabrics are not for her; they will make her appear larger. Dark colors are more flattering than light ones.

Coiffure must not be skull-fitting as her head will appear too small. Those expansive shoulder effects are fatal. The skirt length must be exactly right. .

Muscles around the mouth influenced by facial expression, undergo changes. Dull eyes, drawn mouth corners and blotchy the mouth gets that way. Let lips relax and flesh does not fall to drag on the job. The hard-as-nails mouth is anything but fascinating to the woman's own making.

To keep the mouth youthful, let it carry an expression of good nature and animation, lips full of vitality due to the teeth but not tense, lips ends slightly lifted. Unpleasant emotions are manifested in the lips—jealousy, anger, intolerance.

The surface of the lips require something more than the colorless cream. Glycerine is a moisturizer, equal parts will keep it smooth, free of cutaneous snags and shreds.

Regard for every detail of dress and appearance is the beauty lie these days. One slip-up and the whole composition of beauty is out of harmony.

Gloves, collars, little washable frills is much too immaculately fresh under lines on the neck of the bodice, along the forearm of sleeves. Eyebrows perfectly groomed, make-up subtle and delicate, finger nails shimmering and well cared for, this is a big job, but one that pays dividends. When a woman doesn't care how she looks she doesn't care much about anything. Life has her beaten.

NOVELIST'S SECRETARY WAN, WEARY, TIRED

New York, Sept. 16 (CP)—There's a worn look on the face of Louis Fleury, secretary to Sinclair Lewis. He and the novelist are back from South Hundred, Vt., and spent three months there but it was no vacation.

"Mr. Lewis wrote at top speed, morning, noon and night," said Fleury. "He did a year's work in about three months. I would go to sleep for 15 minutes, wake up, and think he had slept for hours. He'd wake me and say 'I got an idea for the next chapter. Let's go'."

PLAINFIELD Y.P.S.

About thirty of the young people of the Plainfield community met at the parsonage on Thursday evening for the purpose of reorganizing their league for the coming season and also getting better acquainted with the Rev. Everson and Mrs. Everson.

The meeting was called to order by the President Mrs. Everson, the roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture, topic was given by Ruth Dunning, a duet given by Mrs. Everson and Mrs. Harrison. Meeting was closed with prayer, soon after which the remainder of the evening was spent in community singing and playing games. About ten thirty Mrs. Everson served a delightly lunch after which a hearty vote of thanks was moved by Miss Marshall and seconded by Mr. Hicks to Rev. and Mrs. Everson for their kind hospitality. Everyone then joined in singing "For We're a Jolly Good Parson" and "He's a Jolly Good Helper."

Everyone returned to their home feeling they had spent a very enjoyable evening.

- SPRINGBROOK LADIES' AID

Springbrook Ladies' Aid convened at the residence of Mrs. Andrew Reid on September 7th with an attendance of twenty-seven. The devotional exercises were taken by Mrs. A. P. Williams. Psalm fifty-one, composed by David and said to be the noblest expression of sin and sorrow ever made, formed the reading lesson. The roll call was a verse from psalms seventy-three to eighty-nine. Considerable business was transacted.

Mrs. W. A. Bateman gave a comparison on "The Ills of Worry and the Highway of Trust."

Mrs. Fairy discussed the outlook of a Ladies' Aid. She outlined the progress in thought made in the series of conventions of Ladies' Aid Society and Women's Association held at Napanee. The trend in subject matter at those conventions had been from temporal to spiritual matters.

Mrs. Jos. Bailey, as a contribution from her group, read, "Little Pitchers". The new preacher, in this selection, received a criticism of himself and family from Betty, who had acquired her information from her elders. Her mother, hearing the criticism repeated by Betty to the minister, was considerably humiliated. Betty's parents decided that it was their duty to offer much topic for discussion and that henceforth no unkind, critical word pass their lips.

Mrs. Reid served lunch assisted by Miss Hazel Neal and Mesdames Gordon Webb, Foley, and Fred Heath.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)
(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Salt and Celery

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me the proper way to use salt when eating celery. Should the salt be put on a plate and celery dipped in it, or should the salt be sprinkled with salt?

2. When a girl friend comes to spend the evening at your home, and is already seated when you enter the room, should she rise when you go forward to shake hands, or remain seated? (We are both the same sex).

E.

It is considered better form to put the salt on the side of the plate, preferably the bread and butter plate, and dip the celery in it. Indeed, any way of using salt or pepper is always better not only for celery but for anything else.

2. It is the natural act for her to rise when her hostess entered the room.

The Return Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to know if, when addressing a letter, I should put my name and address in the upper left corner of on the back.

"A Friend.

The post office authorities suggest that you put the address and name in the upper left corner of the face of the envelope. This evidently this is considered the most convenient for the mail man, and he is the one to be considered. Moreover, it often means crowding, and running the name and address into the address itself, so if your handwriting is large or fancy the back of the envelope is the better.

Helps the Lady in First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should letters be written to say "thank you" for flowers sent to a funeral?

M.

Yes; such kind thoughts for us should be acknowledged. It is not acknowledged with a personal note. It need not be long; but it should be written by the head of the family. The note may be worded something like this:

Dear Mr. Worthy:

We appreciate very much your kind sympathy. Thank you for it. Thanks for the beautiful flowers you brought us in the hour of your sympathy and friendship.

Yours very sincerely,
(Signed)

Guest of Honor at Right

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Where is it right to give an informal luncheon at which there will be a guest of honor. Should the hostess sit at the head of the table? In relation to her, where should the guest of honor sit?

E.

Yes, the hostess should sit at the head of the table, and on her right would be the guest of honor.

Putting Letter in Envelope

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

How should a letter be enclosed in an envelope—with the edges upward, or with the crease end toward the top of the envelope?

E.

With the edges upward. This is reasonable, since when the envelope is opened, the opener does not cut through the fold of the letter-paper (Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

CHILDHOOD'S WARNINGS

Carelessness and fretfulness, feverishness—most troubles unless overcome by a gentle cleansing laxative. The mothers and grandmothers that nothing equals Steedman's Powders—the famous English remedy made especially for growing children and infants, and used by mothers all over the world for more than 100 years. When your child shows signs of being cross and upset and when baby is teething, give Steedman's. Your dealer sells them.

CASTORIA
constipation
in children

from babyhood to 11 years

WHEN the house is strangely still. When the little monarch of the nursery barely picks at his dinner. Mother—something is wrong.

Often it is something you don't suspect — constipation. For even if his habits seem regular, accumulations may have gathered that are poisoning him.

Castoria—the laxative especially prepared for children—will clear away these poisons gently but thoroughly. Unlike many laxatives intended for grown-ups Castoria does not gripe. It is not nauseating. And children like to take it.

Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation. It contains no harmful "drugs"—no narcotics. Purchase a family size bottle today.

Advice for Landscape Gardeners

Here's some advice for amateur landscape builders and gardeners given by an expert:

"The first and cardinal law of landscape work is to accentuate the elevation. To do this it often becomes necessary to lower the park or garden as the sides in a gradual rise to the highest point.

"When you build your park or garden don't blot out the natural beauties of the locality with an excess planting of trees or shrubbery. Some hedges or bushes judiciously, merely as a frame for the whole picture, are fine.

"In landscape work there are no square angles a gradual curve is always best.

"Full grown trees are worth a million dollars to the gardener or park owner."

"Remember this when laying out your plot—once you disturb the natural balance and water content of the ground around growing trees they will die. It is best to leave the soil undisturbed near them when possible."

This is the advice given by Mr. H. J. Moore, one of Canada's expert landscape artists who visited this city on Friday in the interests of park planning for the city.

Same Likes and Dislikes Best Insurance for Love

(By Beatrice Fairfax)
(Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.)
(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"How can I be sure that I'm really in love? Is it the real thing at last? Or is it just one more case of fascination?

"A divine mixture of moonlight, midsummer madness, a fine, pleasant voice, a smile with a contagious laugh, nice teeth and just enough authority about him to make me feel a little humble and really feminine"—writes a girl who signs herself Claire and tells me she's 19 years old.

I'll admit that the problem is pretty difficult, Claire, especially at this season of the year. Even "moonstruck madness" has much for which to be responsible, as you have hinted.

In spite of such impelling influences as nice teeth, contagious laughter, enough authority to make you realize how truly feminine you are—not to mention that troublesome old moon—there are reliable tests which may be depended upon to show which way the wind blows.

"Stop! Look! Listen!" as the railroad crossing signs say. Have you similar tastes? Are you sympathetic? To sum up, are you congenial? For there are many, many evenings in married life when the moon doesn't shine, and nice teeth and contagious laughter are taken for granted.

If it does that similarity of tastes, much like money, in the bank, becomes a comfortable thing to fall back upon. A happily married man wrote an enlightening letter to that effect on the other day and said: "The test of a really successful marriage is when you and the lady-wife talk without becoming bored? And can you talk without scraping?"

Do you strangle yawns when the man or woman you're considering marrying holds forth? Do you find the beloved's conversation silly, pointless or boring? Are you really critical of the beloved? Do you wish he or she were a little more clear—someone you didn't marry?

Beware! Those are straws to be depended upon.

If you're a girl and domestic, dote on pretty things for the house and like to try your hand on new dishes for the table, don't marry a man who doesn't think he's fed unless he's eating in the brilliantly lighted window of a restaurant. Or vice versa, if you're a man and domestic, don't marry a girl whose motto might be "What is Home Without a Can Opener?"

If one loves children and the other doesn't, that's a fatal and immeasurable obstacle to being happy. And you might check up on various and sundry little things like: Is one partner neat and the other untidy? Has one a nice regard for correct speech and does the other murder the language?

Many such things have married young and prospered, but the wife has remained in the same old rut. Such men have written me tragic letters.

And the greatest of all tests is—how about good sportsmanship? Is the fervent good sport, who can take bad luck with a smile, or is he the grouch type? If the latter, I beg of you to quit before you say "I do."

Weddings

ROUGH—SUTHERLAND

The marriage was solemnized at Bayside United Church Parsonage, Wednesday noon, of Miss Lorna, of Miss Lorna Sutherland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Sutherland of Third of Sidney, and Mr. Embury Hough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Hough, of Hallowy. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Plant.

The bride, who was unattended was attired in a gown of Independence blue Calore crepe trimmed with satin and velvet that trimmed with blue and gray feathers and small hat.

The bride and groom left on a motor trip to Detroit, the bride wearing for travelling, a blue coat of French twill with gray lamb collar, black shoes, gloves and bag. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm, Hallowy. Mrs. Hough was formerly a popular member of the Queen Victoria School staff.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

Industrials Recover Most of Losses In Friday's Selling Off At Toronto—Firmer Tone Is Noticed — Fresh Activity In New York On Upward Buying—Little Trading But Higher Prices For Mining Shares.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP)—Industrial listings recovered most of the losses sustained yesterday in the late sell-off on the Toronto Stock Exchange and closing today was in better volume than last Saturday's session. The general tone was firm in the strong from the opening and the best prices were boarded just before the close.

Dealings' shares did not lead to the up side, and at the close Walkers Common stood at 89 up 1¼. Industrial Alcohol up 1⅛ at 22, Distillers Seagrams up 1¼ at 31 and Brewers and Distillers up ¾ at 23. Beer shares lagged, Canada Malting and Canada Bud closing unchanged.

Nickel was strong in the interlisted group but failed to hold its gains. It closed at 22.10 for a gain of 70 cents. Brazilian was unchanged at 14. Ford A up ¼ at 14½. Smelters up 2 at 135 and C.P.R. up ⅛ at 18½.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 16.—(CP)—Trading dragged but prices were on the way up in the mining section of the Standard Mining Exchange. The market was featured by strength of Dalhousie Red Lake which showed considerable buoyancy. It moved up to 84¼ for all-time high mark and closed at the top, up 8¢.

McIntyre, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves showed the best action in the big gold producers, though Dome had the best advance, climbing $11.60 to $36.60. Lake Shore was up 1.25 cents to $7.35; Pioneer up 1.50 cents to $13. Teck gained 15 to 9.75 and Wright Hargreaves up 25 at 7.95.

Nickel was slow but stronger, closing up 70 cents at 22.50 and Norands improved a little to 35.95.

STOCK MARKET IS HESITANT

Unusual Demonstration By U. S. Board During Week

(By Alex Principle, Canadian Press Financial Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP)—Unable to penetrate the top resistance point around 1,140 it bumped in each of the five full sessions this week the stock market gave up the effort on Friday. For the week, the U.S. board almost falling to its level a week ago. Canadian markets held better, mining shares even moving against the industrial trend and closing firm.

New York prices performed the unusual feat of receding while foreign currencies were rising against the United States dollar. The dollar touched a new all-time low mark in terms of sterling at 67.59 cents. Some currency experts saw in yesterday's opinions of the exchanges the possibility that France was planning early abandonment of the gold standard, an eventuality that was expected to send the U.S. dollar down and give American stocks a shake up.

PARK WORTH ONE MILLION SAYS EXPERT

"Accent Your Elevation," His Advice On Zwick's Island

GRADING PROCESS

General Contour of Island Should Be Left Undisturbed

Dynamic and brisk in actions and speech, and with the air and assurance of a man who is fully acquainted with his job, Mr. J. H. Moore, one of Canada's best known landscape artists and horticultural experts, led Mayor Tice, members of city council, the Board of Parks Commissioners and several of the Kiwanis Club who were instrumental in bringing him here, a merry chase uphill and down, and over and through the knolls and hollows of Zwick's Island Friday afternoon.

With the quick appraisal of an expert and with note book in hand, Mr. Moore covered every foot of the ground on the island, examined the soil, noted the trees, direction of the prevailing breezes, the depth of the water, condition of the various beaches, and the approximate work of developing the project. Then he rendered his decision of the proposal of Mayor Tice to make the island a central recreation park and a breathing spot for residents of the section.

Million Dollar Park.

"Gentlemen," he stated, following his survey of the island, "you have a million dollar park here waiting to be developed. It has a value estimate here of almost incalculable value which would well repay the expenditure in fixing it up."

The original plan of Mayor Tice was to grade the top of the island to a depth of several feet and then fill in the existing hollows with the material removed. The expert vetoed that. He pointed out the first rule in landscape work.

"Always accentuate your highest elevation. To have removed the soil from this island would have ruined it. To have destroyed even a single worthwhile tree would have cost a lot of money."

Briefly he outlined the salient features for the building up of the island, given from an expert's viewpoint. The general contour should remain undisturbed. Here and there, however, the low spots should be filled and the higher knolls chopped down. In this process the proper masonry work necessary for the making of a beach at one point, the construction of roads and other necessary steps.

First Step.

Briefly, the first move in the plan advocated by Mr. Moore, providing the city council can find the necessities for the development to make the present deserted island a recreation center, calls first for the removal of considerable surplus material in the old grade on the north end and west of the island. This will be transported by a light railway to the east side of the island where the first plan will be the making of a new road through the marsh, which will run in a gentle circular sweep to a point some distance along the present highway above the existing small road which now leads in.

The bathing beach, after an investigation of two possible sites on the west side and south side of the island, has been tentatively located on the south side where the constant wash of the waves and the prevailing breeze will sweep the beach clean. Here, all the finer material that has been removed and screened will be deposited in a gradual slope to wading depth into the water.

The huge holes where gravel has been removed in years past will undergo a grading process on the sides of the rim which will leave an amphitheatre, tree-crowned on the edge, and with the sides constructed so that entrance will be easily available. In the bottom of the depression future plants may call for placing rock gardens, possibly running fountains and an abundance of variegated flowers.

"Don't Touch Trees"

"Don't touch the trees, gentlemen," urged Mr. Moore. "Every tree on the island is worth a lot to you here. We'll plant more of them."

The present contours of the island will lend themselves admirably to the scheme of development, stated Mr. Moore who was against any attempt to have them changed. "You have a natural beauty here that would be difficult to find elsewhere. Instead of making it a flat place, we must slope the sides of the island in a gentle sweep to the higher centre. Then you can do wonders with proper shrubbery and trees," he said.

Under the suggested plan of Mr. Moore, from the new entrance north of the island the rise will be gentle but continuous. The new road will probably circle the island and return back to the highway in rounded curves, and sufficiently wide to permit parking and allow cars to pass at the same time. Judicious planting of evergreens, maples and other native trees will enhance the beauty of the spot. As far as possible the island will retain its original shape and contour. Here and there considerable amount of filling it is needed with material which will be removed from specified places. An estimate of the amount of material to be removed has been placed at between seventy-five and one hundred thousand yards. This will go to form various small islands in the marsh spots which will be drained, and to fill up other soft spots which are at present an eyesore.

According to Mr. Moore there is plenty of work for every unemployed man for months. There will be little difficulty in carrying on the work during the cold months, and all can be done by hand labor if required.

Before leaving the island, Mr. Moore was commissioned by Mayor Tice and members of the city council to draw complete plans of the island on a large scale and have them available for the city engineer when and if accepted as given by the city council to proceed with the work.

As U. S. Prepares to Prevent Bloodshed in Cuba

Adding strength to President Roosevelt's appeal to Cuban revolutionary leaders to set up a government capable of maintaining order, the entire Atlantic coast fleet either is heading for the island republic or standing by ready to leave at a moment's notice, while a marine regiment likewise is marking time awaiting departure orders. This layout shows the action on the part of the United States after the revolutionary flag (1) was raised over the La Punta naval station in Havana. Reinforcements are loaded at the U.S.S. Ellis (2) as the destroyer is prepared for a journey to Cuban waters as part of the Atlantic fleet (3). The task of mobilizing the marines for possible action in Cuba is in charge of Col. Richard P. Williams (4) and Col. John R. Hensley, right.

MRS. ROBERT GOOD CELEBRATES HER 85TH BIRTHDAY

Stirling—The marriage is announced of Miss Lorraine Loosen, daughter of Mr. Oscar A. Loosen of Cottage Street, Lockport, N. Y., to Mr. Frank C. Weaver of Lockport, N.Y., formerly of Stirling. The nuptial ceremony was performed on Thursday morning, September 8, at 11.30 o'clock in Grace Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Eversley S. Ferris, vicar of All Saints' Chapel, officiating. Immediately after the ceremony, Dr. and Mrs. Weaver left for a wedding trip through Quebec Province. On the return journey Dr. and Mrs. Weaver are the guests of Dr. Weaver's sister, Mrs. Annie Bailey, for a few days.

A number of residents of Stirling attended the lawn social held at West Huntingdon on Friday evening under the auspices of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and all report a good time.

Miss Grace Day, R.N., of Kingston, is spending a month's vacation in River Valley, guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morrow and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Morrow.

Congratulations are extended to Mrs. Robert Good who passed the eighty-fifth milestone on Sunday. Mrs. Good is in the best of health and spent her natal day with her daughter, Mrs. Jack Thompson, at Rawdon. A number of friends and relatives called on Mrs. Good during the day to offer their best wishes for many more birthdays and included Mrs. A. Kennedy of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Mrs. Dr. Du Val of Hanover, Ontario, Mrs. H. Richards of Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Thrasher of Rawdon and Mrs. Edgar Morrow of Trenton, Kenneth, Frankford Road.

The regular meeting of the Masonic Order was held in the Masonic rooms on Monday evening with the worshipful master presiding. The meeting consisted merely of the regular routine of business and was terminated by a social hour and lunch.

Mr. John Rogers is reported seriously ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Hall. Mr. Rogers is one of Stirling's oldest residents and has already attained the ripe old age of ninety-five years. His many friends hope for an early recovery.

Mr. Herbert Hadley, local apple-grower, makes the first shipment of apples this week. The apples are trucked as far as Montreal where they are shipped to Liverpool, England.

Miss Gladys Joblin who has been librarian for the past year has tendered her resignation which is to become effective the last of the month. Miss Joblin plans to resume her studies at the University of Toronto this year.

Master Gerald Ward suffered a painful fracture of the left arm while playing football at the local Public School on Wednesday morning. The lad was taken to Dr. Demorest's office where the fracture was reduced.

Mr. J. R. Beatty of Toronto, has purchased the summer residence of the late Dr. F. J. Zwick at Trent River and intends to take possession immediately.

In the recent contest staged by the Excelsior Life Insurance, Mr. W. J. Whitty, local agent, was successful in selling the most insurance in the given time and won for himself and Mrs. Whitty a free trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. While in Toronto Mr. and Mrs. Whitty were Exhibition visitors.

Mrs. J. S. MacKay of Toronto who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Merritt Sine, was the guest speaker in St. Paul's United Church on Sunday morning. Mrs. MacKay who has spent the past forty-five years in missionary in India gave an inspiring address on the social customs of that country and in her talk pointed out the great necessity for a better acquaintance with the Christian religion by Indian fields.

St. Paul's Young People's Society resumed its meeting on Monday evening with a good attendance of members. The president, Mr. Harry Mullin was in the chair and took charge of the whole meeting. The program consisted of the reading of the Scripture lesson by Miss Geneva Wright, a solo by Mrs. Fred Mullin which was followed by an address given by the pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland, "The Conception of Life." Miss M. Jones then staged an abbreviation contest after which a hymn was sung and the Mizpah Benediction pronounced.

The opening meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held at the manse on Tuesday evening with the President, Mrs. W. L. Anderson, in charge. The order of procedure was the Scripture lesson read by the president; the secretary's report given by Mrs. M. Ward and a talk by Mrs. M. W. Sine. Mrs. A. B. Fargey gave an address on the work of the missionaries among the women of India after which Mrs. J. A. Kolfend served lunch to her guests and a social hour was spent.

Mr. James Cranston who has been ill for some time at his home here was taken to Belleville General Hospital on Monday night where he underwent a successful operation for appendicitis.

EXPORT DEMAND FOR WHEAT IS INCREASED

Winnipeg, Sept. 16.—(CP)—Removal of minimum price trading restrictions and a quickening in the export demand for Canadian wheat were outstanding factors in a week's trading that gave members satisfaction today. Increased exports countered in some measure for the loosening up of market restrictions and this fact comprised for the fact decline of 3 cents a bushel from the "peg-ged" level.

Decision to remove the price restrictions was made by the exchange council in the belief a favorable opportunity had arrived for increasing the export movement. Unfavorable crop news from the Argentine and Australia had brought about a definite upturn in outside markets while delays in the harvesting the new crop resulted in small hedging sales in Canada.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES A. STOKES

Resulting from a stroke sustained Saturday, the death occurred this (Saturday) morning, of Mrs. Rachel Stokes, widow of James A. Stokes and mother of George A. Stokes, divisional superintendent of the Canadian National Railways here. Mrs. Stokes passed away at her late residence, 238 Dundas Street, early this morning. She was the only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George McCurdy and was born in Flamboro Township of the County of Ontario, 78 years ago. For many years she resided in Toronto, and for the past five years has made her home with her son in Belleville. Mrs. Stokes was a member of Christ Church and though of a quiet and retiring disposition had made many friends in this community since coming here to reside. Her son, the divisional superintendent of the C.N.R. is the only immediate relative remaining to mourn her loss

BARGAIN BRIDE

By CATHERINE MAINLAND-TAYLOR ©1933 NEA Service, Inc.

"As long as you want me to," he answered. He snapped the lighter shut; stipped it into a pocket. She felt that his eyes were drawn close although just then the moon was kept from shedding light by a dense bank of clouds.

Was he already regretting his gentleness, she wondered. A heartaded knife seemed plunged into her heart, and drawn coldly out again as she considered the question.

"I want you to stay as long as you want to," she said with a coolness of which she was proud. "I want from you only what you can give—without pity."

"I shall regret giving you nothing," he said quickly, "if you will remember our bargain."

"What bargain, Barrett?"

"We agreed, you remember, that neither of us was to indulge in a flirtation during this party."

"But Barrett, I never have," she answered, "I couldn't! I never did—before one of you."

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

For a few minutes he could not trust himself to speak. "Did she think him a coward, then?" he asked himself.

"Stinky, I know you are very attractive. You must have had love affairs," he managed to say at length, without betraying the deep anger that shook him.

"But I never appealed to men, Barrett. That's a brutal fact. I don't like to admit it; but it is the fact."

The moon had shaken herself free from the mask of clouds.

"Older men?" Barrett questioned slowly. "I've heard they liked you?" He was looking down at her, his eyes narrow.

He drew a deep, rasping breath. One great storm cloud slipped over the silver moon and left them in the light. Barrett put his hands upon Elinor's arms to draw her close. His motion was rough, he knew afterward. Brutality against—

"All older men," he confessed unsteadily, "are not so old as to be safe, I see. It is not fair—the thing you do to us. I can't help my feeling for you even though I know what you are—or aren't—"

"I don't—" She began, but his hot lips pressed against hers to stifle the sentence.

He held her away, laughing.

Again he swept her close. When she at last struggled free he dragged back against the balustrade, breathing hard. She touched her bruised lips with trembling fingers. She too was breathing hard and crying a little.

"I know you better than you think, you see," he stated. He had not seen her tears. "I happen to have known of some of your affairs for some time, I'm sorry I lost my head. But don't overplay the part and fright! You see I wouldn't be fooled!"

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

She turned abruptly and head high, moved toward one of the long French windows—an oblong, lesson square in the bare wall. Her knees were shaking; her heart pounding. She had learned love and hate and their possible blend.

Something made her falter just in the living room he overtook her to lay an arresting hand upon her arm. She turned to him, head still high. "By God," he whispered, staring down at her. They were tearless—real.

"Don't! Let me—go!" she pleaded; voice breaking. He followed her, humble and ashamed. Then, wisely, he made her way up the stair.

After a long moment he followed her. "Elinor—" he whispered, "Don't—she begged. "I—I'm sorry!"

—talk now!"

She went into her room and he into his. He heard the turn the key in the look of the door between them. Then he heard it unlock on the door. The slight sound hurt almost as much as her tears. He had seen in her eyes.

Would he ever again have the trust she had once given him? He remembered a maximum an eastern prince had given his son: "Set a value of a thing you must lose it."

He heard her moving in the adjoining room as he sank his head in his hands. He did not sleep and knew she did not. He saw the light in her room go out and heard the slight fall of yellow beneath the door. Then light reappeared for two hours.

Elinor lay perfectly quiet. If Barrett had cared her how she would have welcomed that moment! But he had said coldly that he understood her and her affairs. She would have trusted him anywhere! He had had the chance to know her. Never would she go a word to him to find herself. What would be the use? She had denied her guilt and Barrett laughed at her denial.

The night was endless. She looked at a small clock that ticked merrily beside her bed. The hands pointed at half past four.

CHAPTER 37

The day dawned gray and chill. At 10 she must had turned to a steady cold rain. Barrett arose early on a cold breakfast and moved restlessly, waiting for Elinor who, for the first time in memory, kept her, had had her breakfast in bed. He stood before the fire, hands thrust deeply into his pockets ratteling coins. He drifted to a window and then turned away, picked up a book, laid it down and sat down to try to read a paper. He glanced later he had cast that aside to wander once more to the window. He did all these things half a dozen times and found he could settled to nothing.

The maid, dusting, polished him circumspectly. "He's a very restless sort of gentleman," she said later to the cook.

At 11 Barrett gave in and sent a note to Elinor. His handwriting was nervously unsteady. The note read:

"Child—Will you give me a chance to talk with you? I don't deserve your consideration in the least . . . but I don't know how to go through another hour without trying to make you understand a little of my shame.

Elinor came down almost immediately. She looked pale and there were shadows beneath the blue eyes. Shivering a little, she dropped to an ottoman near the fire and turned her wan face to the dancing flames.

"You were very good to come down," he said with the stiffness which speaks of strain.

"Oh, no—" she answered listlessly. "Hmm?"

"Yes!"

"Will you try to understand me?"

"I have always tried, Barrett. Something it hasn't been easy. You see I feel the same way all the time. You—well, you know how it's been with you and the Jones. The words ended a trifle brokenly.

He dropped to a chair that was close to her and leaned forward her, arms on knees. "I have always loved you," he said slowly and gravely.

"Then it hasn't made you hard!" she answered hotly. "I'm sorry but for the first time since I've known you, I doubt you!

"If you had loved me things wouldn't have happened the way they did last night. The way you kissed me—as though it was something you were ashamed of!"

Her chin raised. She turned eyes made hostile by pride to meet his gaze.

"I don't want love like that. I don't want anyone to love me and be ashamed of it!" she stated after a stretch of silence that became more bitter with each moment.

"I have hurt you badly, my dear," he said.

"Yes; from the first. You've given me no chance to be of any worth to anyone. I am one of those weak people who can't help being dependent. When I know they displeased you I feel perfectly miserable. I'm afraid to speak and quite certain that I'll say or do the wrong thing. I'm never sure of myself. I've always been aware of my short comings. They've been pointed out to me by many people. It isn't kind or fair to take advantage of a person who stumbles habitually."

"Elinor—" he began but she cut him short.

"Before our marriage and since," she said, "there have been times when you seemed to care a little for me. And then you always drew away again—as though you were ashamed. I suppose you regretted your lack of taste!" She was breathing quickly and her face had flushed.

His lightly, he hand pulled in her eyes. Perhaps, he reasoned, if his attitude had been different she would not have turned to Bob Telfair.

"I love you," he said. "God knows, Elinor that I speak the truth!"

"You think me to be capable of flirting and trying to hide it! You said last night that I needn't pretend to be surprised!"

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

She tried to look the scorn for this she felt. She failed. Her lips trembled and she turned from him, crying.

"But, child—" he said brokenly. "Oh, don't!" she begged. "I'll begin to think it will last again. I'll start being happy and then tomorrow or the next day you'll scarcely speak to me!"

"Elinor—?" he murmured amazed.

"As if it's any satisfaction to you, I do. And I, too, am ashamed of caring!"

She struggled up. Barrett got to his feet and put a hand on her arm. "Please let me go!" she begged.

"I will in a moment, dear. Hinor. If I can make you happy for the rest of the time we must spend together and if by the end of that time you have gained some trust in me, there is nothing in the world that would make me so happy as to ask you to be my wife, while—open, without reserve.

"I haven't forgotten," he went on, wiping her eyes as you did for us all when you married me purely because you felt sorry for me. I know how hard! When I thought you cared it is I who was the coward.

He drew her into his arms and held her close. She had not spoken on the truth, he was sure. She had gone somewhere with Bob Telfare and afterward—he wanted to tell her he loved her. But she had had him there from life's very help hour in building a strong, decent code. Perhaps Elinor had suffered from misdirected help to do this. Perhaps she could learn the satisfaction of standing on her own feet and walking wardly.

She was shaking from her sobs. He felt his own eyes sting. Stooping, he pressed his cheek against her hair.

She drew away. "Tomorrow," she said, "perhaps I can tell you. And I know you'll change!"

"No!" he contradicted sharply.

She smiling wanly and turned from him in hurry to the hall and up the stairs. Alone he considered the conversation was plainly unsatisfactory and alone. He had not helped her. He had failed in his opportunity. A little blindness to her faults, a greater appreciation of her good qualities that was here—perhaps with a few years of this her leaning to "affairs" would be lessened and they could have a decent sort of life together.

After all, he thought, all life seems to be a compromise. "Never the whole, eternal quietude." He loved her. It was love he felt—love that had made his eyes sting when she was denying all his sense. But he did not, could not, respect

The morning sun shone upon a brilliant company of knights and ladies assembled in the ballium of the castle of Nimmur. It glinted on polished mail, plue and banner and gilded the gay colors of the scarf worn by lowly women gathered about the raised dais where sat Prince Dudley. Everyone was in a carnival mood, for today were pitted against each other, Sir James, the strange knight from the unheard of place, America, and his enemy, Sir Maliel, suitor for the hand of Princess Guinalda.

At either end of the lists was a tent gay with the pennons, colors and devices of his owner. Green and gold for Sir Maliel, silver and blue for Jimmy Blake. Over each a man-at-arms in gleaming metal stood before each tent. A groom held a restive, richly caparisoned charger, about which a young squire busied himself with last minute preparations for the encounter. A herald trumpeter awaited the signal to sound a fanfare that would announce the entrance of his master into the lists.

Inside the blue and silver tent Blake was donning his armor as Sir Richard, who was to be his second, stood by, wiping away sweat and adding. Outside, the tent Prince Gobred glanced up at his grandstand was filled. Prince Gobred glanced up at the sun and spoke to a knight at his side, who then gave a command to the trumpeter. At the loud and clear notes, the tents at either end were galvanized into activity. The grandstand, which had been much excitement ensued as knights and ladies eagerly awaited the appearance of Sir Maliel and Sir James.

There was a murmur of applause for both contestants that increased as they advanced and met before Prince Gobred's loge. Here the four knights each raised the hilt of his sword to his lips in salute and then positioned them to fight heroically. Blake's eyes wandered to Guinalda. She sat, stiffly erect, looking straight before her and very white. "How beautiful she is," thought Blake. And though the Princess did not once look at him—neither did she look at Sir Maliel.

Active Home and School Club Sponsors Fine School Fair, K.G.S. Boys, Girls Compete

Variety of Appeal At Excellent Exhibition By Scholars
PRIZE-WINNERS

Children Use Imagination

In Novel Public Speaking Contest

The growing popularity of King George School Fair sponsored by the Home and School Club was evidenced by the large number of exhibits and the increased attendance of adults at the annual event at the school yesterday. Varied exhibits, a baby show, an impromptu speaking contest and a program of sports composed the interesting Fair Day Program. Principal R. A. Kelly and his staff arranged all details perfectly and each event of the day was carried out efficiently.

The auditorium of the school provided splendid accommodation for the exhibits which were of a high standard. An interesting display was that devoted to Health Teaching which was in charge of Miss M. F. Ross, school nurse. Posters of health principals lined the walls and the attention of visitors centred on the contrasting Houses of Ill Health and Good Health. For the former a miniature house was supposed with racing sugar. Its roof was of black tea and its chimney of doughnuts. A lawn of green tea and walk of loaf sugar completed the composition of this house. The house of Good Health, on the other hand, was made of foods that would build healthy boys and girls—beet green walls, bran roof, milk bottle chimney and shrubbery of carrots, rice and lettuce.

The ladies of the Home and School Club had charge of booths which were well patronized. Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Michaud were in charge of a sale of home cooking; Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Mouit of the candy booth and Mrs. Kerr and Mrs. Revell the ice cream and soft drinks.

Eight charming contestants under one year took part in the Baby Show. Prizes were all such healthy infants that the judge, Dr. G. S. Oronk, M.O.H., and his assistants had a difficult time in deciding the winners. Those finally chosen were: Donna Lambert, who scored 99 ways a feature of school fairs, was in a different form this year, the contestants being asked to give impromptu speeches, describing a picture they were required to study for ten minutes as a basis for the creation. The picture was "Mary and Ruido," by George Spencer Watson, A.R.A., and showed a little girl of four with a group of caged fur- holding in leash a beautiful dog.

Those taking part were: Helen Weddon, Kathleen Riches, Shirley Cowman, Hazel Hagar, Jean Archer, Carl Stitt, Kathleen Brown, Jeanette Jupper, Norma Smith, Sylvia Fowler, Dorothy Hammett, Jim Michaud, Vera Forman, Rhoda Moult.

Mr. L. A. Kelly, chairman, explained the novel form of the contest last night and the prizes were awarded by Miss Ross. The results were awarded as follows: Displaying proof of fair selection and a gift of quick narrative, Mary and Guido were the chief actors in many diversified dramas according to the imagination of the speakers. Guido in most cases proving a courageous hero. The audience was selected at the last minute from which the children took part in the contest, which requiring much greater skill than the usual, was a test also of memorized speeches.

The judges were Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, principal of Belleville Collegiate Institute, and Mr. C. A. Frederick, principal of Queen Mary School. In giving the decision of the judges, Mr. MacLaurin commended highly the splendid display and in commenting on the speeches said the contest was close. Kathleen Riches and Sylvia Potter were tied according to the marks given by the judges.

The prize winners for the exhibits were:

Miss Lulu Sarles Presented With Miscellaneous Shower

West Huntingdon—Just when all were enjoying the warm summer days in stepped an old renowned visitor in the form of Jack Frost. He turned the potato tops black; put starters on the corn binders and put the flies to silence for an hour or two.

Silo filling is starting this week. The corn is a bumper crop this year, due perhaps to the hot summer.

On Wednesday evening a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at Mr. E. T. Sarles' home and gave his daughter, Miss Lulu, bride-to-be, a miscellaneous shower. Rev. R. J. Merriman was chairman for the meeting and Miss Vera Wilson read the following address: Dear Lulu:—

We, your friends and neighbors, gathered here tonight in a social way to wish you bon voyage as you board the ship on the sea of matrimony.

Lulu, we feel we cannot let such a happy event pass without spending an evening with you and we extend to you our very best wishes for the continuance of a happy and prosperous wedded life in your new home. We are pleased to know you are not going far from us and hope to still see you often. We cannot commend too highly your sterling qualities, we have always found you kind and loyal in all your dealings, nor do we forget how faithful you were to our church as organist and how willing you always were to help in various ways. We congratulate Ian in your choice of a husband and with your good partner, Harry, we feel sure your married life will have a very successful voyage.

We also express you of our good wishes and fondest hopes we ask you to accept these tokens of our esteem and friendship.

Signed on behalf of your friends, Vera Wilson,
Gladys Cooke.

Lulu then thanked her friends for their kindness. Speeches were given by Messrs. Percy Ireland, During the evening music was furnished by Miss Winnie Spencer and Messrs. Ireland and Vera Wilson.

The Huntingdon School Fair was held at Ivanhoe on Tuesday. A large number of our people attended.

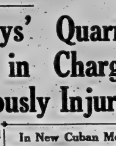
ROW OVER BOOKS LEADS TO SHOOTING

School Boys' Quarrel Culminates in Charge; Victim Seriously Injured

Charge of Attempted Murder Is Laid Against 16-Year-Old Boy

USED SHOT GUN



Boy Broods Over Matter For Months Before Committing Act

Regina, Sask., Sept. 18 (CP)—As a result of a boys' quarrel over school books, Joseph Birch, 16, is in Regina jail charged with attempted murder and his school mate, Lawrence Bishop, 16, lies in hospital here critically injured with gunshot wounds in the head, neck and shoulders.

Birch is alleged to have done the shooting at a farm near Grainland, Sask., about 60 miles northwest of Moose Jaw. Charged with attempted murder, he appeared in Juvenile Court, at Rhine, Sask., and was remanded, without bail, until next Saturday.

Disagreement over the alleged theft of the school books arose between the two lads and led to the shooting, Adam Bishop, father of the wounded boy, said today. Six months ago Bishop is said to have quarrelled with Joseph Birch, who lives on the farm next to the Bishops, following reappearance of several school books. Bishop charged the other with stealing them.

For months, police said, the 16-year old boy had been brooding over the matter. Last Friday he crossed to the Bishop farm, carrying a shotgun. He is alleged to have shot the other boy down as he was at work on the farm.

In New Cuban Move

Colonel Blas Hernandez, who looms as a serious threat to the rule of President Ramon Grau San Martin in turbulent Cuba. Hernandez recently fled Havana and is said to be organizing a following of disgruntled military with a view to ousting the new regime. He hopes to gain support of all factions opposed to Grau San Martin.

BAILEY, BATES NOW ON TRIAL

Alleged Kidnappers Have Special Guard During Hearing

New York, Sept. 18.—(CP)— The six letter word with deadly importance which came back to the headlines today.

Bailey and Bates, modern revivalists of a desperado era, were characterized the "Wild West," went on trial at Oklahoma City for the $200,000 Urschel Kidnapping. They were held before the opening of the trial in shackles, hand and foot, and they slept virtually under the muzzles of rifles, reverently kept by desperate dogs the law regard them.

At Edwardsville, Ill., the trial of five men and a woman for the kidnapping of the aged August Luer, who was released without the payment of ransom—continued.

Peoria, Ill., authorities held a man they believed to be Clyde Outlerbeton whom Denver police want in connection with a plot to kidnap a wealthy clubman.

A threat of kidnap, too, was heard at Norristown, Pa., where the manager of the Mrs. Tommy Lasorda ran received a phone call demanding that the $10,000 accountant's contribution to be given later. If the sport is paid, the extortionist said, "it will be just too bad."

Mrs. Jackson, Ala., police held Clyde Crews, 18, on a charge of attempting to extort money under threat of kidnapping. Brooklyn police too held Mrs. Jean Costello and John Ikels on charges of attempted abduction.

RELICS LOST IN FIRE

Pembroke, Ont., Sept. 18 (CP)— Many rare and valuable relics were lost in a fire which razed the summer home of Col. Herbert J. Mackie at Petawawa Point, early today. Among the relics destroyed were guns collected during the War, and tapestries brought from Europe and other decorations from abroad.

President Silent On Any Plans For Carrying Out of Inflation

(By Francis M. Stephenson Associated Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 18 (CP) — President Roosevelt put another $120,000,000 of Federal pressure behind the United States credit expansion programme today as Southern Congressional spokesmen railed for straight-out currency inflation.

The new Federal funds were made available to the Federal land banks by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to assist in the immediate refinancing of farm mortgages which Tommy Lasorda ran received a phone call demanding that the $10,000 accountant's contribution to be given later. If the sport is paid, the extortionist said, "it will be just too bad."

Mrs. Jackson, Ala., police held Clyde Crews, 18, on a charge of attempting to extort money under threat of kidnapping. Brooklyn police too held Mrs. Jean Costello and John Ikels on charges of attempted abduction.

NOT TREATING NOTE AS JOKE AT LINDSAY

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 18.—(CP) —It may be a joke, but the police are investigating the following note, written on rough paper and found in the Post Office box today:

"I am being kidnapped. Please notify police. My name is Betty Garland. I am from Toronto. The car is a closed sedan. I don't know the license. Please do not think this is a joke. I am desperate."

BAILEY AND WILSON GIVEN 5-YEARS EACH

Penitentiary Terms For Series of Robberies In County

PLEADED GUILTY

Magistrate Points Out To Men the Folly of Crime

George Bailey, 23, of Point Anne, and Frank Wilson, Jr., 33, of this city, were sentenced to serve five years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary on each of six charges of breaking and entering, the sentences to be run concurrently, by Magistrate Mikel today in police court. On two charges of stealing automobiles they were given one year each, while Bailey was given three months on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, making a total of five. The latter sentences are also to run concurrently with the former ones.

Nine different charges were laid to Bailey and he pleaded guilty to them all. Wilson pleaded guilty to eight charges, having no charge of carrying firearms lodged against him. The latter was arrested by the Provincial Police on September 8th, following an all night chase, previous to which he had broken into and entered Oliver's general store at Consecon.

The pair pleaded guilty to other charges of breaking and entering, including Cuffey's store at Bloomfield; Hopkins' garage at Pusboro; two cottages on Main at Thomasburg, and other smaller robberies. Some of the charges was laid by the local police department, it being the belief of Morley Smith's car some three weeks ago, that Bailey and Wilson admitted this theft as well as stealing another at Trenton, the one that was used the night they were apprehended.

Bailey and Wilson, have long criminal records, both having served long terms in the penitentiary. The magistrate pointed out to the young men the folly of crime and told them that the court had taken a very lenient stand in the matter. Bailey was liberated from the penitentiary but ten weeks ago and Wilson only a short time in each case.

B. C. Donnan, K.C., conducted the prosecution, while A. D. Fryfirm appeared for the accused and ably presented their cases.

He is survived by his second wife, the former Miss Ethel Barnett of Toronto, three sons and two daughters.

Mr. Shenstone had been in ill-health for more than a year. Death occurred at his home.

He was a director of the Russell Motor Car Company; Vice-President of the Canada Cycle and Motor Company, Limited; Vice-President of the Canada Cycle and Motor Company, Limited; the City Dairy Company, Limited; director of the Bank of Toronto; director and chairman of the board of the Otto Higel Company.

Groundless Panic of Alleged Swindler Saves Vancouver Bank $5,000

Vancouver, Sept. 18 (CP)— A would-be swindler's groundless panic last him $5,000 according to a police report today.

The man whose name is not given, opened an account in a local bank Friday by depositing a certified cheque for $18,000 drawn on a Calgary bank.

Saturday he deposited a cheque for $412 drawn on a New Westminster bank. The cheque came back soon to withdraw $5,000. His cheque was initialled, but when the teller started to pay in small bills, he asked for larger ones. The teller went to the safe to get them and found the bank doors were closed for the day. The man, apparently thinking he was about to be detained, rushed for an exit and tugged so violently that a bolt was forced. He fled down Hastings street and is still being sought. A check revealed the New Westminster bank's cheque was counterfeit and police at Calgary have been asked to investigate the other.

Ultimatum to I. R. U. Given by A. A. U. of C. Head

MAY OUTLAW I.R.U. CHAMPS IN PLAYDOWNS

A.A.U. of C. Must Be Satisfied All Players Amateurs

NASTY SITUATION

Players However Apparently Eligible To Play In Own League

London, Ont., Sept. 18 (CP) — Champions of the Interprovincial Rugby Union may not qualify to enter the Canadian playdowns, President J. Howard Crocker of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, said here today.

"The Interprovincial players who played in the Interprovincial are real amateurs and should be playing rugby in Canada, the Interprovincial will not be allowed to play winners of the Ontario and Intercollegiate Unions," he declared.

Crocker's statement followed a week of controversy between the Union, its Ottawa Valley branch and the Ottawa Rough Riders, Capital City entry in the Big Four. When the Riders sought to meet Balmy Beach, Ontario Union outfit, in an exhibition game, the Amateur Union demanded cards for all players including five from the United States.

Following the issuance of cards by Gordon Young, secretary of the Ottawa Valley branch of the A.A.U., Crocker said today nothing further would be done by the Union in regard to amateurism in the Big Four until the playoffs start in November.

"Then," he said, "they will find we are very much in business. The shoe will be on the other foot.

The A.A.U., Crocker said, was not anxious that Big Four players take out amateur cards because the Union had no jurisdiction over them. However, he continued, "we have jurisdiction over any of their players who may want to row, play basketball or enjoy other sports. Then we will have something to say about it."

Replying to a statement by Gordon Young who upheld his actions as secretary of the Ottawa Valley branch, Mr. Crocker said "Gordon Young is a nice individual but he just doesn't answer letters. We wrote to him several times and got no reply."

In regard to the issuance of amateur cards to Ottawa Rough Riders for crosse players by Toronto branch of the Union, Mr. Crocker said he would call the attention of the Ottawa branch did not issue the cards then the matter should have been brought to the attention of the Canadian Union."

DIES IN PARK

Toronto, Sept. 18 (CP)— Henry Hall, 70, retired Toronto old Bartender, is dead here today following his collapse in a city park yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Fowler was a native of Kingston, educated at Queen's University and Osgoode Hall. He had been practising law in Toronto for about 40 years and was well known in professional circles. He was a brother of all his relatives residing at Kingston.

Despite Threatening Weather Shannonville Fair is Well Patronized by Whole District

Best Fair In Years Is Consensus of Opinion of Directors

GOOD RACING

Exhibits Above Average And Every Class Well Filled

Tyendinaga residents loyal to their Fair, turned out in hundreds Saturday afternoon in spite of threatening weather to make it a huge success.

The World's Fair at Chicago this year may have lent incentive to the citizens and exhibitors of the World's Fair at Shannonville to put forth renewed efforts to bring that once famous fair back into its own, and they certainly put it over in grand shape. The World's Fair Midway-ville came back into its own Saturday last and those who attended it will spread the news near and far. The directors furnished a great afternoon entertainment and there was something to see or do all the time.

Ten horses were entered in one race and a heads and tails contries made up the other speeding event and it got off with a record. Three good runners in the farmers' running race and 3 in green race, ridden bare-back by farmers on farmers' sons provided great race and were cheered by all. The pulling contest lasted nearly an hour and all 3 teams and their drivers were heartily applauded. Two bale grunts and a horse pulling contest was also provided. Two entertainers garbed as cowboys, playing guitar and singing cowboy songs throng with their instrumental and vocal efforts and another western garbed youth with a cub bear, also entertained well and the old pastime "Kickapoo" ointment "one whiff penetrates to the base of the brain."

The ladies of the United Church did a splendid business in their tea booth and at the close of the afternoon, the last of the pumpkin pies were disposed of. Real pulled taffy made on the grounds was available at 2 booths and it looked like old times at the World's Fair to see the taffy switched and pulled about again by the manufacturer The same machine beaten rows of dolls that have become historic, with the Shannonville Fair were again in their customary place and they are such hard looking faces anyone was willing to win one, many a one.

Mr. Frank Naphin, constable of Marysville, and moderator of St. Marie, made a trip eastward to be in attendance at the Fair at Shannonville. Mr. Naphin's visit to Ontario this year was the familiar figure of Mr. Naphin, for he has at present an inmate of the Belleville General Hospital for an operation on his eyes.

The directors made a splendid improvement to the track by the erection of a strong fencing from the Ontario Highways Department and had it installed along the track. As the ball diamond and the space devoted to the pool contest. Those in charge of affairs at Shannonville deserve credit for the able way everything was provided for and certainly they made a great bid to bring the World's Fair at Shannonville back to its own.

In the evening a dance was held in the hall of the village which was well patronized.

JEAN HARLOW AGAIN WEDS

Flies With Husband To Mexico To Obtain Licence

Yuma, Ariz., Sept. 18 (AP) — Jean Harlow, film screen actress, and widow of the late Paul Bern, was married at 4.20 a.m. here today to Harold Rosson, Hollywood camera man.

They came here from Los Angeles by plane and obtained the license at 4 a.m.

The platinum blonde actress was widowed a little more than a year ago when Bern shot himself in the luxurious Hollywood home he had given to his bride or two months. The producer's body was found last September.

The reason for his act is still a mystery. Scarcely a week after Bern's death, Dorothy Millette, woman-of-the-past in his life, leaped from the Sacramento-Sacramento steamer and drowned.

ASKS TREATY BE RATIFIED

U. S. President Wants To Proceed With St. Lawrence Waterway

Washington, Sept. 18 (CP)—Ratification of the St. Lawrence Waterways Treaty with Canada at the next session of the United States Senate is the aim of President Roosevelt who, it is learned, plans including the gigantic project in the federal public works programme this week.

Roosevelt is also anxious to complete as soon as possible New York State's power project on the St. Lawrence River. It is estimated the State's share of the water power under the treaty will generate 1,100,000 horsepower, with a larger yield of "firm power," that is power available at all times, than Muscle Shoals or Boulder Dam.

The first hint that the administration plans to press for ratification came in a press release by Secretary of War Dern, delivered yesterday at Superior, Wis., in which he said: "I hope the treaty will be ratified without delay, as the construction of the St. Lawrence waterway is an important part of the President's recovery programme."

The President favors ratification of the treaty in its existing form. He has authorized me to repeat to you today that he hopes the treaty will be ratified and that the project will be constructed."

The President will hold another conference here this week with Frank P. Walsh, Chairman of the New York Power authority.

TRADES AND LABOR OPEN CONVENTION

Important Items On Agenda For Consideration

SIX HOURS DAY

Shorter Hours For Working Man One of Principal Items

By Jack Hambleton
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 18 (CP) — The voice of organized labor in Canada was raised today on behalf of the jobless, with more than 250 delegates representing every section of the Dominion in attendance. The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada opened its sessions here.

Shortly after President Tom Moore of Ottawa had welcomed the delegates, more than 100 resolutions dealing with every phase of labor's "fight" against unemployment were laid upon the table. With them were the reports of the executive and legislative committees, and reports, too, of the Ottawa delegates to the American Federation of Labor and British Trades Union Congress.

The resolutions, born the highlights, however, All day yesterday and last night delegates sat behind closed doors and discussed the matters which the executive committee considered the various measures.

Summed up, labor's fight this year will be along the following lines:

Abolition or drastic change in the unemployed road camps.

Introduction of a five-hour day and five-day week in Canadian industry.

Reduction of machinery in factories and in the agriculture industry.

Further protection for the working man in certain matters—With state medicine.

Reduction in age requirements for old age pensions.

One of the most interesting resolutions from the political point of view, asks the congress to endorse the programme and policies of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation. It is understood, it chiefly however, the organization will adopt the measure, since officials have repeatedly declared the congress cannot definitely affiliate itself with any political body.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 18 (CP)—Showers have occurred in Northern Ontario and in Georgian Bay district, where heavy rains have been general in the Lake Superior and gulf areas, strong winds and gales. It has been fair and warm in the region of the Prairie Provinces with the exception of showers in Northern Alberta, the Peace River district, and in the Lake Superior district.

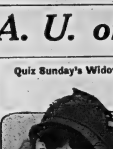
Northern Ontario — Westerly winds, moderate and rather cool tonight and Tuesday.

Ottawa and Upper St. Lawrence Valleys—Moderate westerly winds; fair and rather cool tonight and Tuesday, a few scattered showers.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh winds; fair and cool.

Georgian and Rainy River — Fair, and a little warmer.

Manitoba—Fair and warm.



Saskatchewan—Mostly fair; warm in southern districts; probably a few scattered showers in northern portion.

Alberta—Mostly fair; somewhat cooler in south portion; probably a few scattered showers.

FARMER FOUND IS CRUSHED UNDER BOLDER

Rock Falls Unexpectedly Into Hole Being Prepared

HUNTING ACCIDENT

Six Sudden Deaths In All Reported Over Week-End

Toronto, Sept. 18 (CP)—Six sudden deaths were reported in Ontario over the week end, two of which were caused by shock. A hunting mishap was responsible for a third death, while a fourth life was taken in train accident. Two other men were found dead, one from a fall, the other crushed to death by a huge rock. Missing for three days, Gus Carlson, 66-year-old Swedish farmer of Fort Frances was found by his wife buried beneath a giant rock in a hole on his farm. Carlson had dug a hole beside the rock, intending to roll it in, because it interfered with his plowing. In some unexplained way after the huge boulder moved unexpectedly and rolled on top of Carlson, crushing him to death.

A broken rung 25 feet up the ladder he was using to fix his barn plunged Oliver Lichty, 44, of Manchester, to his death yesterday. Alexander Cummings, 30, of Ottawa, was fatally wounded when his shotgun accidently discharged while duck hunting at Shirley Bay Saturday.

Struck by a train as he was searching for dew worms yesterday morning, Maurice Fitzpatrick, 44, of Sturgeonville was killed almost instantly. He was crawling along on his hands and knees when struck.

Mrs. Mary Jane Sildwell collapsed, while watching a ball game at St. Thomas Saturday and died before medical assistance could be summoned. She had complained of the heat a few minutes previous to her death.

"Conventional Religion as Dead as Methuselah" Says Bishop of Athabasca

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 18 (CP) — "Religion is out of fashion and I am glad of it. It is a good thing for the church that this is so," said Rt. Rev. R. J. Reinson, Rector of St. Paul's, Toronto, and former Bishop of Athabasca here Sunday night. He was addressing over 2,000 Anglicans at their annual "service of witness" held in a theatre.

"Conventional religion," he stated "is as dead as Methuselah. The days when fathers in frock coats and silk hats led mothers and children down the aisle of the church on Sunday morning is no more. In many of the cities of Canada the person who regularly attends church is looked upon as somewhat peculiar.

"In my opinion, this is one of the most hopeful signs for the future of the church. We are going to church simply because it is the thing to do. Religion is out of fashion and I am glad of it."

FIRST SHIPMENT OF APPLES EASTWARD

The first shipments of apples to leave this port for the east, were loaded today on the steamer Glen Allan on her regular weekly call at the dock locally. Some of the apple shipments was loaded from Ostrom's dock at Rossmore where the ship called today for the first time in years. Along with the apple shipments nearly three thousand cheese, honey and canned goods will make up the cargo for Montreal.

TWENTY-FIVE DAYS WITHOUT AN ALARM

Twenty-five days during which time there has not been a single alarm turned in to the local fire department has created a new record for a reason, which has usually been marked by noticeably large number of minor alarms. Last June August 26, when a large barn on the west side of the river was almost consumed by flames, has the department been summoned to even a minor blaze.

'LOCK CAR' WARNING OF POLICE OFFICERS

"Lock your car door when you leave it" warn police on their beat in the downtown sections of the city. During the past week or so a number of reports of petty thieving of articles from parked cars have been reported by owners to the police. On Saturday evening in particular considerable annoyance is caused by those light fingered gentry who make a thorough overhaul of parked cars at the curb, making off with even parcels of groceries, which have been left in the cars by trusting owners.

REGISTRATION TO OPEN ON TUESDAY

Registration of unemployed of the city, who will be eligible for work when suggested work-relief proposals have been finally okayed by the city council and Dominion and Provincial governments will commence at the Central Relief Office at the city hall on Tuesday morning. Men who are at present on the relief lists need not present themselves for further registration.

HARBOR DREDGING NOW COMPLETED

Harbor dredging, which has been carried on during the past summer months was completed last week with the completion of the deepening of the channel at Schuster's dock. At present the large dredge, tug and barges with their crews are warped at the government dock awaiting further word from the owners.

THEATRE STAGE IS EXTENDED

Oklahoma Cowboys who are appearing here in the city this week would find the stage of the Belle Theatre far too small for their roping acts. "Dot", world's champion female rope trick artist, especially would find considerable difficulty in rehearsing her act. So Mr. George Forbes, manager, recruited the aid of a local contractor and is having a whole new stage built in the theatre for the presentation.

CHIROPRACTIC

Is more than the art of adjusting. While adjusting is a necessary part of making a correction, it is relatively of least importance. The matter of prime importance is locating the subluxation and interpreting its effects. This requires exact and comprehensive knowledge of the structures and uses of the human body. Also the service of a pathologist to determine which nerves or nerves is subjected to the greatest pressure. More skill in adjusting to move again a chiropractor than the ability to hold a knife makes a surgeon.

ATTEMPT TO FIRE BLDG.

Alco Hall At Corbyville Saved By Timely Arrival of Occupants

Soaked with either gasoline or coal oil a large quantity of kindling wood was found in the cellar of the old Corbyville hotel, now known as Alco Hall, by one of its occupants, Mr. Geo. Saunders, late Sunday night. Mr. Saunders at once informed the Provincial Police, who fully investigated.

About 10 p.m. Mr. Saunders was of the opinion that he had heard prowlers about the rear of the premises and upon investigating found a cellar window open. He at once rushed into the cellar, where the soaked kindling wood was found. The odor of gasoline or coal oil was quite noticeable as soon as Mr. Saunders opened the cellar door. None of the neighbours were fortunate enough to see any prowler or suspicious looking characters about.

The building Alco Hall is owned by the C.I.A.C.O., situated at Corbyville and occupied by Mr. Saunders and Mr. E. Sunderland, the latter being employed as a watchman at the Alcohol plant in Corbyville. Mr. Saunders and his family live on the lower floor, while the Sunderlands live on the second floor.

This is the second alleged attempt to fire buildings in that village, the post office operated by Miss White, having been threatened in the same manner about ten days ago. The Provincial Police are still investigating.

SECTION OF SEWER ON CEDAR STREET BROKEN

City workmen were engaged today at the task of digging up sections of the sanitary main sewer on Cedar Street, which through some cause not determined as yet has collapsed, leaving considerable lengths of the pipe broken and plugged. Previously an attempt had been made by the department of public works to clean the sewer in the usual manner. It was then found, that considerable sections of the line had been badly plugged. Digging by the men disclosed the fact, that the pipe had become broken and useless. It is believed that the rough stone fill, which had covered the pipes soon after they had been laid had settled its weight on the tile eventually causing its collapse. Considerable trouble in other sections of the city has been caused by tree roots entering the pipes and blocking them.

Masked Marvel Bounced Hard By Mayes McLain In Feature

GOOD BOUTS

Masked Marvel And Hart Collide Head-on In Bout

Professional wrestling of the sans cauliflower ear that offered sport fans in the largest cities of this country took its first actual strangle hold on feminine fancy in this city Saturday evening.

Two bouts which brought together four of the best known mat artists in professional circles, arranged as the feature program for the last evening of their six-day Karnival, provided a fitting climax and finale for the splendid entertainment offered by the Kiwanis Club during the past week.

Probably the largest contingent of the fair sex ever to witness one of these tingling stiff-arm bits of science and physical strength was on hand Saturday evening to see for themselves as Saturday evening's entertainers as Mayes McLain, Al Getzewitch—before many an adoring circle as the Masked Marvel—Frankie Hart, the city's own favorite, and Bert Hamilton, the city's rough ready villain, in action. For them as well as for the male spectators who packed the reserved seats in front of and around the ring it was an evening of suspense, thrills and excitement.

McLain Quite Tricky

Getzewitch, the punishing Pole, who has long since discarded his cauliflower ears, opposite of the Masked Marvel, and shed the black hood which covers his head and shoulders here on previous occasions, gave a new exhibition of ruggedness and willingness as did all star contestants, which greatly helped to offset the scrappy carried out by high boosters of Oskahoma University wrestler, McLain. Both men turned in remarkable efforts as they swung from straight wrestling and close mat work to the rough and ready style of matters, including elbow smashes, rough tackling and flying scissors. McLain, with the latter trick caused plenty of trouble for the clever Getzewitch, who in an attempt to avoid one of the more punishing holds by taking refuge out side the ropes unknowingly, came in for a large amount of Bronx cheering and razzing, from the roaring crowd. Several screaming flying tackles by McLain after a period of punishing grappling in the first frame weakened Getzewitch and left him an easy victim for a stunning body slam after fifteen minutes of hard work. Again Getzewitch came back in the second round to fall hard for a hammer lock and reverse body slam given by McLain, who demonstrated his punishing fall for the first time for local fans. McLain, champion rope artist, who depends largely for his rebound from the ropes for his falls, was badly handicapped in throwing with loose ring posts and ropes.

Hart Wins

In the fastest bout ever seen on a local mat Frankie Hart, the flying Dutchman, marched to gain a fast close falls out of three over the husky and clever Bert Hamilton, who depending upon a considerable amount of rough work to gain a fall over the wrestling fans from the first time fans were able to see Hart use a series of flying tackles, uncorked after he had been severely mauled by the scowling Rubenstein during the first bout. The first fall for Rubenstein came after nineteen minutes of fast and furious wrestling, that had the fans in the aisles cheering for their favorite to win. Encouraged by the vicious attack of Rubenstein, however, Hart, last the first half when he leaped into the airplane ride and a body slam. In the second bout Hart, not to be outdone by the one to go. Hart again took the aggressive in the third round and surged on by the howling crowd and still shrieks from the feminine section of the audience, displayed a willingness to mix it. Fists, knees and elbows were used freely. Twice Rubenstein was chased through the ropes. Nothing daunted Hart landed over the outside in the third time for his enemy, hauled him into the ring again and subjected him to a series of hard flying tackles. In an attempt to give Hart some of his own medicine the scowling Rubenstein also uncorked several of his own tackles, but in the end came when both misjudged the distance and met head on in the air. Almost knocked unconscious by the collision Hart, nevertheless, managed to revive sufficiently to fall on his fireman lying limp on the mat, to score the deciding fall. Both men had to be assisted from the ring, and the services of Dr. Morgan, who was in the audience were called for in the dressing room. No serious injury was reported, though both wrestlers were badly dazed.

Officials of the Kiwanis Club who staged the exhibition were jubilant over the success accorded the match. More favorable comment had been received over this novel wrestling feature than almost any other performance which had been arranged through the week. In spite of the many attractions elsewhere in the city on Saturday a fair crowd was in attendance at the wrestling match and also at the booths during the evening.

Following the feature programme the space was cleared and dancing to the music of Dutch Turney's Commodores afforded young and old with a means of pleasantly whiling away the rest of the evening hours.

Drawing Made

At 11 o'clock three drawings were made. Little Miss Doris Aikins drew out the first winning number for the refrigerator, No. 782. This lucky ticket was held by Mrs. Harley Wray, 11 Highland Ave.

Nearly fifty correct guesses which were on the cards issued by Albert Miles, of the number of rubber balls in the washing machine, were handed in. Jas. Low, for little Miss Aikins to choose from. The lucky one drawn was that of Mayor C. O. Thoe. The correct number of balls in the machine was seventeen.

The last photograph given by Clarke's Studio for the holder of the lucky ticket was won by Mrs. Briand, 252 Bleecker Ave.

OBITUARY

FRANK YOUNG

Word was received in the city Saturday afternoon of the sudden passing in Deseronto of Councillor Frank Young, veteran of the Mask-ed Marvel, and shed the black hood which covers his head and shoulders here on previous occasions, gave a new exhibition of ruggedness and willingness as did all star contestants, which greatly helped to offset the scrappy carried out by high boosters of Oskahoma University wrestler, McLain. CAR STRIPPED OF TIRES IS FOUND ABANDONED

Vehicle Taken While Family is Attending Church

Stripped of all its tires an automobile that had been stolen some few hours previously was found abandoned midway between Corbyville and Frankford's Bridge late Sunday night after the Provincial Police had diligently searched for the missing vehicle.

About 9 p.m. Sunday evening Mr. William Parnell of Dufferin Ave., Trenton, reported the loss of his automobile to the local police. The car had been parked on Station St., while Mr. Parnell and his family were attending divine service nearby. It was at first thought that joy riders had taken the motor car for a little jaunt.

Later the Provincial Police were notified of the theft and it was following their efforts that the abandoned machine was found north of Corbyville. Apparently the robbers wanted the tires for a car of their own as no tools or other articles were found in the car. A woman's coat, of some value was also left behind. The spare tire on the back of the car was left behind as it was not in good condition. The robbers apparently had their own car with them to make away with the stolen tires.

The car, a 1934 Chevrolet coach, was returned to Mr. Parnell by the police today.

Letters to the Editor

SET UP DICTATORSHIP IN CUBA

To the Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sir—

"Is not the Zwick's Island project too ambitious a scheme to be undertaken until after the St. Lawrence River improvement has been decided on?"

The old highwater mark of the bay as we older folk know it will be preserved. The level established permanently after the St. Lawrence River project is carried out. There will be no more need to run reaches as far up the river at the foot of Coleman's Island.

This correspondent saw the magnificent new elevator at Prescott recently built, where it is likely the upper dam of the St. Lawrence River improvement will be built. The wonderfully vast body of water, that will be impounded above the dam will extend even up our little river and this fact should be considered in any undertaking along our water front.

Those many happy days spent on Zwick's Island, when the only means of access was by a skiff. This was before the bay bridge was built and before the island had been denuded of its fine hickory trees, and before the new bluff facing the bay had been dug into for the gravel it contained.

Let us wait awhile before going into this most desirable if premature scheme of doing anything to Zwick's Island unless it would be to plant trees in abundance all over the island.

The days when the island was enjoyed was when there were plenty of skiffs available and boating was universal, and before the bay bridge cut off the approach by water.

The future use of the island will be limited to those owning cars, just as the beautiful park at Gananoque on the River now is.

Yours very truly,

Addison Vandervoort.

Trenton Chamber of Commerce Co-Operate to Deepen Channel for Quinte Route to the Sea

Believe Freight Rates On Coal To This District Will Be Cheaper

DISCUSS CONTRACT

Printing Contract To Advertise Trenton Left In Abeyance

Trenton, Sept. 18.—(Special)—The Trenton Chamber of Commerce met in the town hall on Friday to deal with the deepening of the Telegraph Light and Nigger Island in the Bay of Quinte to have a direct route from Montreal to Trenton for ocean-going coal and freight boats.

A letter from Mr. J. O. Herity, Secretary of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, was read to the members by Mr. O. Newton, Secretary of the local C. of C. in regard to their investigations of the Belleville-Montreal route. Freight rates on coal from Montreal to Toronto were considered by the season of boat competition at Toronto causing the lower rate at Toronto than Montreal-Belleville.

Mr. G. Lewis stated that the Trenton Chamber of Commerce co-operate to the fullest extent with other Chambers of Commerce in this district to secure the deepening of the channels in the Bay of Quinte to a 14-foot depth and more particularly those at Telegraph Light and Nigger Island.

In speaking on the motion, Mr. Alyea pointed out that we have better possibilities of a harbor than Belleville, with more land, etc., available.

"Only these two spots mentioned stop the vessels from entering Trenton and we got't want Telegraph Light and not Nigger Island deepened," stated Councillor Alyea.

Boats with a 13½ foot draft have docked in Trenton this year and only took bottom at these two points enroute up the Bay of Quinte.

Having ocean going tramp steamers plying between the Old Country and Trenton would effect the whole community. Coal cargoes in, with grain, cheese, lumber and numerous other articles going out would mean considerable business in this locality.

The matter was left over for further discussion at the next meeting as President Ed Simmons was absent from town and Mark Tripp was in the chair, who adjourned the meeting.

Mr. Howard Jarrett of the Quinte Sun took the platform to ask the members if the contract for nine thousand papers advertising the coming Trenton week, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce had been let to an Ottawa firm.

With the absence of the President, the members could not answer the question as they did not know all the particulars.

Mr. N. J. Weir said it would be a colossal mistake to have the printing done out of town. Local papers build up Trenton week by week, while an advertising sheet often finds the waste basket. Pooling pays said the speaker said he was glad to see the local papers co-operating. It was understood at first these papers would be printed in Trenton by both printing concerns. Lester H was said an Ottawa concern was to handle the contract.

Other business men agreed with Mr. McNair in having the work done locally even if it cost a little more money.

After many heated arguments the meeting adjourned till some time this week, when the president, Mr. Simpson will be able to straighten the whole affair out.

Late Mrs. J. H. Fitzgerald

The funeral of the late Ethel Algeline Fitzgerald, wife of John H. Fitzgerald, was held Sunday afternoon from the home of Mrs. S. R. Zimmerman at Carrying Place. Rev. Swain of Consecon conducted the services at the house and graveside in Carrying Place cemetery where interment was made. The bearers were, Jas. Quackenbush, Jas. Hendricks, Jas. Hendricks, Wm. Corrigan, Jos. Buchanan and Ernest Bonter.

The late Mrs. Fitzgerald passed away suddenly in Detroit on September 13, while visiting her sister. She was born in Redneersville, Prince Edward County, fifty years ago but has resided in Port Credit borne for many years.

Left to mourn her passing besides her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Wilson (Violet), and three sisters, Mrs. L. Young, Detroit; Mrs. Ellis, Toronto, and Mrs. John Hopkins, of Toronto, and one brother, Charles Brickman, of Amelisburg, and Mrs. Brickman, of Picton.—(Port Colborne papers please copy).

Late Mrs. Robert Bernard

The funeral of Eliza Bernard, wife of Robert Bernard, was held from St. Peter-in-Chains Church on Saturday morning with Very Rev. Dean J. J. O'Reilly celebrating Solemn Requiem Mass.

The late Mrs. Bernard fractured her hip in a fall at her home on King Street several weeks ago, but owing to her advanced age she passed away Thursday in her 80th year.

Besides sorrowing husband, two sons, Arthur, of Trenton, and John of Toronto, and two daughters, Mrs. Fred Hutcheson of Trenton and Mrs. O. Barnhart of Missouri, are left to mourn her passing.

Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery, Trenton.

The bearers were, R. Bernard, C. Bernard, W. Burden, L. Cose, H. Desjardins and R. Hutcheson.

TWO YOUTHS NOT GUILTY

Manohan And Martin Deny Knowledge of Burglar Kit

Gordon Manahan & this city and Leo Martin of Windsor, were both found not guilty of having house-breaking tools in their possession by night when they appeared before His Honour Judge Deroche in the County Court held Saturday.

Manahan and Martin were apprehended by the city police some time ago, loitering about the city streets in company with Harry Mattis. The trio were travelling in Martin's car in which the alleged burglar tools were found. Mattis claimed ownership of the tools while the other two denied all knowledge of their presence.

His Honour assured the two accused that he had given all reasonable doubt to their favour and dismissed them from custody, but, not before warning them relative to keeping good company. Both men's previous records were introduced by Prosecuting Attorney N. O. Donnan.

Manahan stated during the trial that he was arrested every time he came into Belleville, although he was endeavouring to go straight. The three men claimed to be enroute to the tobacco fields near Windsor. Mattis had previously pleaded guilty to the same charge. Manahan and Martin were not defended.

ATTRACTIONS AT LOCAL THEATRES

COWBOYS ARE REAL ENTERTAINERS COMING TO BELLE TUESDAY

Ken Hackley and his Oklahoma Cowboys, nationally known radio artists which are coming to the Belle Theatre to appear in person, tomorrow and Wednesday, matinee daily, are real novelty entertainers as well as real cowboys. All are of the cowboys play any and all string instruments — just say that happen to be handy.

They feature many old time tunes and songs in their stage show and many novelties. The funny cowboy, the typical cowboy, will keep the audience in an uproar of laughter with his comic antics and catchy, funny songs such as "It Can't Be Done", "Adam and Eve", "You Can't Change It", and many others.

Zeke, as he is called, is just naturally funny, and you never can tell what this clumsy and bungling cowboy will do next to keep you laughing. Many people will like the old time cowboy songs, some will prefer the old time yodels, the feats of trick roping will astound you with the nearness of it, as well as the extremely difficult rope tricks, such as jumping through the spin-ning rope. All this in contrast to the numerous to mention.

Ken Hackley and his Oklahoma Cowboys have been featured over CHCT radio station at Toronto, last week, where they made many friends of their listeners.

This group of novel western entertainers was featured on the National Farm and Home Hour over the coast to coast network of the National Broadcasting Company, the ones that create a sensation in every radio station with their fast and diversified radio programs. So when you see them at the Belle tomorrow or Wednesday you will see many stunts not of fun, plenty of pep, a typical cowboy entertainment of "girls, singin', yodelin', dancin'.

Good Screen Bill

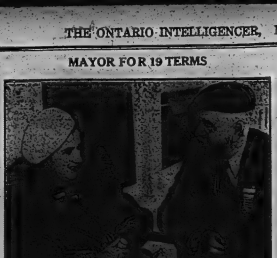
Featured on the Lane program with the Oklahoma Cowboys is a good screen program, the Feature attraction is "Hello Sister", a Fox production co-starring James Dunn and charming Rose Mallory.

From the Battery to Spuyten Duyvil, along New York's Great White Way, the camera roams. Towering buildings, massed throngs, the cool coldness indifference of the giant city are caught by the camera. All this in contrast to the five human beings who are picturized struggling yearningly toward their desires.

Basically, the drama reveals the romance of a small town boy and girl drawn together by mutual loneliness in the Metropolis. More broadly, it pictures the effect this love has on their immediate surrounding, their friends, their lives.

James Dunn, whose first screen success was as a Broadway character in "Sad Girl" is featured opposite the new screen find, Rose Mallory.

Miss Mallory is an ash-blonde, blue-eyed, Southern beauty, who typifies the girl of innocence of which the drama treats.



Chief support are ZaSu Pitts, seen as the homely, pathetic, lonely girl, friend of the heroine; Minna Gombell, as their hard, enameled, wise-cracking, but generous hearted neighbor, and Terrence Ray, as Dunn's smart-aleck room-mate.

A funny Andy Clyde comedy, and the popular Canadian Newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

LICENSE ALL REQUIRED FOR LOW RATE TRIP

Toronto, Sept. 18.—With a view to meeting the requirements of the low hunter, E. C. Bourlier, General Passenger Agent of the Canadian National Railways, announced Saturday a radical innovation in railway tariffs for the hunting season. In the past the special hunters' fares applied only to parties of five or more. This season the low rates will apply to any individual who can present a hunter's license, issued by the Provincial Department of Game and Fisheries. "In the altering of the tariff regulations we were giving consideration to the individual hunter, who frequently desires to take a moderate week-end trip to Northern Ontario and spend a day or so in the bush. Last season many applications of this nature were made and we feel that such men should be afforded the same privilege as those, who annually make up parties and spend considerable time in their camps. By adopting this system, the Canadian National Railways feel that it will stimulate interest in this great autumn sport and will pave a most beneficial result throughout the north," Mr. Bourlier stated.

MAYOR FOR 19 TERMS

M. Wilfrid Lorrain, dean of the 600 distinguished French-Canadian leaders visiting the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, director of the Quebec Union of Municipalities, explains to a fair fellow-passenger, Mlle. Angeline Descary, on S.S. Noronic, the secret of being elected mayor, year by year for 19 consecutive times. He presided over the destinies of l'Abord-a-Plouffe, Quebec.

The Kingston Penitentiary Riots

His Honor Judge Deroche in his first article deals with the history of the recent riots in Kingston penitentiary, the facts of which he has kindly furnished the Ontario Intelligencer.

The history of the riot seems to be as follows:

The men (meaning the inmates) had for months possibly years been asking for the removal of certain grievances which were in their minds, with little or no response. They now decided that on October 17th, at 3 pm. they would walk out of the shops and make a peaceful demonstration to impress upon the warden and those him upon Ottawa the demands for redress of their supposed wrongs. I use the word "peaceful" in the sense that there was no intention on the part of the men to do violence to either person or property, and no intention to escape.

Unfortunately for the men, the warden had heard of the suggested demonstration, and so each shop at three o'clock found its doors locked. Now that they had decided upon the demonstration they were not to be baulked, and so the men in the mail bag department, which includ-Kirkland, the accused in this trial, threw a hose out of the win-dow and went down the hole. An acetylene torch was taken from the blacksmith's shop, and the locks of the doors of the shops were burned loose, and the doors opened to free the men, who then gathered in the shop dome. The warden came in and asked what they wanted. They mentioned cigarette papers and recreation and the warden was asked to telephone Ottawa for authority to meet their requests. The warden spoke to the men, telling them of the foolishness of their action, and two of the inmates, Behan and Garceau, also addressed the gathering. During these speeches to be no violence to any one or damage to property. The warden went to the telephone, but instead of telephoning Ottawa he telephoned for the soldiers.

In the meantime a number of men started out to bring in some other men, when the watchman fired a shot, just landing in front of the leader. The warden instructed the watchman to continue firing. Two or three more shots were fired, causing the men to return to the dome. The warden says he feared the men were going out to try to liberate one O'Brien, who has been in solitary confinement for over a year. This the men deny.

When it was announced that the soldiers were coming, one of the men, Tim Buck, advised the men that the soldiers could not or would not hurt them so long as they did no damage to property or violence to anyone, and instructed the men to gather pails of water and bars-cade the door, expecting to stand siege.

The officers or guards or soldiers, or some of them, backed a heavy truck loaded with bricks into the dome door, and broke it in, some of them following in, and one officer fired some shots over the heads of the men.

The men had ordered the officers up the stairs from the dome floor to the mail bag department, being one of the shops opening off a gallery running around the dome. The men followed or went along, until practically the whole body had shifted from the dome floor to the mail bag department. The men barricaded the door and window in the mail bag department to prevent the soldiers entering. Admittance, however, was gained by another window, and the same officer fired several shots into the room. The men had ordered the officers and guards to the front of the room to receive the shots if any were fired into the crowd.

About this time some of the officers did not move fast enough to suit the men and were pushed, and a wooden cupidor was thrown, which hit an officer on the head. Likewise some sewing machines were broken by some of the men. One of them protested to his fellow man who was breaking a machine. The reply he got was "this is the machine I work at. I have been punished often enough because of this machine, and now I am getting even with it."

A conference was later held between the warden, some of the officers, and some of the men, and a satisfactory agreement reached for the time being. The warden was to make representations to Ottawa as to the grievances of the men, no one was to be punished for the riot until after a fair trial, and the men were to be allowed to go to work the next day. The men then filed off peacefully to their cells.

This is the extent of the riot.

In tomorrow's issue will appear the answer to the question: Why were the men found guilty of a riot?

BOYCOTT OF U. S. FIRMS IS UNDERWAY

LABOR TROUBLES

Some of Military Support Former President De Cespedes

(By Edmund A. Chester)

HAVANA, Sept. 18 (AP)—Increasing labor troubles challenge the strength of the week-old Cuban government today as powerful opposition groups completed a new plan designed to end political troubles.

Americans throughout the island were said to be "nervous" as 27 business groups threatened a 24-hour cessation of business tomorrow to protest against workers' violence as the number of strikes grew.

Boycotts against American firms were invoked at Manzanillo, where a general walkout was set for today.

Communists in Santiago threatened to seize American mills and banks and all American women were taken for safety to Nente, across the bay from Havana.

American-owned Manganese mines at Cristo remained a storm centre. In Havana 8,000 Cubans paraded shouting "down with Summer Welles—American Ambassador — and "down with American imperialism." Unrest grew in a number of other places.

Probable Compromise

Meanwhile, there was reported that a compromise could be effected between President Ramon Grau San Martin and the opposition factions, which seek his retirement—the Nationalists of Colonel Carlos Mendieta, the followers of former President Mario G. Menocal, the A.B.C. and O.C.R.R. secret societies, and others.

In protracted meetings they failed to get the executive's acceptance of any of three plans offered for the solution of political turmoil and it was understood in high political circles that their unrest plan reiterated demands that the President-ent grow for a "truly national" government representative of all factions.

Those who believed a solution was in sight found great significance in a conference between Mr. Welles and Dr. Orau San Martin. Neither would comment.

Along with industrial unrest and the administration situation, a third problem remained to be settled, as irritating as the others.

Want Return of De Cespedes

That concerned 500 army and navy officers barricaded and besieged in the National Hotel for a week. They insist that Gran San Martin step down in favor of Carlo Manuel de Cespedes, who in mid-August followed Gerardo Machado in the presidency.

Serving to keep this problem before the public was the visit last night of 100 officers' wives to the hotel, demanding permission to enter. They were drenched with water from fire hoses and were forced to turn back, they said, by students and the soldiers guarding the hotel.

LONDON'S LAST GRAND JURY

The last grand jury to be empanelled in London was charged before Sir Percival Clarke, the chairman, at London Sessions on the 29th. of August. Grand juries are abolished as from Friday, September 1, last.

Nineteen persons, of whom all but four were men, served on the grand jury. They included Mr. John Drinkwater, the poet.

"My charge to you today," said Sir Percival, "is in the nature of a swan song, with this difference—that it is the listener and not the singer who is to expire.

"In spite of rival claims that have been made recently, I think I can confidently assert that you constitute the last grand jury in the country—certainly in the County of London—to perform its duty to the State."

Sir Percival pointed out that though he had used the word "last," a grand jury might yet be called upon at London Sessions if a person were charged under an Act of the reign of King Henry VIII. calling "An Acte concerninge the Triall of treasons committed out of the King Majesty's Dominions," or if a person were charged under an Act of the reign of King William III. to punish governors of plantations in this kingdom for crimes committed in the plantations.

"These offences are triable only at the Quarter Sessions of London and Middlesex," said Sir Percival, "and so remote is the prospect of such a charge that I think you may regard yourselves as the final grand jury."

Sir Percival said the origin of trial by jury was unknown, but it was certainly in existence in some form or another in Anglo-Saxon times. Grand juries probably began in the reign of Richard II. (978-1916), when twelve senior Thanes were sworn in the county court that they would accuse no innocent man and acquit no guilty one.

"So great is our love of justice," Sir Percival continued, "that over a large period of years Parliament has raised so many protections against improper convictions that the necessity for the services of grand juries has gradually diminished. The duties of grand juries have for some time been superfluous as far as the quarter sessions are concerned. So plentiful are the barriers raised in defence of an accused person that it is surprising that prisoners are convicted at all."

Sir Percival said he could recall cases in which a prisoner had confessed and yet had been acquitted by the jury, not because his confession was untrue, but because it had been made in circumstances rendering it inadmissible as evidence.

POLL TAX FOR FEMALES

These are days when the feminine sex is rather insistent on having equal privileges with the male sex. Yet we hardly think that the ladies will be in favor of a proposal which has been made by the municipal council of Sault Ste. Marie, and which has been passed on to the Ontario Municipal Association for its approval or otherwise. Some unusual things come out of the Sault, but this proposal, if adopted, would cause more stir than most of them.

The suggestion is that the Statute Labor Act be amended by provincial legislature, so as to make poll tax applicable to female persons as well as to males. Men liable for this tax have for years been accustomed to paying it with the best grace possible, but we wonder how the ladies would feel if they were subjected to the same levy of $5.00 per head. We imagine the protest would be far more potent than anything the male sex has had to say. And it might even be more effective.

Of course, such a plan might have the result of increasing the marriage rate. What would be more appropriate than for a young man and a young woman, both assessed for the tax, to put their heads together and decide to escape the levy by getting married and becoming householders, and so exempt. Truly, the idea has interesting possibilities, and might be beneficial in more ways than one.—Cobourg Sentinel Star.

THE ORIOLE'S GOOD-BYE

Faintly I caught his whistle —
Echo of verdant June —
Oh! how my pulses quickened,
My heart with his song a-tune;
And there on a swaying tree-top,
I saw his plumage bright,
And memories of happy summers
Awoke at the thrilling sight.

But his song held a note of sadness,
He sang in a minor key,
A farewell song to the Northland,
To his summer home and me.
For today he is flying southward,
And in spite of the spirit's yearn,
The joys of youth's bright summer
Will never with him return.

HOT DOG KING?..

HOT DOG VENDOR in New York City has been offered a kingship, but, curious to relate, he may not accept it. Here is the story as told by a New York reporter:

A big, fat envelope, postmarked Nairobi, British East Africa and sent special delivery, informed the modest Kelly this morning that if he wished he could yield the humble frankfurter fork for a sceptre. The Swahili of British East Africa proposed Kelly to rule them, with all the powers of a bwana. A kingdom is his for the asking.

As he speared the sizzling frankfurters with the swing of a connoisseur in his pavilion near the Arsenal in Central Park Kelly disclosed his indecision.

"It's not that I like hot dogs so much," he said, "as it is that I don't know that I'd like Africa so much. It's not like the call of the sea, nor the smell of the Orient, if you know what I mean.

"Besides I've got a good business here, and I don't think the missus would like the climate over there. It's kind of hot there, isn't it? And never did speak Swahili."

Chief negotiations in the movement to make Kelly a king, the frankfurter salesman explained, were Aussini, a Mohammedan Swahili brought here two years ago to care for a shipment of baby gorillas in the park zoo, and Aussini's friend, Emanuel.

Kelly taught Aussini some of the ways of the white man, such as eating with a knife and fork. Aussini never forgot Kelly for this favor. Emanuel also became very attached to the hot dog expert, but wasn't much at learning things.

Emanuel preferred to gad about Harlem instead of grooming gorillas. But when the Swahili returned to Africa they told their countrymen all about Kelly—and how he could brown a luscious frankfurter to a fare-thee-well.

The Martin Johnsons arrived in Swahililand about the time the tribesmen had decided to make Kelly king. The Johnsons sent Kelly the letter telling all about how the tribes had voted, in whatever way they vote over there, to make Kelly a bwana.

FIVE THOUSAND WATERMELONS were dumped into the Atlantic Ocean when a wave from an ocean liner upset a power boat at the mouth of Patapsco river in Chesapeake Bay. The liner came too close to the power boat, and the waves created by the big boat just swept over the fruit boat like a blanket, and it filled and sank in a few moments. The crew of four escaped in the dinghy, while the big liner continued unconcernedly on her way, apparently not having noticed the fruit boat at all. The arrogance of the big fellows!

The first annual meeting of the executive council of the Veterans' Association of the Canadian Militia was held in the Administration building at the Toronto exhibition recently. Lt.-Col. G. Sterling Ryerson presided and announced that steps had already been taken towards the erection in Toronto of a monument to the men who had fallen in South Africa. He proposed also that the Government should grant pensions of half their pay in the field to all indigent veterans over 60 years of age. Mr. Wm. Johnson of Belleville in addressing the meeting said that Belleville had sent to fight for the country more men than any other place in Canada in proportion to its population. Three hundred and ninety-four men marched out of Belleville one morning to repel the Fenians and 347 of them are still alive. At Mr. Johnson's suggestion the presidents of all affiliated associations were made vice-presidents of the general association. Sir Mackenzie Bowell was elected a vice-president of the association.

Word was received from Montreal yesterday of the arrival there of cigarette making machinery from the Molins Machine Company, Ltd., of London, Eng., destined for The H. B. Gerrie Tobacco Co. Ltd., of Toronto. The machinery arrived in the Cunard liner, Ascania, from Southampton.

Officials of The H. B. Gerrie Tobacco Co. Ltd., a new and independent unit in the tobacco field and the first tobacco company to establish in Toronto, announce that they are now ready to commence operations at their new plant at the corner of Dufferin and Van Horne Streets. Officers of the company are H. B. Gerrie, President and Managing Director; W. J. Reid, Vice-President and Director; F. B. Gregory, Tobacco Buyer; and E. W. Fraser, General Sales Manager. All are men of long experience in the tobacco industry.

According to cable information received by the Gerrie officials when the machinery was being shipped from Southampton by the British manufacturing concern, Molins Machine Co. ARMY WORKERS FROM INDIA CONDUCT SERVICES

Capt. and Mrs. Williams on Furlough Give Inspiring Messages

Captain and Mrs. S. W. Williams who have spent seven years in Salvation Army work in India, conducted a special series of meetings in the city yesterday.

These officers, have had the oversight of one of the Army's Criminal Settlements in the north of India. These settlements are operated by the Salvation Army, on behalf of the Indian Government, and are proving successful in reclaiming to Christ many of this tyrannic element.

Captain and Mrs. Williams are now enjoying their homeland furlough, as Mrs. Williams' home, (nee Captain Beatrice Huffman), in Trenton, and splendid congregations greeted the messsanies at the Citadel services, morning and evening.

At Station Street Hall in the afternoon an interesting programme was rendered by the Young People of the Branch Sunday School over which Captain and Mrs. Williams presided.

An Indian Missionary Demonstration (in costume) is to be presented at the Citadel tonight, when the visitors will explain much of the work carried on by the Salvation Army for the Salvation of India.

Crystalacs Eliminated from Junior Race by St. Cyprians in Well Played Game 6-3

Blazetich And Hammett Wage Merry Mound Duel-

SMART GAME

Locals Not Disgraced In Losing To St. Cyprians

Baseball wound up its little ball of yarn locally on Saturday when the Toronto St. Cyprians made it two straight and eliminated the Crystalac juniors by downing the local kids by the score of 6 to 3.

The game was by far the best played junior game of the current season and dropped into a pitcher's battle between George Blazetich hurling for the Toronto aggregation and Jimmie Hammett on the hillock for the Young-managed crew. Although Blazetich was credited with the win he in no way overwhelmed the efforts of Hammett, who hurled equally as good a game. The elimination of the pecals marked the finish of the season for entering the finals in the Junior O.B.A.A. play.

A belated batting rally on the part of the Queen City juniors in the sixth and seventh, when they scored five runs after six men had scured them of victory, Leaving out these two drastic frames, the locals were much the better in the pitcher of the contest. Failure to hit with the bases loaded in the sixth spelled defeat for the locals, who incidentally were the fighting Art Cole, the local's initial sacker, led the Crystalac hitters with a double and two timely singles, while Mase Rigby collected three one base blows. Only extra base hit was registered by the losing Crystalacs, Mo Azsmith, the visitor's first baseman, was the big hitter of the game for the visitors, collected two doubles and a single. Extra base hits for the losers were looked upon by the chaps of the victorious combine considerable degree.

Winners Open Scoring

The St. Cyprians opened the scoring in the second frame when Jeffers sprayed a triple and scored on M. Azsmith's subsequent hit. In the sixth they added another when M. Azsmith hit for the circuit with two on. Again in the next frame, they added two more after Little walked and the next three batters. The Crystalacs went into the lead in the third when they scored two runs. Cole singled but was out on Grey's hit to short. Ford singled scoring Gray and later scored himself on a passed ball. One bright successful spot in the locals bagged another in the fifth to make the score 3 to 2, but failed to be short-lived. In the last half of the ninth the locals threatened but Blazetich settled away to strike out two batters on the third and so to centre with two on.

The Crystalacs, but a second year junior team, are to be congratulated on the impressive showing they made in the ranks of the junior O.B.A.A. this year. They are a credit to the league, which they won and the community which they represent. The efforts of Hammett, who recently underwent an operation on his thumb but, gamely slammed the pellet to centre under a handicap ,were also of note.

Spying on Sports

BY

William Ritt

Central Press Canadian

THE SPORT WRITER, it seems, may get a break, at last. He may be forced to move to Hollywood to keep in touch with the trend of things athletic. Get that "forced"?

No kidding. At the moment there seems to be more than a passing athletic figure in Los Angeles and its movie suburb than in New York. Hollywood more are constantly popping off trains and aeroplanes. The talkies have called them.

The invasion of sport headliners in the film capital began with Johnny Weissmuller in the cinema city. Other sport figures such as Jackie Dempsey, Babe Ruth, Ary Vanderay, Charley Paddock and the like had visits to Hollywood for picture purposes, but there was no such concentrated rush as has been going on since Weissmuller established from swimming pool to prop tree tops.

WEISSMULLER was quickly followed by Clarence (Buster) Crabbe and Helene Madison, also champion swimmers. Eleanor Holm is still another aquatic star who gravitated to studioland, as the screen mag scribblers call it.

Then came Jack Dempsey, again, with Primo Carnera and Max Baer, the No. 1 and No. 2 men of the heavyweight boxing business, to make a picture about prize fighters.

And now the situation may become serious for Maxie and Primo may like it in Hollywood. Reports are that they ought to since the femme fans are said to be switching their sighs from the effete, suave type to the bruising he-men, personified by Baer and Carnera.

BAER, say some film observers, may revolutionize the movie hero business. He is already extremely popular with the line the ringsides and their sisters, who patronize the talkies, may go for Maxie's brawny good looks just as wholeheartedly.

One shudders at the prospect of Baer becoming a famed film star. Not that Max can't act—they say he does surprisingly well for one so unschooled in acting as Baer was when he arrived in the studio—but chill comes when one considers the possibility of Max, the film hero, deciding that he cannot afford to risk his valuable good looks anymore being Max the fighting man, but that every Baer might "bot right Carnera, after all, and that sport would lose its biggest heavyweight attraction. The movies have hardly happen since a victory over Primo would make Max a greater movie hero than ever.

SENATORS AND N. Y. GIANTS FOR SERIES

Both Teams Practically Cinched Top Positions Last Week

SERIES OPEN OCT. 3

First Two Games To Be Played In New York

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr. Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York Giants and Washington Senators stood at the threshold of baseball's throne room today, ready to step over at a moment's notice and become the crowns as the 1933 champions of the two major leagues.

Each had disposed of all but one rival in the battle for the pennants and the schedule today made it possible, with just the right combination of victories for themselves and defeats for their opponents, for both to clinch the flags.

Of the two, the Giants were a little closer to a certainty by defeating St. Louis Cardinals 4 to 3 yesterday on a combination of Mel Ott's 32nd home run of the season and Adolfo Luque's fine relief pitching they eliminated Chicago Cubs, recently considered as their most dangerous rivals. The score on decisions were needed to drop Pittsburgh Pirates out of the race and the Buccaneers were scheduled for a doubleheader with Boston today, while the Giants played their second game at St. Louis.

Washington, a 9 to 1 victory today and an even break for the Pirates, would be enough to land the Senators in the nine games it would have left, and if the Giants should lose their last 10 and still the clubs would finish with this standing:

	W.	L.	P.C.
New York	90	63	.588
Pittsburgh	89	64	.582
Senators In

The Senators, 9 1-2 games ahead of New York Yankees and with 10 games to go against the Bronx rivals, needed three decisions to clinch the American League pennant. And in terms of the schedule programme today with Washington playing Boston, Athletics Browns and the Yanks entertaining Chicago White Sox is a dream leader.

The Senators helped their cause along yesterday by coming from behind in the ninth inning to score two runs on Buddy Myer's single with the bases full and then go on and defeat Detroit 4-3. The Yankees lost on the Athletics' margin a trifle without doing any serious damage to the Senators' pennant prospects as they took two games from Cleveleand Indians 3-2 and 6-5.

Russ Van Atta and Lefty Gomez hurled brilliant ball for Yanks, the latter turning in a three-hit, 13-strikeout masterpiece in the second game and Babe Ruth whacked a home run in the contest to bring his season's title to 20.

Chicago Cubs also won a doubleheader, beating Boston Bray 8 to 5 count in each contest but the one Giant victory left them too far behind in the pennant race to have any chance. Pittsburgh Pirates have left.

Cincinnati Reds threatened to climb out of the National League cellar as they took two games from the Boston Braves, 5-3 and 6-0, to finish only a point behind the idle Phillies.

CURRENT SPORT

King baseball made its final bow in Belleville on Saturday when the local Crystalac juniors dropped their second straight game to the Toronto St. Cyprians by the score of 6 to 3. The game was without parallel, the best junior game that has been played around these parts in quite some time. One unhealthy two timely hits would have turned defeat into victory. The winners hit the ball in the pinches and naturally won a ball game.

We congratulate the Brockhamites of Toronto juniors on their well played feat, that the locals were in no way disgraced in defeat. If some of these Toronto players are still here—well then Dempsey found his honest man. It was quite apparent from the stands, that many of the Queen City players were boards, that would have qualified them to join the House of David nine.

The lad George Blazetich hurled one sweet ball game but don't run away with the idea, that Hammett was not around. The local hurler pitched about his best game of the season. Failure to hit in the pinches eliminated the locals from the game which was played in one hour and forty minutes deserved better patronage. We have seen many less ironclads and also senior games that were not of quite as good calibre.

It must be remembered, that the Crystalacs were organized but a few short 13 months ago. They have done wonderfully well while the efforts of Manager Art Young and his association are to be congratulated. "Better luck next year boys." The kids were in no way disgraced in defeat either.

Over across the bay after leaving the Hamburg Intermediates all season, the Victoria A.C. nine bowed to the Redeerville team in the third game of the play-off on Saturday, and the "blue shirts" won a decisive 13 to 2 victory. Naturally the fans from Prince Edward Mountain view were slightly chagrined as their proteges had led the league parade for the entire season and then were deprived of the league championship in the single game. On the other hand, the Hooler-manned crew played better ballstuff in the play-offs and well deserved the honors they now enjoy.

When Frankie Hart reeled over on top of Bert Rankin to cop the final fall of the main wrestling bout at the Rivrank Karnival last Saturday night, the fall was climaxed about the wildest bout ever seen in a local ring. Bert and Frank went at it hammer and tongs and never once did they let up. The service of a physician was needed to attend Hart. The Dutch Adonis claimed that he had been and Rubenstein collided head on to both the referee and Manley Frost. Rankin won a $12.50 side bet the crew locals had previously staked with Referee Tommy McClure holding the stakes. The best man on the mat roughed we like seen in years and should have been better pelished. Rankin and Hart got about 25 minutes of real high class entertainment for the dough.

The open bout brought Al Gebrish, the ex-masked marvel in against Mayes McLain, the Oklahoma cowboy. The latter undoubted had no match for the former American lad, and he won the two straight falls in nothing flat. Had the referee of the ring been more secure McLain had intended showing the face present some real high class work on and off the ropes. He's a past master around the ropes. And although Gebrish let bout with a new trick. Gebrwich was behind Mayes and Sandy Mayes well tied up with a hammer lock. The ex-football star reached over and grabbed Mayes and by suddenly lifting both feet he hit the ropes with all his might and caused Gebrish to the floor, where Mayes pinned him to the mat before the majority, including Al knew what it was all about. Thank Tommy called it a reverse, body slam, or surplus'.

Joe Daley's Kingston Ponies hitting on both ends, are up to form these days. The Ponies upset the dope bucket on Saturday by downing the Riverdale Grads of Toronto. Now these Grads have twice defeated the locals for the junior championship of the O.B.A.A. Last season they were clubbed to the hands of the Ponies did not have high stock in any great degree. The return game is being played Wednesday night and the Beaverton intermediates play their return game at Picton.

PONIES GAIN 6-2 DECISION

Defeat Riverdale Grads. In Semi - Finals O.B.A. Playdowns

Toronto, Sept. 18—Aided by a wretched fielding display by Riverdale Grads enabled Kingston Ponies to whip them 6 to 2 in first of the home-and-home games in the second round of the O.B.A.A. semi-finals at Maple Leaf Stadium Saturday afternoon.

Grads made six errors and three of them came in the fourth frame when the visitors scored four unearned runs. Derbyshire, Marcer and Brennan were the ones to make the misplays. A walk to Jamieson to open the third followed by a wild pitch, fanield out and McGuaid's infield hit gave the Ponies their first run. Smith's single, J. Arnold's sacrifice and Joyce's single accounted for the run in the sixth. Overbeak and Kirby divided the pitching for the Grads, the former being wound up in the seventh to make room for a pinch hitter. The pair allowed seven hits, with three each going to McGuaid and myself.

Jamieson hurled good ball and kept the seven hits made off him well scattered. Three of the seven hits went to Derbyshire. Stuart made the only extra-base hit of the game when he greeted Jamieson with a triple in the second. Overbeak and Kirby divided the pitching for the Grads, the former being wound up in the seventh to make room for a pinch hitter. Despite the misplay by both teams there was some fine fielding done with the honors going to Bernhardt, Andrews and Quinn. The latter handled ten chances at second without a miscue.

3 POWER FRONT ON DISARMAMENT

France, United States and Great Britain In Pact

(By Milvin K. Whiteleather)

Paris, Sept. 18 (AP)—A three-power front on disarmament was the hope of French leaders today as British and United States representatives jotted them in conversations preliminary to the reopening of the arms conference in Geneva next Monday.

French newspapers and legislators have pointed to Nazi demonstrations at the border and what they call the possibility of the early completion of a German airplane making impressive a firm stand against any demand for further armament.

From the French point of view the current talks will have three objects:

To compare notes on charges that Germany is re-arming, to discuss a course should Germany refuse to accept a control plan which French opinion considers perrequisite to the acceptance of any disarmament treaty, and to get backing for a French proposal for international arms control before armements are reduced.

ALEX MORRISON says:

Every player should check up on his posture.

Every so often he'll find that he has fallen into the habit of bending over too much toward the ball. This direct forward bending of the body next, is allowing the head to turn, is the worst fault a player can have. It actually prevents smoothness or power in the movements of any part of the body.

Standing almost fully erect will afford an immediate relief from tension and allow the entire body, arms and hands, to move with ease.

Don't be afraid of not getting down to the ball. Just stand up straight and the natural tendencies will enable your club to swing under the ball.

Who's Who In Washington — — — — — Some Successful Senators

Buddy Myer

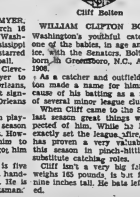
CHARLES SOUDER MYER, born in Ellisville, Miss., March 16 1905, found his way into a Washington uniform via Mississippi State university, where he starred in both baseball and basketball.

In the spring of 1925 the Cleveland Americans invited Myer to train with them in New Orleans, La. He went there but was not signed, instead with the New Orleans Southern league club.

The young second baseman played so well that the same season saw him sold to the Senators. However, Washington traded him to Boston in 1927. Washington got him back in 1930.

Myer weighs 165 pounds, is five feet 10 inches tall and fight handed but throws with his left. He is an aggressive, dangerous batsman.

Cliff Bolton



WILLIAM CLIFTON BOLTON, Washington's youthful catcher, is one of the babies, in age and service, with the Senators. Bolton was born in Greenfield, O., April 10, 1906.

As a catcher and outfielder Bolton made a name for himself before he left high school to become a member of several minor league clubs.

When Cliff came to the Senators last season great things were expected of him. While he has not exactly set the league afire, Bolton has proven a very valuable man this season as pinch-hitting and substitute catching help.

Cliff isn't a very big fellow—he weighs 165 pounds, is five feet nine inches tall. He bats left handed.

DEPENDABLE JOE — By Jack Sords

Joseph Kuhel

JOSEPH KUHEL, Senator first baseman, starred right under the noses of the Cleveland Indians but that club couldn't use him. He was born in the Forest City on June 23, 1908, and played on Cleveland sandlots.

Breaking into pro ball Joe played for the Springfield, Ill., Three-I league, Lincoln, Neb., Western and Kansas City American association clubs before being purchased by the Solons in 1930 for a high price.

Kuhel has been a tower of strength for Washington this year, batting well up in the .300's, stealing bases and playing a bang-up game at first.

The young first sacker is a six footer, weighs 180 pounds; bats and throws left handed.

Bob Burke

ROBERT BURKE, the only Washington pitcher who can boast of having hurled a major league no-hit, no-run game was born in Joliet, Ill., Jan. 23, 1907.

Breaking it with Little Rock, Ark., in the Western league at the age of 19, it wasn't long before the Senators called him to Washington.

As an American leaguer he has proven something of a problem.

Quite erratic, Burke, when right, makes the fans rub their eyes to be sure that he isn't really Lefty Grove. And then, again, he gets batted completely out of the park.

The tall southpaw—he is six feet two inches and weighs 185 pounds —also bats left handed.

Smile Tones Up Facial Muscles

So, Beauty Questers, Chase Away All The Dour Thoughts

(By Helen Follett)

No woman can afford to indulge in unpleasant emotions. The human face is ever in the making. What goes on inside the head comes out on the skin.

Smiling not only makes the face sweet to behold, but it tones muscles, keeps facial contour youthful and well padded. The smiler expression, the hang-dog look, the stern chin pose that makes you think of a bear trap, all tend to etch in ugly lines to weaken tissues, make for everything that isn't what any woman wants.

Worse yet! Unpleasant emotions act upon the central nervous system, impair the digestive works, interfere with restful sleep. Be a smiling girl, and you will be radiant.

Bites are small bolts. Germs slip into the pore in which a winker rests start up in business, soon there is inflammation.

Like boils, sties are slow workers. To be finished quickly with the unsightly blemish, apply pads of gauze that have been dipped in a fairly hot solution of boric acid—two teaspoons of powdered boric acid to a cup of water.

Have pads plenty large. When the pus see is ripe, it will break of its own accord. 'Tisn't safe to lance sties. Only a medical man should do that.

To temper with sunshine is the height of folly and often leads to scars. Medical men declare that while the majority of moles are harmless, now and then one becomes troublesome. The specialist will remove such unsightly blemishes learns to spot those that look suspicious.

Warts often pack up and depart if given a touch of castor oil every day for a few weeks. Liver spots can be banished if caught early enough and saved with a strong bleaching solution.

Your Share of Teacher's Job

(By Constance Cameron)

At this time of the year it isn't difficult to discover mothers who are apparently rejoicing that another institution has been born that will shortly take over the responsibility of Johnnie or Mary. They seems in the attitudes of many mothers to be an extinction of responsibility shifting a responsibility rather than preparing to share it with the school and teacher.

Mrs. Margaretta Willis Reeve in an address given a few years ago reckoned that only one-twentieth of a child's time between the first grade and his graduation from high school, is spent in the classroom. The other nineteen-twentieths are spent either in the home or in the recreation outside the home. Now think about these figures, can we go on hoping to enrich, to develop wisely, through the aid of his teacher, no matter how competent that teacher may be, when that teacher only has him one-twentieth of his living hours, and how can we help him as an individual but as one of a large group?

It seems to me that mothers should be deciding right now just what assistance they can give and secure with the school, rather than regarding it as a haven where the children are dumped, giving mother a few extra hours of irresponsible leisure.

Co-Operate With Teacher

Surely this is a matter to be earnest by, first: Giving the child a happy, constructive attitude toward both the school and his teacher. Don't say in the child's presence that you know the hates to see vacation end, that he loathes going back to school. Don't admit that he is now classified a "crab". He'll find it out soon enough, if she happens to be. And quite possibly with a little co-operation from mothers she wouldn't be, give the teacher a fair break.

Again, the home can help the child by observing a bedtime schedule, a rising schedule that gives the child ample time to eat a proper breakfast, establish regular toilet habits, and get to school on time.

Don't expect special favors for your child. He is one of many. There are rules and he must observe them.

Prepare a place at home where the child can do his home work with the utmost quiet and efficiency.

WEASEL DISPATCHED BY HOUSEWIFE

Hearing a commotion in the chicken coop, Mrs. P. Caverley of Bancroft, decided to investigate. Reaching the scene in short order she was greatly surprised to find a weasel endeavouring to take the life of one of her chicks. Grasping the intruder by a firm grip in her hand which had a death grip on the chick she managed to prolong the life of the feathered specie and in rmarr fashion ended the life of the night intruder.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S. HEARS MISS LAMONT

The September meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrews Presbyterian Church met on Friday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. In the absence of the President, Mrs. J. A. Seymour, Mrs. George Reid, was in the chair and expressed the sympathy of the meeting for Mrs. Seymour in the death of her mother in Australia, news of which she had just received.

Mrs. Reid introduced the speaker of the day, Miss F. B. Lamont, field secretary.

Miss Lamont spoke from her experiences on the last two years in the Western Provinces, using as a basis for her message the text: "Speak to the Children of Israel that they go forward," making it an appeal for the Church today to go forward. She stressed the courage and faith of the western people and drew attention to the marvelous work done there in spite of severe handicaps. She mentioned particularly the church, in Saskatoon of Mr. Brown, an ex-moderator, where as yet they had no church building but not being just congregationally-minded their budget giving had been kept up and there was activity in every line of the church's work. She spoke of the importance of contributions to our work other than financial and urged the necessity, of an increased interest and co-operation in our women's Missionary Society.

The thanks of the meeting to Miss Lamont, were moved by Mrs. Alex. Moore and Mrs. Fenwick.

Mrs. Bell was the soloist for the afternoon. Mrs. Haggerty's group was in charge of refreshments after the meeting and served tea at its close.

FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

Thrilling Western and English Farce on Double Bill at Capitol

An entertaining program that starts with the thrills of a rollicking Western picture with the uproariously comedy of an English farce opened at the Capitol Theatre in the double feature presentation on Saturday.

An exciting action picture with scenes of a setting of natural woodland grandeur was "McKenna of the Mounted," starring the popular Buck Jones and with an admirable cast including Niles Welch, a star of silent days, and Lola Lane the rogue of the film. Based on the exploits of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the most fascinating of law enforcers in the world, the film is very good.

McKenna of the Mounted, one of the most courageous of that force was discovered in various robberies, but his guilt was disregarded instantly. This did not daunt his schemes seemingly, and he continued in disguise gathering the loot. He finally taken in custody by his own brother-officers, declared for innocence league, McKenna had really been working under cover and after a desperate escape from his brother, McKenna "shot it out" with the desperado in the Canadian forest. He returned to the post to be promoted and married the girl of the film he loves, the winsome Greta Granstedt.

Keeping the tempo of the evening's entertainment "Let Me Explain, Dear" with Edmund Lowe and Constance Cummings, was a welcome number and more and more hilarious with every reel. The story tells of the husband with the wandering eye, Wilson Gray (Edmund Lowe) and Claude Hulbert, unmistakably a brother of the Hulbert family, and Jane Carr as the blonde over whom a tempest arises.

Gene Gordon makes the beautiful blonde into a River Taxi and trouble began immediately. The taxi runs amok. Gene saves the girl from the river and then starts the thing leading to another decides to see her that evening. When he returns after his evening's date finds her necklace in his pocket, an angry wife demanding explanations and a way out of the predicament that only resulted in more complications.

And so the film goes on, with desperate measures being taken by Gene to receive compensation, on the taxi smash-up and keep the blonde in ignorance of the fact that his wife now has the marvelous necklace.

That the audience appreciated the absurdity of each situation was shown by the continuous laughter as the plot unfolded. A humorous comedy and news were on the same bill.

Beauty .... By Helen Jameson

Prescription Sho es! Fancy That!

Women chuckled sleel-riveted, rib-crushing corsets. They chopped off their pigtails, considering them excess baggage for which they had no use whatsoever. They de-petticoated themselves, declared for low shoes instead of high ones. They fought and bit and scratched until they got the vote. They took to driving cars and soaring round in airplanes. But they continued to clump along on spired heels and balk to cycling in them.

Medical men and beauty writers, understanding that when the body is thrown out of balance there are distressing results to muscles, bony structure and internal machinery have yodeled protests. The gals cease right back with their old alibi to the effect that stores offer nothing but spired heeled shoes. Which doesn't happen to be the truth.

Shoe manufacturers affirm that it wrings their hearts to see feminine feet tortured, that they realize the evils of "elevated heels" and that little dear hearts won't have anything else.

Is this stalemate to go on forever? Your health-and-beauty reporter sought out an authority, Dr. O. E. Wyneken, Dean of Chicago College of Chiropody and Podia Surgery in the class won't listen to teacher, maybe the members will pay attention to what a medical man has to say.

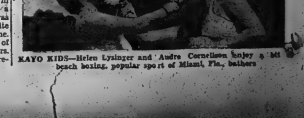
* * * *

"The time will come," said Dr. Wynken, "when the woman who is suffering from foot ills will wear prescription shoes. She'll wear special shoes just as a woman suffering from impaired eyesight wears glasses that are prescribed for her. Nine women among ten have foot ills that are caused by ill-fitting shoes. Of what avail professional treatment if the same outrages are worn?

"Reform is on the way. The shoe manufacturers and the chiropodists of the United States have started a movement with that end in view. Comprehensive surveys are being taken to determine averages in women's feet, and that will be a help.

"Shoe manufacturers are employing consulting chiropodists to help them design shoes in which women can walk comfortably.

* * * *



"Don't let your readers get the idea that they are to be offered ugly-looking shoes. That will not be the case. Scientific, correct, shoes are entirely compatible with beauty and smartness.

"Variations in the way of materials, patterns and ornamente will provide ample opportunity for the exploitation of new styles and style effects.

"It is ridiculous that at one period all women wear long, narrow pointed shoes and at another time short shoes with ones when feet vary in form and outline. All that's finished. Tell them that millions of women will be happier. And they'll have better dispositions."

Stocks And Staples Shuffled About Irregularly Due To Sharp Slump In International Dollar Rates —McIntyre Touches New All-Time High On Buying From New York — Imperial Oil And Wicked Have Play On Toronto Board.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Stocks swayed uncertainly today. After opening firmly, the list eased off under persistent liquidation in utilities and rails. Various industrials also turned reactionary. On the other hand, rallying tendencies persisted in metals and oils.

McIntyre soared 14 points while McIntyre gained more than a point, shares up 1 to Consolidated Oil included 7. Sinclair, Allied Chemical, American Can, Standard Oil of California, Seaboard Oil, Deere, U. S. Smelting, Goodyear and American Smelting U.S. Steel Preferred dropped 4½ while the Common lost 1 point. Other declines of a point or more included American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Western Union and Public Service of New Jersey. Alcohols were narrowly irregular. Transfers approximated 2,600,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Sept. 18.—(CP)—The Standard Mining Market broke out today with a bullish demonstration that brought back old-time animation to the brokers' board rooms. Volume was not quite up to the level of the peaks of the July and February periods, but it was comparative quietness in the penny shares.

Most of the business centred in the Kirkland Lake camp and some of them jumped as much as 4¢, spotting the Board with record high prices, especially in the gold group. Silver and Base Metal shares moved up strongly also.

McIntyre was the leader with a gain of 14 to 94¢. Dome was close behind, selling at $28.75 for a gain of $2 and advances of 25 to $1.00 were recorded for Lake Shore, Teck-Hughes, Hollinger, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves.

Hudson Bay moved up to $11.25 for a gain of 75 cents but Nickel and Mond made practically no headway at any time. Nickel closed at $22.50, advancing 12 cents, and up 20 cents at $36.70. Base Metals Corporation was strong and higher at $2.18 and narrow gains were registered for Bidgood Gordon, Sudbury Basin and Penn Canada.

WALL STREET

(By Victor Enbank, Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Stocks and staples cut crazy quilt patterns today as prices shuffled about irregularly despite the inflationary implications of another sharp slump in international dollar rates.

Diverse currents tossed leading shares about indiscriminately after a brisk upward movement in the first hour which was led by mining and oil issues. Although the pedestrian pace maintained most of its advance, the metal equities shared today's setback. The utilities generally were soft and the rails were subjected to some pressure at one time.

Aside from the firmness of Dome and McIntyre Porcupine shares, Canadian stocks and bonds displayed little enthusiasm. Dominion Government 4's and 5's eased ¼ to ½ of a point, respectively, and the 4½'s were unchanged.

Shares of Homestake Mining spurted some 19 points and U.S. Smelting jumped around 4 but later relinquished part of this advance. American Smelting, Kennecott, Anaconda, Dome and International Nickel were up fractionally to more than a point. American Can and Allied Chemical stepped up 2 or more and Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Continental and Seaboard advanced a point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 18.—(CP)—Compared with New York's early strong advance, the Toronto Stock Exchange got on a rather cheap performance today but it held better in the last hour when the bell board weakened quite sharply. Volume was less than normal, and the closing price level was down a little from that of Saturday.

C.P.R. at 16 was down 1-2. Noranda at $22, off 70 cents. Falconbridge at 14 1-2 down 1-2 and Brazilian at 13 7-8 off 1-8.

Hollinger at 3-8 to 1 34 points were recorded for the Distillery Stocks. Walkers common closed off 1 3-4 at 51. Industrial Alcohol down 2 3-4 at 21 1-2. Dominion Distillery at 20, off 1-2 and Brewers and Distillers off 10 at 42.00. In the Beer Group Brewers at 5 were down. Canada Malting and Canada Bud closed unchanged.

Oil shares maintained a good tone even when the general market weakened.

U. S. DOLLAR AT LOW LEVEL

Canadian Dollar Up To 97¾ Due To Inflation Talk

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP) The United States dollar, in terms of leading European Gold Currencies, today slumped to its lowest level in foreign exchange history.

As measured by the French franc, the United States Monetary unit was valued at approximately 65 cents compared with 67 cents Saturday. Other exchanges, particularly Pound Sterling, were strong. Canadian dollars rose 1-8-16 per cent to 97 3-4 cents. Dealers said the growing belief abroad that currency inflation was imminent in the United States was responsible for the further weakness of the dollar.

The pound sterling at cents, were .17 of a cent above their Saturday's closing rate. Sterling soared to 5-9 cents so in the Dutch guilder cables. Guilders gained 1.70 cents at 61.10 cents. Swiss francs were up .54 of a cent at 29.85 cents and Belgian francs advanced 1-2 cent to 21.50 cents.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY RENEW FIDELITY IN MONSTER PARADE

Kingston Scene of Third Annual Outpouring of Members

An impressive sight yesterday in Kingston on the occasion of the third annual diocesan Holy Name Rally was the procession of thousands of men of Kingston diocese who gathered in the Cathedral parish to show public honour and reverence for the Holy Name of God.

From Belleville over one hundred cars formed a huge cavalcade that left the city shortly after twelve-thirty o'clock, picking up other parties and joined during the fifty mile drive by many cars from parishes en route. The whole procession was under the efficient direction of Provincial Officers of the Motorcycle Patrol.

Arriving in Kingston the parish representatives assembled at the Cricket Field and were arranged in alphabetical order for the monster parade to Queen's Stadium, where the distinguished preacher of the afternoon. Rev. Father Michael Cline of the Holy Name Church, Toronto, was heard.

The procession was led by the Grand Marshall George Sullivan, the order being as follows:—Classes of St. John's and St. Mary's School Regiopolis College Students, Catholic members of the R.C.A., Catholic members of the R.M.C., Parishes of the dioceses in alphabetical order, men of the Cathedral Parish.

Four bands took part in the procession. Delegates representatives of their various parishes. They included, The Belleville Citizens' Band, Belleville Pipers' Band, Gilmour Silver Band, P.W.O.R. Band. Each parish was headed by their pastors Rev. C. E. Baker and Rev. H. J. Madden in Belleville group with the pastor, Rt. Rev. J. J. Nicholson, V.G.; accompanied His Excellency Archbishop Gauthier to the Stadium.

Stadium Filled

Queen's Stadium was filled with robed men of the Holy Name Societies and spectators.

sung by a choir of Kingston singers and the entire assembly joined in the well-known hymns. Reverend of the Holy Name pledge was made by the members.

His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien also addressed the gathering and the inspiring proceedings closed with Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., officiating at a specially erected altar beautifully decorated with flowers.

B. A. Trestrail Returns to Rogers-Majestic

Resumes Former Duties as Director of Sales and Advertising Activities

—Launches Aggressive Campaign.

Toronto, Sept. 18 — After an absence of slightly over two years, B. A. Trestrail has been re-engaged as director of sales and advertising for the Rogers-Majestic Corporation Limited, manufacturers of Rogers and Majestic radios, Mr. E. S. Rogers, president, announced today.

While holding no illusions as to the possibility of going back to old volume, Mr. Trestrail believes that the trend is towards stabilization with gradual increase in prices and this coupled with a great reduction in the number of radio manufacturers in Canada presents an opportunity for the remaining to those companies whose production is carefully regulated and whose merchandising embraces aggressive and original advertising, as well as sales efforts.

"We plan a distinctive and novel newspaper advertising campaign based on Mr. Rogers' platform of 'A New Deal in Radio,' details of which will be announced shortly and which I believe will be a distinctly pleasant surprise to the trade and to the public, not merely from the standpoint of interest but because of the rather sensational values and features to be presented in the new models.

"The history of every depression has shown that the worst entertainment industry suffers from a most violent and rapid deflation followed by a prolonged period of stagnation, leaving but few of the stronger companies in the field ready and able to take advantage of the revival when it occurs.

"Rogers-Majestic is in splendid position to maintain its pre-eminence in the radio field and with two such outstanding lines as the Rogers and the Majestic and with the values offered this year, we are certain to procure our share of the business."

$4.50 to $4.75 with good and choice butchers at $4.25 to $4.50. Selected calves sold up to $7.00. Butcher cows were slow. Good steers range ed from $2.50 to $3.75 with bologna mostly at $1.50.

The calf market opened steady at $4.50 to $7.00 for choice vealers with a few tops at $7.25. Grass calves brought $2.00 to $2.50.

Hogs were unsettled with packers bidding $6.25 f.o.b. for bacon and $6.75 off car. Salesmen were asking for 25 cents more.

Lambs were held at $6.00 with bids at $5.50 to $5.75. Sheep were steady at $3.00 for tops.

Belleville business men are energetic and progressive, Belleville stores are right up to the minute, and Belleville as a shopping centre serves the neighbors in a radius of one hundred miles, for IT PAYS TO SHOP IN BELLEVILLE, and folks have learned to know that and profit by it.

Belleville's name and fame have spread to every country on this terrestrial ball—Belleville cheese is known for its superior quality wherever good eaters get together—Belleville apples go far and make friends everywhere, also Belleville canned goods, and many a weary prospector's day is brightened when he finds a can of Belleville peas, or tomatoes in his pack sack—helps him on his seemingly endless search for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

A Belleville man in Boston, Massachusetts, on business recently, was surprised and pleased to see LaPalm's splendid big moving truck roll by proclaiming to all the world that Belleville was the home city of this truck, at the moment engaged in moving the effects of sons of Uncle Sam to the beautiful banks of the Bay of Quinte—Belleville boys and Belleville business men believe in letting their light shine wherever they are and letting all the folks of other places see that they are proud of the home city.

Mr. LaPalm has made an outstanding success of the motor trucking business and distance is no object to him, his trucks being frequently seen in the Eastern United States, as well as in various parts of Canada.

A LITTLE HEAT IN THE HOUSE WAS WELCOME DURING THE LAST FEW DAYS—It is most unpleasant and uncomfortable being chilly, one cannot settle down in ease to enjoy oneself when the atmosphere in the room is the least bit cold and the temperatures which prevailed during several days this week were an emphatic reminder that winter is on its way. Winter is a pleasant season if one can keep warm, but if the heating system in the house is not working properly and it is necessary to lug the radiator or stand upon the register to keep warm, then it is far from enjoyable.

No doubt we will have some nice warm days yet and it will not be necessary to start the furnace burning continually for a week or so anyway. However, the time will not be so very long before heat will be required and if the furnace needs cleaning and repairing don't put off having it attended to so that you will be sure of comfort when the cold weather really arrives. Murray Black, who has been encased in the plumbing business in Belleville for several years is a first class furnace man, he the system has air, hot water or steam, he can put it in perfect running order or if you desire a new furnace installed he can do the job to your entire satisfaction and guarantee that your house will be kept at the desired temperature at all times. Mr. Black resides at 42 Gordon street — his 'phone number is 1335.

"I HAVE SEEN MANY FINE LAWNS IN BELLEVILLE" . . . This remark was made by a visitor in the city recently and he was quite right, there are many fine lawns in every section of the city and those who keep them looking so trim and nice are deserving of praise. There is great satisfaction in having one's place looking well and the outdoor exercise obtained in doing the necessary work is beneficial. The long dry spell which continued for over a month during the past summer was hard on lawns and many of them became so dry and withered in appearance that they seemed dead. The copious rains however, which came later revived them and it was a welcome sight to see them healthy and green again. Authorities recommend sowing grass seed in September and if you intend to do so you will want to use the best lawn seed obtainable. This you can make sure of if you obtain the seed at Bishop's Seed Store, 173 Front street, Belleville. This firm deals in only the best quality of seeds and if you call at their store they will be glad to give you the valuable information regarding the preparation and care of lawns. It may be that your lawn requires a fertilizer—if so you can obtain what you desire at Bishop's.

"20 YEARS SINCE I WAS ON ISLAND"

Although the matter of fixing the place up into a recreation park has been an object of attention on the part of the city fathers for months, on Friday afternoon, when a number of the city councillors visited Zwick's Island to make a survey of the situation, many of them were frank in stating that it had been years since they had been on it.

"By golly," stated one prominent alderman as he descended from his car to the grass, "it's been twenty years since I've been over here on the Island". They spent nearly two hours looking the place over.

BANISHMENT IS PROTESTED

Outspoken Criticism of Punishment of African Chief

Johannesburg, South Africa, Sept. 15 (CP)—Suspension of Chief Tshekedi from the chieftainship of the Bamangwato tribe in Bechuanaland and his banishment to the Tati district outside the tribal reserve has aroused a storm of comment throughout South Africa.

The order was passed yesterday by Viscount R. G. R. Evans, British commissioner for Bechuanaland and Protectorate following the inquiry by a special commission into the flogging of Phineas MacIntosh, a white resident, who was tried by a native court. MacIntosh, who was charged by Tshekedi with "living like a native with a native woman" was ordered to live outside the native districts.

RAILWAY STRIKE TALK VERY STRONG

Montreal, Sept. 15—Possibility of a strike by members of the railway unions cades is very strong," said W. J. Babe, of St. Thomas, Ont., vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, when he arrived here today to arrange with other union leaders the tabulation of the strike ballot.

RESORT IS THREATENED

Hamilton, Sept. 15 (CP)—Destruction of a large number of summer residence at Hamilton Beach was threatened today by fire which broke out in the home of C. W. Bell, K.C., M.P., a strong northeast gale of Lake Ontario fanned the flames.

BEST DOG ON CONTIN ENT RECOVERS FROM DEATH'S BRINK

Almost priceless, though valued at from $10,000 to $15,000, Warland Protector of Shelterrock, one of the finest English Airedales in the world, is recovering at Oakville, Ont., from an illness which threatened his life. Veterinarians, summoned by the millionaire owner, F. M. Stewart, of Montclair, N.J., considered at a critical stage of the illness giving the dog a blood transfusion, a step which, it is said, would have been unprecedented in veterinarian annals. On the left is shown the owner, and on the right is Warland Protector of Shelterrock, with Miss Mildred Ward of Oakville, one of those who have been ministering to the care of the thoroughbred which last year at the Westminster dog show, New York, competing against 2,300 dogs, won the title of best in show, tantamount to best dog on the continent. When the dog took ill during the dog show at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, the owner ordered his agent to proceed from New Jersey by aeroplane to the bedside".

DOCTORS WIN GRIM BATTLE TO SAVE AIREDALE'S LIFE

Fifteen Thousand Dollar Dog, Regarded as Best on Continent, Recovers and Now Is Pointed to Completion of Championship —Owner Sends Agent to "Bedside"

By T. J. WHEELER
Copyrighted by Central Press Canadian

Toronto, Sept. 15—Virtually the best dog on the continent, the life of Warland Protector of Shelterrock, English airedale valuable valued at between $10,000 and $15,000, although almost priceless, has been saved after a bitter battle with death.

At one time the veterinarians summoned by the wealthy owner, F. M. Stewart of Montclair, N.J., had considered giving the dog a blood transfusion, something never before done, it is said, in the case of dogs.

Before taking ill he had won the championship of his own class at the Canadian National Exhibition, in which he had been entered from the Oakville kennels of Ted Ward. Ill, he was withdrawn from the "best dog in the show" competition and Dr. J. A. Campbell, famonto veterinarian, was summoned. He in turn called in Dr. Harold Bond.

The doctors labored night and day to rescue their charge from death's brink. At first he seemed doomed and the owner dispatched his agent, Harry Livesay, by aeroplane to the dog's "bedside".

Livesay gives credit to the veterinarians for finally winning the battle with death, although he told Central Press Canadian "it looked like a miracle. He is coming along fine now and we hope to show him at Hamilton to complete his Canadian championship."

Warland Protector, an English dog now a little over two years old was brought to his continent after he had his show coat. Governor Dazzle of Shelterrock, had swept dogdom aroun, in water. Their successes continued here and last year Warland Protector defeated 2,300 other dogs in the New York blue ribbon show to win "best of show," tantamount to being the "best dog on the continent."

HORMONES USED TO CURE INSANE FOLK

Chicago, Sept. 15.—(CP)—Science's newest weapon against disease, the hormones of the endocrine glands, are helping to win its fight to reduce incurable insanity, it was indicated today in a report in the Illinois Medical Journal by Dr. James H. Hutton of Chicago.

Nearly 27 percent of 72 insane patients who received glandular treatment in addition to psychiatric routine were sent home.

THEATRE STAGE IS EXTENDED

Oklahoma Cowboys who are appearing in Belleville this week would find the stage of the Belle Theatre far too small for their rope acts. "Doc" world's champion female rope trick artist, especially would find considerable difficulty in rehearsing her act. Bo Mr. George Hamilton manager, received word of a local contractor and is having a whole new stage built in the theatre for the presentation.

POLICE COURT

Activities in and about the local police departments have been rather dull of late, no serious troubles having been reported on the police blotter for the past 48 hours.

Lawrence Stewart, 5 Pine Street complained his bicycle was taken from the rear of the Collegiate yesterday.

A slight accident happened at the corner of Cannifton Road and College Street yesterday afternoon when an automobile driven by Miss Flossie Lawrence collided with a bicycle ridden by two boys, one riding on the cross bar. Miss Lawrence was passing a group of children at the time and it is said that the rear fender secured directly into her path. The police investigated and no blame was attached to the driver of the car. The rear wheel of the cycle was broken.

FASCIST TIDE CAUSES FEAR

Workers' League Head Says No Room For "Blue Shirts"

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 16.—(CP)—Warning against the "rising tide of Fascism" as exemplified by the Blue Shirts of Canada, was sounded by J. C. Wilson of Winnipeg, National Secretary of the Workers' League at an open meeting of returned soldiers here last night.

"I understand the slogan of the Blue Shirts is 'Join us and get a job'," he said, "but does one amount to a hill of beans," Mr. Wilson said. "In Winnipeg we formed the Civil Contemptibles and had the same slogan. The only job offered us was police duty during trouble, a job now filled by 62 members of the Canadian Legion.

"There is no job for them except as storm troops for a Fascist Government that, by their rule, the same role as Fascists in Vancouver, strong-arm squad of Winnipeg and steel helmets of Montreal."

FUGITIVE'S HAIR DYED

Los Angeles, Sept. 12 (CP) — After a three-year search, Joseph (Red) O'Riordan, who, police said, is a former Detroit gangster wanted in connection with a kidnapping plot, was arrested here today and held for Detroit police.

He was roused from sleep and surrendered at the door without any sad. His once red-hair was dyed black.

$ COAL CODE READY?

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP) — Hugh S. Johnson, the United States recovery administrator, said today he "unquestionably" had a bituminous coal code would be ready for President Roosevelt's signature tonight.

CHAPTER 28

Barrett arose with a jerk and took the others two at a time. The nurse was waiting for him in the upper hall. She whispered, "Please you can help Mrs. Colvin. We're worried about her. They were so devoted—"

He opened Elinor's door without waiting for her more, stepped into the room and closed the door after himself. A small night lamp was burning by the bed Elinor lay there sky-eyed and too quiet. He crossed the room swiftly to lean over her.

"Child—!" he whispered.

"I haven't anymore, now," she said clearly.

"You have me as long as you want me. So long as there is anything I can do for you," he assured her.

He sat down on the edge of the bed and took one of her small hands between his. It was cold, forbidding. He held it between his, and bowed shoulder and noticed that it was as cold as her hand. She looked questionately at him.

"You're cold, Elinor."

He rubbed her hands, suddenly raised her and held her in his arms. For a moment she was very still. Then she relaxed and he heard the first deep sob that shook her.

"Darling!" he whispered. "Darling!"

A half hour later Miss Hemmingway entered the room after Barrett's "Come in" answered her knock. He was sitting in a deep chair before the fire he had started. Elinor, wrapped in blankets, was in his arms. She had been crying. Miss Hemmingway saw with relief. That reaction was normal and reassuring. The girl had seemed too unnaturally composed.

"I brought another sleeping powder for Mrs. Colvin—"

"Good!" said Barrett. Elinor sat up, drank it and then lay back. Miss Hemmingway saw the man's arms tighten as she closed the door.

"Am I tiring you?" Elinor asked.

"Dearest, you could not tire me this way."

He stroked her hair with a hand that had grown unsteady, been his head until his cheek touched her cheek that was hot from tears.

"Elinor—"

"Yes?"

"I want to ask you to give me another trial. Let me show you that I'm not so ungentle as you think. I won't bother you in any way, I promise. Do you believe me?"

"Yes—"

"What I want most from life now is to take care of you. Nothing else matters to me—"

Her hand moved and for a second he felt that it pressed his hand faintly. He laughed her soft body with his lips, stared blindly at the leaping fire.

"I want a chance to make you over without feeling ashamed—"

"I'm sorry I said that, Barrett. I know it's my fault that you can't care steadily—"

"But you'll find I can!" he promised. Why, he asked himself, had he considered the impossible from her? There were no women who did not, in some way, let men down. Marcia had and so had her fiery sullen mother. Elinor's mother had been brutally frank in her revelations of the failings of her sex. Miss Ella had felt that no form of spying was beneath her. They were obviously all alike, yet occasionally a man found one woman who compelled his love and then a compromise. He had found Elinor. Doubtless Bob Tiffany had held her as he did now but he had himself he must not think of that.

He moved slightly so that he could look down at her face, pressed against his shoulder. She was so white, so pitiably white. "If I could take away this thought," said he, "and know you kissed no one else!"

She whispered softly, "You must be tired—"

"No!"

"You're very good to me," she said in a drugged tone that is the result of pain and sedatives.

"I told you," he told her.

The small mantel clock struck two sharp notes. Elinor slept and then woke with a start. Barrett was there. He soothed her, felt her relax, and trembled, knowing—that his touch could quicken her. As fear he put her back and without waking her. The flickering fire threw light. He settled in a small chair that stood near. The clock struck three. Elinor slept.

It seemed to him, waiting there for any need that she could have of him, that he had never been so close to a human soul as he was to her and without the faintest, physical touch. Perhaps, he reasoned, it was because for the first time he was thinking only of another.

When she woke he was sleeping and the first dim morning sunlight was pricking in the room. As she looked at him Barrett opened his eyes and smiled. She smiled mutely for a short space and then remembered.

He rose from the chair with a stiffened jerk and, bent down and kissed her, bent down at her.

"Elinor," he said, "I want you to know that everything I have is to help you."

His thought of those mornings after his father's death when he waking, wondering if he could help him and then remembered with aching suddenness.

Her eyes widened. He dropped to the edge of the bed and drew her into his arms.

"We'll get through this, dearest," he promised. She was clinging to him. He felt a sweep of dizziness, a surge of blood that made his ears ring.

"You sai here—all night?" she asked in a whisper. She closed his eyes. Her hand moving on his arm!

"Where else would I be?" he answered as steadily as he could, so long as I thought you might need anything I could give you?" He held her away a moment, looking down on her. "You know I love you," he added, "but not how much—"

Again he held her close and knew that she was crying.

"Remember what I said. It need not bother you, he heard himself assure her, his voice a little roughened.

"I love you," she said hesitatingly. "But I loved you before and it did nothing—but hurt me."

"I'll make you very certain that it won't hurt you from now on," he promised. "I'll give you all the time you want for the love you have now I want you to get up, dress and get out of the house into the sunshine with me. Will you, dear?"

"Yes," she answered. She had drawn away from him. "I do love you," she said, "but give me time. I'm afraid! I'm afraid of love!"

Then she kissed him.

Refreshed by a cold tub Barrett dressed. He felt a contentment he had not known for weeks. Of course he was deeply sympathetic with Elinor in her suffering but he had the knowledge that throughout the ordeal he had kept his head. His world give her time and with time perhaps as much trust would come between them as there could be between a man and woman.

He breakfasted, wandered out of the house and a short half hour later she joined him. She looked worn and aged. He wrapped her in rugs and tucked her into a deck chair on the terrace, her back toward the house, facing the river.

Her hand sought his and rested there.

"Mother is coming by plane," he heard her say. Barrett's brows drew close. For some reason beyond his dislike for her he dreaded Lida Stafford's coming.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION FOR BRIDE-TO-BE

On Tuesday evening last a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Dontator to present their daughter, Helen, with a shower of lovely presents before her marriage to Mr. Percy Ray, of Zion.

The following address was read by Miss Lily Graig;

Dear Helen,—

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here to spend a social evening with you before your happy departure. You, Helen, have lived among us all your life. Your willingness to help in our community and your sunny smile will undoubtedly be missed. We are glad that you are not going far away, but will be leaving a helping hand to others as you have done for us.

When you take up your new home Helen, we sincerely hope that your new acquaintances will learn to love and appreciate you for your many good qualities and your jovial nature.

As a small token of our good wishes, we ask you to accept these gifts and we trust that God may bless and prosper you abundantly, and that the sun of happiness may shine upon you always.

Signed on behalf of the community.

Mrs. Huff
Mrs. Barlow
Mrs. McDonnell
Mrs. Dontator
Mrs. Hagerman
Mrs. Whiteman.

The following verses were composed and read by Miss Roberta Melbourn:

Proclamation

We read it in the paper
A couple weeks ago,
That the Dontator had decided
To let their daughter go.

We didn't ask the reason
But we thought that Percy Ray
Could really love a prize like one of it
And had had something to say.

And so we let the matter drop
Until from out the sky
The day we heard the final
Palai day was drawing nigh.

Then we hurried preparations
Searched for every high and low,
Asked the neighbors all around us
If they'd really like to go.

Look around you'll see their answer
Here a score, there a score,
And Percy all the happiness
You could find in dreams come true.

In these gifts that we are offering
You in after years will find Something always in the remembered
Of your neighbors of the Second Line.

SIDNEY B. Y. P. U.

The meeting was held in the church and Pres. Hall Irvin in charge. Hymn 191 was sung after which Dorothy Reid gave a reading. The members then practised a B.Y.P.U. song. Marjorie Bateman read the roll call with eighteen present. The Lord's Prayer was repeated by the members. The Scripture lesson was in from IT chapter, 1-18 verses, was read by Luella Wannamaker. Two verses of hymn 255 was sung. Bert Reid read a reading. Ralph Smith took up the collection. Two verses of hymn 336 was sung. Mr. McNabb gave a talk. Hymn 354 was sung and Mr. McNabb led in the closing prayer. A few words of prayer. The leader and members are asked for a bit of business after the meeting.

The farmers are busy cutting corn which received a heavy frosting from the cold wave which passed over the district last Thursday night. Buckwheat and garden crops also suffered from the frost.

A number from here attended the Kiwanis Karnival in Bellevile last week.

Miss Vera Copeland spent Thursday night with Mr. W. Copeland.

Miss Mary Grey is visiting relatives at Shannonville.

WINS PRIZES FOR BEST CAKE AT W. I. MEETING

Roslin—The Roslin Women's Institute held their September meeting at the home of Mrs. W. Gilles-pie on Thursday, September 14th. It was Visitors' Day and in the absence of the President, Mrs. H. Chisholm, the first Vice-President, Mrs. R. Copeland, took charge of the meeting, which was opened as usual by singing the opening ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the Secretary. The report of the flower committee was given by Mrs. W. White and collection taken for same. Plans were made for a pot luck supper.

Mrs. W. White, leader for the month, conducted the remainder of the meeting. All joined in community singing. This was followed by a very interesting and helpful address by Miss Beatrice Jones of Belleville.

A prize for the best cake entered in the "cake-baking contest" was won by Miss Alice Wilson.

The meeting was brought to a close by singing the national anthem. Later a dainty lunch was served and the cakes entered in the contest were eaten.

A number of men are engaged at work on the road between Mr. J. Goodfellow's store and the bridge across the Moira River at Chisholm's Mills. The road is being raised to a level with the bridge and it is hoped in this way to overcome the flooding of the road at that point which takes place every spring when the water is high.

MAY TRANSFER MAN TO KINGSTON FOR TRIAL

Man Belleville Be One Escaped from Hospital

Vancouver, Sept. 18 (CP)—A man arrested under the name of "James Sullivan" will be tried on a charge of burglary in Burnaby, Vancouver suburb, police state.

Kingston, Ont., advices said "Sullivan" had been identified as David Bush, 20, who escaped July 16 from the Ontario Hospital there, when he had been taken from Portsmouth Penitentiary.

On the outcome of his trial in Burnaby will depend whether or not he will be returned to Kingston to face a charge of breaking custody.

SUGGESTION DECLINED

5000 DANGEROUS DRIVERS REMOVED

Toronto, Sept. 18 (CP)—During the three years the "Financial Responsibility Law" for motorist has been in force, more than 5,000 danger ous or irresponsible drivers have been removed from the highways and less than three-quarters of one per cent. or accidents have been followed by unsatisfied judgments, stated J. P. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

Ottawa, Sept. 18 (CP)—Three important appointments were announced today by Premier R. B. Bennett. E. R. Cameron, K.C., of Winnipeg, has been named Under-secretary of State and Deputy Registrar General of Canada, Jos. Oscar Patenaude of Ottawa, has been named King's Printer and Ap poleon Garceau, K.C., of Drummondville, is appointed member of the Board of Railway Commissioners.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

Again the trumpet sounded and the four knights rode slowly back to the opposite ends of the field where the principals waited the final signal to engage. Blake released his arm from the leather loop that held his shield and flung it from him to the ground. "Hast gone mad, man?" exclaimed Sir Richard. Suddenly came the signal and Sir Malud spurred forward. "Let her go!" cried Jimmy.

There was a confident smile on the lips of Sir Malud as he galloped to meet his foe. He rode with his sword half raised. Blake's was on guard, a position unknown to the Knights of Nimmy, who always guarded with their bucklers. The horsemen were about to meet, when Sir Malud rose in his stirrups and launched a terrific cut at Blake's head. It was then that those in the stand first realized that Blake were no buckler.

"He hath lost his buckler," came the cries from all parts of the stand. From the prince's loge came a woman's scream, but Blake did not know it for the applause. He reined his horse suddenly toward Malud, overbalancing that knight and deflecting the sword blow. Quick as a flash, Blake shot to the right rad rear, his point opening the mail on Malud's left shoulder. A loud shout of approval burst from the stand.

The stand was in an uproar as the two knights on the field engaged once more. Now the smile was gone from Malud's lips and there was rage in his eyes as he spurred toward his adversary. Again they clashed and Blake's blade leaped quickly beneath Sir Malud's buckler and entered his side, inflicting a slight wound. Before Malud could gather his reins, Blake had struck him again, this time a heavy blow upon the helm.

Pulling Contest

The pulling contest was the great event of the afternoon and three teams were entered for the contest and each pair a sixty hundred lb. driver. All six horses were willing and anxious to haul and the team were not long in being called for admiring comment from the seven hundred or more onlookers. At the finish pull 11 men had been added to the load of the stone boat which carried besides the load of stone a dozen heads of council. The money was finally divided between Herman Hudgins of Lazie, who was present last year, and Michael Kennedy of Lonsdale, Mr. Hudgins' horses and Mr. Kennedy's boys were willing to pull themselves to pieces for their side hauled. Thatcher McConnell of Forest Mills, was eliminated but not until his team had made a most creditable showing. On all sides complimentary remarks were heard as to the fine team work his lighter horses had performed and the fine handling they received from their driver.

$750,000 ESTIMATED LOSS IN HALIFAX FIRE

Three Quarters Million Estimated Loss at Halifax Harbor Pier Through Fire

Three Firemen Injured As Brigade Fights Stubborn Blaze

UNKNOWN ORIGIN

Explosions Feared As Fire Eats Way Through Loaded Building

Halifax, Sept. 19 (CP)—Three firemen were injured, one critically, and damaged nearer the $1,000,000 mark today as flames burst thru the roof of Halifax Harbor Commission's Pier No. 2 and enveloped the entire upper level of the 1,200 foot structure.

Accurate estimate of damage was made impossible by the impenetrable clouds of smoke, but commission officials said it would total at least $750,000.

Three firemen were rushed to hospital one in critical condition from injuries suffered in an 18-foot tumble from a loading chute.

Fireman Critically Injured

One fireman, Alex. Hoare, was in critical condition with head injuries, suffered in a fall from the loading chute. But the other two, weakened by their all-night struggle with the flames, were suffering only from the effects of heavy yellow smoke, tainted by the fumes from smouldering cot grass used as a frost insulator.

Before noon all hope or saving the big two-storey structure, erected before the war at a cost of $1,250,000 was abandoned and firemen were withdrawn from the sides and end of the pier because of bulging walls and possibility of an explosion great, jagged fissures belched water and smoke. The smoke also seeped from the numerous loading chute openings and drifted lazily across the harbor.

Every available piece of fire-fighting equipment and a resounding water into the seething structure. It was in the upper structure that the fire raged six hours before bursting through the roof. Walls of the big concrete pier weakened under the terrific heat, and water and yellow smoke poured from the jagged cracks throughout the entire end of the building, located in the centre of Halifax's shipping and mercantile district. Long sheets of water poured from the numerous expansion joints, flooding the pier level, which so far had escaped the flames.

Flames Fanned by Wind

A rising wind fanned the flames which for many hours were not discernible from outside. Firemen were forced to retreat from the waterfront end of the shed.

"Meanwhile, members of the Harbor Commission rushed into an emergency conference to decide what course to follow and discuss the building plans. F. C. Cornell, chief of the Harbor Commission Traffic Department, said no accurate estimate or the damage could be made until inner sufferers and naval engineers were able to get into the building.

Authorities were still at a loss to account for the fire which originated about 3 o'clock in the middle of the upper floor. Firemen were unable to trace their way into the building, almost hidden by the low-lying smoke. The blaze became spectacular when flames broke thru the roof and shot skyward, followed by great clouds of smoke contrasted by changing from a dirty yellow to black.

Fear Explosions

Authorities said they feared explosions from huge stacks of piled bags of flour, comprising almost the entire net seasonal shipment for Halifax district. Firemen were warned not to enter the upper level even had it been possible.

The fire was still blazing and fire chiefs said they had little hope of bringing the stubborn flames under control before night.

RE-TRIAL ON MURDER CHARGE ON TODAY

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 19.—(CP)—Re-trial of Frederick Jackson, 43-year-old negro of Milwaukee on a charge of murdering his colored companion Eugene Lee, 61, in Dummer Township, last October was scheduled to start late this afternoon before Mr. Justice Armour. Jackson was convicted before Mr. Justice Sedgewick in February and sentenced to death but his counsel, Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., on appeal secured a re-trial.

First Papal Visitor

For the first time in the history of the Martyrs' Shrine, Midland, Ontario, a papal delegate visited the famous rendezvous on Sunday, Sept. 17. His Excellency the Most Rev. Andrea Cassulo, shown ABOVE in his pontifical robes, conducted pontifical high mass in the morning, and in the afternoon to a throng of 1,000 people around the stations of the cross.

BR. CABINET IS SUMMONED

Disarmament Talk Has Assumed a Serious Turn

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 19—(CP) Cable—The disarmament talks today had taken a serious turn. A special meeting of the British Cabinet has been summoned for tomorrow to receive a full report on the Paris conversations from Captain Anthony Eden, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, who left Paris by aeroplane today after discussions on the new French arms plan for strict control and a five-year trial before disarmament.

Official circles in London are extremely reticent over the situation, described in some quarters as arising from the French desire for a united front among France, the United Kingdom and the United States against Hitlerism in the Geneva Disarmament Conference that resumes shortly. Reports from Paris however, indicate the French are skeptical of any disarmament agreement which does not provide penalties for non-observance, while the United States is known to be opposed to the signing of any sanctions. The right to impose sanctions is therefore arising in a new form.

News Flashes

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP) — Senator Pittman, (D., Nev.) went before President Roosevelt today with his proposal for free coinage of silver as a means of inflation.

Balmoral, Scotland, Sept. 19 — (AP)—King George, although he is in excellent general health, has been forced to curtail his shooting over the Scottish Moors somewhat because of weakness of the left arm resulting from rheumatism from which he suffered earlier in the year.

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)— A condition of turmoil, accentuated by labor strikes, over much of the interior of Cuba was reported to the State Department here today in consular advices from widely scattered sections of the Island.

LABOR FAVORS 30 HOUR WEEK IN INDUSTRY

Defeats Proposal of $1 Per Hour As Minimum Wage

ASK PENALTIES

Believe Only Way To Improve Economic Conditions

(By Jack Hambleton Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 19 (CP) — Labor took a definite stand in favor of a 30-hour work week without reduced pay. With a minimum of discussion the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada in convention here passed a resolution requesting the government to put in force a six-hour day, five-day week in all industries with a corresponding increase in the wage rate "to increase the 'purchasing power of all masses, as it is only by this means the economic conditions of all classes can be improved."

With this resolution the convention adopted another asking that the government "shall make it compulsory for all employers to adopt this principle under heavy penalty for infraction of same."

The convention, however, defeated a proposal for a 30-hour week with a minimum of $1 per hour in all classes of male labor and 75 cents an hour for female workers.

The Winnipeg Trades and Labor Council submitted a resolution urging immediate abolition of "obnoxious sections" of the immigration act, and urging immediate stopping of all deportations, but this was defeated after brief discussion.

Three resolutions listed under Fair Wage and Hours of Labor were passed. They ask observance of the eight-hour day for all building trades; enactment of legislation prohibiting abuse of fair wage schedules, and insertion of such clauses in all government contracts.

Then the convention turned to hours of labor and working conditions. Joseph Tomkins of Toronto claimed women were being exploited in industry. Miss Mary Hamilton of Toronto claimed that charges she had made with regard to exploitation of girl workers in the canning industry had been denied by a Toronto inspector despite the fact that he had refused. She attacked officials of the Minimum Wage Board of Ontario for claiming they were not carrying out their duties.

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Oklahoma City, Sept. 19 (CP) —Happy days are here—anyway, one of them. For the first time in 14 years, the state issued no applications for work yesterday.

Chicago, Sept. 19 (CP)—Doris Fransen says she wishes her mother luck.

In a suit for divorce she estranged husband, Peter, 37, whom she alleged it represented the sums he had paid out on bets on the jug-gab bills when her husband Robert was delivered to her door.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (CP) — A black spider monkey with long gray beard, played hookey from the monkey school as a Century of Progress. He escaped, mounted the tower of the sky ride to a height of 200 feet this morning in the Western Provinces.

Rescuers were offered, the monkey came down, snatched the fruit, mounted the tower and tossed the skins at the lifesavers. Hundreds of spectators watched.

The monkey was still on the tower today.

After Ivan and, May Jones, had, Alberta, Sept. 18 (CP)—Soon after Ivan and May Jones had been married, Ivan asked:

"May, you're a darn good cook and housekeeper. I don't know what the home is going to look like without you."

"I'll be needing a job," she said.

And she got it. So she was back today. Not as wife, but as housekeeper and cook.

A contract guarantees her a weekly salary. It's in writing, too!

BOXER DIES AFTER BOUT

Knocked Down Fracturing Skull On Floor Boards of Ring

Sioux City, Iowa, Sept. 19.—(AP) Young Stribling, 27, veteran welterweight boxer from Decatur, Neb, died today in the hospital as a result of a basal skull fracture suffered in a bout with Bud Lymer, of Sioux City, last night.

Birdsall was knocked out in the last round of a scheduled four-round bout last night at the Arena, his head striking the wooden floor boards of the ring.

Coroner William Kriysten classified the death as "strictly an accident".

JUDGE AWARDS WIDOW $5,000

Case Arose From Accident In Which Husband Was Killed

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 19.—(CP)— After the case had been taken by Mr. Justice H. H. Wright from the hands of the jury in Supreme Court, Mrs. Janetta Pinson was today awarded $5,000 damages and costs in her action against Frank E. Harper of Hamilton.

The case arose from an accident on highway No. 20 last April when plaintiff's husband, Harry Pinson, was fatally injured by a car driven by Harper. The case was taken from the jury after His Lordship objected to the address to the jury by Counsel for the Defence.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Heavy rains have occurred in east portions of Quebec and the Maritimes and moderate to heavy showers in North Western Ontario and Manitoba. Except for a few light showers elsewhere the weather has been fair, a bit cooler this morning in the Western Provinces.

Northern Ontario—Showers tonight and part of Wednesday with strong winds, shifting to westerly. Ottawa and Upper St. Lawrence Valley—Fair and moderate warm, followed late tonight and part of Wednesday by showers, then clearing with westerly winds.

Lake Superior—Fresh to strong southeast, shifting to westerly winds, partly cloudy, followed by showers.

Kenora and Rainy River—Strong northwest winds; mostly cloudy and becoming cooler by night, scattered showers.

Manitoba—Fresh or strong west and northwest winds; partly cloudy and becoming cooler, with a few scattered showers.

Saskatchewan — Northwesterly winds; mostly fair and rather cool, probably a few scattered showers.

Alberta—Generally fair; becoming a little warmer.

ASKS HEPBURN TO GIVE PLAN OF REDUCTION

Premier Henry Challenges Liberal Leader To State Position

SPEAKS TWICE

Member Requests Government Embark On Road Program

Fort William, Ont., Sept. 19.—(CP)—Premier George S. Henry has challenged Mitchell F. Hepburn, Liberal leader, to specify what plans to reduce the expenditure of the Ontario Government by 50 per cent. if elected to office, as the Premier claims the Liberal chieftain has promised.

Continuing his visit to the Twin Cities at the head of the lakes, Mr. Henry today addressed a luncheon tendered him by the City of Fort William. Last night he made two speeches to large meetings here and in Port Arthur.

He said 80 per cent. of the Province's expenditure was on education and asked if Mr. Hepburn would cut that down. If not, he wanted to know if the Liberal leader would cut down on Old Age Pensions, Mothers Allowances, Health Services or road building.

"I refer," said Premier Henry, "not to the regular leader of the Liberal Party in the Legislature, but to the leader at large who refuses to come into the House and deal with the affairs of the Province but prefers to sell his talking from the public platform.

Leader in House Silent

"The Leader in the House has not offered any serious criticism of the Government's action in the last few years and the only reason the other gentleman criticizes is because he does not realize what we have been doing. His speeches are a hopeless jumble of Federal and Provincial affairs. Obviously he has no idea of where the line is drawn between the two and where his responsibilities as leader of a Provincial Party begin."

Preceding Mr. Henry's speech at Port Arthur Brig.-Gen. D. M. Hogarth, K.C., asked the government to embark on a broad programme of public works to shorten the unemployed he suggested the immediate completion of the transCanada Highway by spending 40,000 or 50,000 men at work at once at a cost of $20,000,000. The Dominion Government would not approve the scheme but the government of Ontario could go to the people of the province, ask for $20,000,000 and get it in 24 hours he said.

The Premier did not go into details about his relief policy beyond saying he proposed to get away from direct relief and employ those on the more men. One way of doing this would be a gasoline road-building programme in Northern Ontario.

EXPECT IDAHO TO BE IN DRY COLUMN

Home State of Senator Borah Expected To Vote Today

Washington, Sept. 19 (CP) — New Mexico and Idaho were having their say about U.S. prohibition today—the former standardistically, the latter with a wider display of oratory.

Clear skies, beckoning the rural folk to the polls tomorrow in the dry states in Idaho, home state of that ever-present friend of prohibition, Senator Borah. Allied dry's predicted a vote of more than 100,000 with more over 40,000 opposing repeal.

In New Mexico, foes of prohibition predicted at least a 2 to 1 victory for repeal.

These two states, the only ones to hold elections this week, are the 30th and 31st to take action by referendum. The other 29 all have approved voiding the 18th amendment from the constitution.

LOSES APPEAL

Edmonton Sept. 19.—(CP)—William McLean, 21, year old Tennessee youth, today had loss his appeal against conviction and sentence of death for the murder of Walter J. Parsille at Manville, last September. The Alberta Court of Appeals by a majority of four to one dismissed the appeal and denied a new trial.

Seeking U. S. Loan

PETER A. BOGDANOV

Here is Peter A. Bogdanov, chairman of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, an agency of the Soviet government, who is said to be negotiating with officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a loan of between 50,000,000 and 75,000,000 at conferences in New York. The R.F.C., it is said, stands ready to advance the funds as soon ready to advance the funs as soon the deal.

Fr. Coughlin Not Swayed by Verdict

Detroit, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Rev. Fr. Charles Coughlin, crusading priest whose charges of falsification of records and predictions of impending financial indictment against local bank officials startled the now-closed Detroit Bank investigating jury, said today in an interview to the Detroit Times the finding of the jury, that no actu of criminality were evident; did not change his views "one iota."

"From the available testimony given," said Father Coughlin, "the United States government is a liar; Senator Couzens is a liar and Publisher Scripps-Howard is a liar and the United States government, in addition, is an iniquitous thing because it closed perfectly solvent banks.

"If the United States government is as crazy as to put its case on this testimony, which was given by more or less prejudiced bankers. If the United States government will take complacently this opinion of the grand jury, which was formulated on testimony which eventually was aimed at saving the double liability of stockholders, I am very sorry and afraid the people of this nation and of Detroit will begin to classify our government as an Archangel Capone."

MARATHON SWIMMER CLAIMS LIFE IN DANGER

Isadore Spondor Claims "Dope" Used In Big Swim

Port Colborne, Ont., Sept. 19.—(CP)—Isadore Spondor, maratohn swimmer who was taken out of the water in the Canadian National swim last month, before leaving town today asserted that his life was in danger and produced a letter, which he claimed, he claimed, "doped" other swimmers in the recent marathon.

Spondor said he had been threatened because he knew too much of the alleged doping activities during the swim, spoke in particular of those who threatened his life were afraid he would "spill the beans". He did not intend to do this, he said. Spondor said an unknown had been shadowing him recently.

Believe Leeches Cause of Epidemic Killing Wild Ducks in the West

Calgary, Sept. 19. — (CP)—Undoubtedly leeches are the whole cause of the epidemic of deaths among ducks at Stobart Lake and other bodies of water in Alberta, stated W. J. Selby Walker as the Calgary Fish and Game Society today prepared to press further its efforts to remedy the serious situation existing among wild fowl.

Dr. William Rowan, University of Alberta naturalist, declared he did not believe the leech theory. He declined to comment, however, on his findings during a trip to Stobart Lake and stated a report would be made later to the Alberta Government.

"All our investigation so far points towards leeches as the cause," Mr. Walker said. "The sick duck Mr. Rowan examined and on which he could find no leeches is recovering from the fact have removed three of the insects from his nostrils."

ATTEMPT TO MOVE TRUCKS CAUSES RIOT

One Machine Damaged While Workers Cut By Glass

TRUCKS STONED

No Arrests And Police Have Situation In Hand

Stratford, Ont., Sept. 19 (CP) — A miniature riot in the east end of the city resulted today when attempts were made to take two trucksloads of partially-finished radio cabinets from the plants of the Preston Noelting Company, a crowd of the striking furniture workers and sympathizers standing the trucks, and causing serious damage to one of the machines.

Oil Drained

The oil was drained from one of the trucks and it was badly damaged, but the other made a getaway amidst a shower of missiles, the windows and windshield being smashed to pieces. Strikers scattered some of the load of the other truck in the street.

No injuries other than minor cuts and bruises were reported, however, and several members of the city police force suffered minor hurts from flying stones, while the driver of the truck which got away was believed cut by flying glass.

City police, reinforced by Provincial officers from Stratford, Kitchener and Mitchell, were able to do little against the sudden onslaught. They took a hand, however, in preventing complete destruction of the goods on the stalled truck.

No arrests were made and it is believed that no charges would be laid.

The Noelting plant along with other principal furniture plants in this furniture-manufacturing centre has been closed since last Thursday while striking workers and employers are deadlocked, chiefly over the strikers' demand for recognition of their new Centerfield and Furniture Workers' Union.

Workers United

The trouble at the Preston Noelting plant threatened several times last evening. Shortly after 10 p.m. pickets noticed lights burning and heard hammering inside where several men were working on the pipeorgan. Forcing their way into the plant the strikers found three of the workers and ousted them from the building but could not find the others.

Police were called on that occasion and quiet was soon restored. Pickets, however, remained on duty, arming an effort to be made still later. Shortly after 1 a.m. the trucks drove up to the plant and the driver of one was warned that trouble was likely if an attempt were made to move the goods.

Loading proceeded however, and strikers at Kitchener were quickly informed. The crowd in front of the plant grew rapidly and by about 2:30 a.m., when the trucks were ready to leave, more than 300 were on hand. A number of women were in the crowd.

The moment the first truck reached the sidewalk the stones began to fly and the crash of breaking glass was added to the shouts of the strikers.

GUILTY OF STEALING FEED

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 19.—(CP)— Theft of the last supper of a shipment of pigs owned by Gordon McTaggart of Alvinston, brought Hugh Patterson, 17, Alvinston High School boy and Gordon Woods, 20 into police court today where both former pleaded guilty to stealing the feed at chop and the latter of receiving stolen goods.

FALLS FROM RUMBLE SEAT STRIKING HEAD

Ottawa Youth Dies And Driver is Held by Police

Guelph, Ont., Sept. 19.—(CP)—an unexplained accident today cost the life of Alex. Stuart aged 23 of Ottawa, member of a party surveying in the district for Government aerial maps. As a result Donald Armstrong of Elora, driver of a car out of which Stuart fell and suffered fatal injuries, was charged in police court with reckless driving and remanded for a week on bond of $300. An inquest has been called.

Stuart fell from the rumble seat of the Armstrong car near the city limits. He is believed to have struck his head against cement curb, and died some hours afterward in the hospital a party of fire were in the car.

MUCH DAMAGE DUE TO STORM

Hunger Prevails In Afflicted Area And Many Homeless

NEW BERN, N.C., Sept. 19.—(CP) —The dual menaces of hunger and disease hovered over the North Carolina Sound country today as relief workers pushed their way into the 100-mile stretch of lowland ravished by the city's tropical hurricane. With communication with several small fishing villages still cut off, Red Cross workers pushed into the storm area, and cause back with reports of desolation and suffering.

Conservative estimates place the damage wrought throughout the hurricane's course as far as Norfolk, $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. Here at New Bern property loss not as hard hit as some of the smaller communities, the damage stood well above $500,000.

Hunger and want prevailed in many communities and health officials guarded against the possible outbreak of epidemics. On Ocracoke Island, one of the many small bits of barrier reef along the coast, only one of the 50 houses escaped damage after the hurricane swept mountain seas across the island at 12 m.

The homeless were estimated as close to 3,000.

MAN ARRESTED WANTED HERE

Elmer Rankin Faces 28 Charges of Theft At Walkerton

Elmer Rankin, 23, wanted by the local Provincial Police for the alleged theft of four automobiles and the alleged breaking and entering of three places of business north of Belleville, was arrested at Walkerton early Monday morning following a hectic chase through the woods north of that town.

Rankin faced twenty-eight charges of breaking, entering and theft in the police court at Walkerton today and following his trial will be brought to Belleville where further charges will be preferred. Rankin is suspected of stealing two cars in Prince Edward County, one at Smithfield and another at Colborne, where numerous alleged break-ins in the vicinity of Campbellford have also been connected with Rankin's name.

He will be brought to Belleville by the Provincial Police following the completion of his trial at Walkerton.

BAILEY AND WILSON TAKEN TO PENITENTIARY

Waive Right of Appeal Which Is Given To Each Prisoner

Waiving their right of appeal George Bailey and Frank Wilson were taken to the Kingston Penitentiary under the supervision of Sheriff Geo. H. Stokes this morning.

Bailey and Wilson were sentenced to serve five years each on six different charges of breaking and entering, the sentences to run concurrently, when they pleaded guilty to all charges read in Magdays police court on Saturday last before Magistrate Mikel.

Heavily guarded by Chief O. H. French and Turnkey R. E. Colling Sheriff Stokes took the men by motor to Kingston at an early hour this morning.

LIFE OF POET IS EULOGIZED

George A. Kingston of Campbellford Addresses Rotarians

"Sir Walter Scott," furnished the topic for discussion at the Belleville Rotary Club's weekly gathering Monday in the Hotel Quinte. George A. Kingston, B.A., of Campbellford, editor and publisher of the Campbellford Herald, was the guest speaker, and his description of the life and works of Sir Walter Scott was very interesting and informative, showing that the speaker had made a close study of the Scotch poet and prose writer and his influence upon his life and times. Sir Walter Scott brought to the world in all the beauty of his virile poems the characters and virtues hidden away in the Highlands of Scotland, of which so little was known, and that little not good, before his time. The Highlanders were labeled as robbers and cattle thieves on account of the border forays and the feuds, which existed between the Highlands and Lowlands of Scotland. Of course there were raids by these people occasionally cattle were lifted by the victors, but as a rule these were located on one side as the other. Sir Walter Scott lifted the Highlander and obscured the virtues of the Highlanders and introduced them to all the world as a brave and kindly folk, brave and honest.

The speaker told the story of Scott, of Scott's criticism of his poems, especially "Marmion," which was hired to outrage Scott's parents, "The Lady of the Lake", "The Lay of the Last Minstrel", etc. Sir Walter Scott made a lot of money with his poems and novels, but lost it all in his publisher's failure, his fortune being swept away and replaced with a debt of some $600,000 thousand pounds. This he determined to pay off and all succeeded when death claimed him.

Sir Walter Scott was brave and honest, and very religious, and regarded the Bible as the Book of Books, from which he derived much comfort and consolation right down to his last day on earth. Sir Walter Scott as depicted by Mr. Kingston, was a lovable character, kindly and sunny disposition, and the address brought renewed interest and attraction to Rotarians privileged to hear the eulogy.

UNEMPLOYED REGISTER AT RELIEF BUREAU

Over 100 Have So Far Filled Out Questionnaire

Registrations of unemployed of the city were rolling in to the office of the Central Relief Bureau without pause throughout the day, Tuesday. With the opening of the doors early in the morning a large number of men were on hand to be first to enroll themselves on the list from which workers will be chosen, when suggested relief work now under consideration by the city council becomes actuality. By noon Tuesday well over one hundred men had registered their names on the lists, while little evidence of a let-up in the number who would be later in the day. Only bona fide residents of the city, who have had at least six months residence are being accepted. The men are being interviewed before coming which must be filled in by them and returned to the office before registration is complete.

Confidence
200 times multiplied!
The first small British-American refinery, erected at the foot of Cherry Street in Toronto in 1906, covered a bare 3 acres . . .
Today, in 1933, the two ultra-modern plants in Montreal and Toronto together cover 125 acres, have a daily crude oil capacity more than two hundred times as great!
Mere size is of little meaning. But constant growth is always significant. It is that aspect of these figures we would emphasize. They tell a story of customer confidence, 200 times multiplied . . .
Confidence in the technical skill behind the products that bear the B.A. name . . . confidence in their unswerving high quality . . . confidence in the men who serve B.A. and You!
Looking back, we believe this confidence is the greatest asset we have had: Looking forward, we shape our course to the end that it may always be justified.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. H. B. AUSTIN

Tweed.—The funeral of the late Luella Alberta Austin, wife of Mr. H. B. Austin of Tweed, was held in the United Church on Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. R. Nicholson, during which Mrs. M. G. Dales and Mrs. S. H. Connor sang "He Knows It All." Interment was in Victoria cemetery, at Tweed.

Surviving are her husband and eight children: Gerald, Helen, Phyllis, Harry, Delta, Muriel, Donald and Francis, to whom the sincere sympathy of the entire community is extended. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roudhorn of Madoc, and one sister, Mrs. Russell Barker, of Bolton, also survive.

The bearers were: Dr. J. A. Thompson, Messrs. T. N. Beatty, J. Kichen, Bd. Way, H. Spears, Tercanic, and A. Kelly.

JOSIAH J. JORDAN

Word has been received in the city of the death of Josiah J. Jordan, Willoughby, Ont., a former resident of this district, on Saturday last. The late Mr. Jordan was well known by the older residents of this district. He was born 69 years ago and has lived at Willoughby for a number of years. He was a former Mayor of that city and has been engaged in the Real Estate business some time. A number of relatives in this community are left to mourn his loss. The burial is being held in Campbellford, the funeral taking place on Wednesday.

INDIAN RELIC DISPLAY SEEN

Indian Missionaries Describe Country To Large Audience

A very large congregation turned out last night to hear Captain and Mrs. S. W. Williams of India, present their interesting and educative Indian Missionary Demonstration in the Salvation Army citadel.

There was a large display of Indian relics and curios, and fancy work and needle craft, all done by inmates of the Army's Criminal Settlement.

The speaker also described the various costumes worn by numerous castes, also the mode of uniform worn by army missionary officers, as worn by themselves at last night's demonstration. Costumes were also worn for display by local Salvationists to aid interest to the demonstration.

The appearance of the three Williams' children who were all born in India, in their native clothing was a popular feature of the evening and their sweet singing of Indian Army songs delighted the crowd.

Capt. Williams also described the working system of an Army Criminal Settlement, not only the system of sentence and terms of internment, but also their mode of industry and the ideals sought by the army, love labour and honesty under the banner of the Cross of Jesus Christ.

CACHED GOODS ARE LOCATED

Recovered At Oshawa By Constable McBrien of Brighton

Found cached in the vicinity of Oshawa, a large quantity of allegedly stolen goods was recovered by Provincial Constable McBrien, of Brighton, in company with the Oshawa police early yesterday. The recovery of the cached goods is expected to lead to an early apprehension of those responsible for recent robberies that have been successfully engineered north of Belleville.

According to statements given out by the Provincial Police this morning they have every confidence of apprehending those responsible for the crimes thereabouts, following and also the capturing of the four robbers, who escaped from County Constable Wicket's Friday night last.

Every available constable has been pressed into service and momentary results are expected in these quarters.

CHALLENGE RACE TO DETERMINE BEST DESIGN

Sailing Ability And Speed Will Influence Committee

Considerable interest and speculation has been aroused among boat owners in the city and district over the scheduled matched race which will be held in the local harbor at the end of Victoria Park on Wednesday afternoon between two sailing punts of various classes to determine the better type of construction with regard to sailing ability and speed. Gus Taylor of the city, who has recently constructed a "Sea Gull" sailing punt, the Eagle, has challenged the speed record holder, the Ron Wallace Paterson. If smooth weather is granted the sailors on Wednesday afternoon the race will be held over the large course in the bay, a distance of eight or nine miles; if the weather is rough both boats will sail the inside course of six or less miles. The Eagle will be skippered by Mr. Maurice Callaghan while the Ron Wallace will have her regular crew. Mr. H. Wallace will be the judge, up consistent with the boat during the past summer. The race will start from the end of the park at three o'clock sharp in the afternoon.

JEWISH NEW YEARS THURS.

Ram's Horn Will Be Blown As Has Been Yearly Custom

Wednesday at sundown marks the beginning of the Jewish New Year 5694 and the two-day's festival of the New Year commences at this time, and will terminate at sundown Friday. At the Tabernacle of the congregation of the Sons of Jacob, Pinnacle Street, services will be held Wednesday evening, morning and night Thursday, and Friday morning. At the morning services the Ram's Horn will be blown as has been done for thousands of years by those of Hebrew origin. The Jewish year, 5693, has approaching its close, commenced on October 1st, last.

On the 20th inst., the Day of Atonement or the Festival of Reconciliation will be observed by the Jewish race throughout the world and the advent of this festival which is one to be strictly observed by those of the faith, ushers in ten days of religious services at the Tabernacle.

In the chronicled history of the Jewish race the year 5694 will be 4238 years since the Flood, 3226 years since the birth of Moses, 3206 years since the return to the Holy Land by the Children of Israel from Egyptian bondage and 3440 years since the ten bribes were lost. It was also 2756 years since the completion of King Solomon's temple at Jerusalem which was in existence 410 years before its destruction 2340 years ago by King Titus. The second Temple was completed 2233 years ago and this was destroyed 1868 years ago, 66 years after the birth of Christ.

MOUNT PLEASANT W.M.S. HAS MEETING

Rawdon.—The September meeting of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon W.M.S. was held at the church on Thursday afternoon with an attendance of eleven. The president, Mrs. Ross Hoard presided, and Mrs. A. H. Bailey offered prayer. A business meeting was then held and plans completed for the coming sectional rally to be held here on November 29th.

All sang "Mark the Song of Jubilee," and the Lord's prayer in unison. The secretary read the minutes and eight members responded to the roll call. Mrs. Frank Jeffs read the Bible lesson found in the seventh chapter of Hebrews. Mrs. John Hillman gave a splendid devotional talk on "Faith" dealing with the subject in three phases, "Faith in Mankind", "Faith in Circumstances" and "Faith in God". All things work together for good to all those who love God, and so we must love God if we desire to have deep faith.

Miss Edna Thrasher sang in a good voice, "I want to be a worker for the Lord."

Mrs. Cyrus Summers read a selection on "Courage" the story of a woman who went as a missionary to India with her husband and left her children in Canada, to be educated.

Mrs. A. H. Bailey read from the new Outlook "Wanted Another Layette."

Treasurer reported $3.44 for August. The offering amounted to $2.11.

Each one was asked in an early application of those responsible for recent robberies that have been successfully engineered north of Belleville.

According to statements given out by the Provincial Police this morning they have every confidence of apprehending those responsible for the crimes thereabouts, following and also the capturing of the four robbers, who escaped from County Constable Wicket's Friday night last.

Defeated by King Levinsky Sharkey Eliminated as a Heavyweight Contender

Winner Seeks Match With Champion Carnera This Fall

SHARKEY DAZED

Unable To Use Science And At One Time Hit Levinsky Low

Levinsky, Chicago West Side battler, today had his eye on Primo Carnera's world heavyweight boxing title following his defeat of Jack Sharkey, former champion, in a rough and tumble battle at Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox.

Matchmaker Nate Lewis of the Chicago stadium, much impressed by Levinsky's great showing against Sharkey last night, said he would open negotiations with the Carnera management at once. The bout if arranged, will take place in the Chicago stadium this fall. Carnera has met and defeated Levinsky twice.

The defeat practically eliminating Sharkey as a heavyweight threat although he has another bout booked with Tommy Loughran at Philadelphia on Sept. 27. However, his share of the receipts in both fights is $25,000.

Sharkey entered the ring a favorite, but the money of his backers went glimmering in the first round. Levinsky rocked Jack with a hard right and following with another, that floored the ex-champion for a seven count. Later in his threating room Sharkey admitted that he never recovered from that first blow. King had Sharkey staggering in the second round when he again scored with rights.

Dazed in Third

When the bell ended the third round the Boston fighter was so dazed from the constant hammering of Levensky's fists that he walked to a neutral corner and had to be helped to his seat.

Sharkey was unable to use any boxing science against the bull-like charging Levensky and hit low in the fifth round. The seventh was the only round that Jack won. King came near scoring a knockout in the next round with his wild swings and won the last two by wide margins.

Sharkey weighed 201 and Levinsky scaled 4 1-2 pounds more.

Promoter Sammy Wolff announced the show was a financial success. The attendance was 20,317 and the gross receipts $53,236.40. Sharkey received $25,000 and Levinsky about $8,000.

The coastal regions of British Columbia have a climate so mild and so different from other parts of Canada that roses, which are not hardy elsewhere, do well there without winter protection.

TORONTO DINGHYMEN PREPARE FOR SAIL-OFF

Defeat Crews From England To Gain a Tie

Oyster Bay, N.I., Sept. 19 (CP)—Confidence buoyed by a victory over the English entrants Monday, dinghy sailors from the Royal Canadian Yacht Club prepared today for a race-off to break the deadlock they accomplished in the international series being sailed off this Long Island Point.

The Toronto boatmen defeated the crews from the Royal Norfolk and Suffolk Yacht Club of Lowestoft, by the narrowest of margins —11 points to 10 1-4—when they met yesterday afternoon in the series most exciting tilt. After a tight fight for the six miles of the wave-broken course David Beale sent his English boat first over the line but the Royal Canadians finished second, third and fifth to take the decision.

New Ruins of Ancient Mayan City Believed to be Over 1,800 Years Old

Mexico, D.F., Sept. 19 (AP) — The discovery of new ruins of an ancient Mayan city near the Pomuch railroad station, in Campeche State, was reported today by Alberto Escalona, member of an archaeological expedition into Yucatan.

He said the ruins resembled other found in the south of Yucatan and probably were more than 1,800 years old. What he described as apparent evidence of the passing of the Toltec Indians through the region about 700 years ago was found in a statue.

The members of the expedition also studied remains of the city of Uxmal. They found more than 35 buildings, including a temple of the Sun, and a government building.

"Soldiers of the King" The Cavalcade of Laughs

"Soldiers of the King" Opens To-morrow—"The Cavalcade" of Laughs—Improved Sound at the Capitol

Tomorrow, (Wednesday) is the BIG DAY.

"Soldiers of the King" arrives at the Capitol Theatre for a three-day run, and to judge from the amount or publicity the "Cavalcade of Laughs" has received, the three days should be capacity days.

"Soldiers of the King" commences London laughing, then Toronto saw it for two weeks at the Uptown Theatre and renewed the mirth. Now Belleville will have the opportunity of having the last laugh, and the last laugh is always the best!

First and foremost, "Soldiers of the King" is a British film, and the emphasis does not signify that it should be seen from patriotic reasons alone. The significance lies in the fact that British films are fast proving their tremendous worth. They contain that different something which is expected and welcomed, and that different something provides the kind of entertainment that the public is demanding more each day. These pictures are a relief to jaded nerves, nerves which have been jangled, to use the words of the Sidelights columnist, by too much noise.

To say that 'Soldiers of the King' is a comedy is betraying pathetic apathy to the more descriptive adjectives embraced in the English language. This production must be given full merit as being a picture which swerves gaily along, providing irresponsible entertainment in which sentiment, songs, patriotism, romance and clever cavorting are mixed by hands well versed in the art of outstanding showmanship.

The story deals with the Marvellos, a troupe of thirteen artistes, with Cicely Courtneidge as their "queen."

By common consent, Queen Marvello retires through old age and her place is taken by her daughter, Maisie.

The youngest member of The Marvellos is Judie, who allows her private affair with a young Guardsman to interfere with her appearance on the stage at a Gala performance.

Maisie, who herself is a little too far advanced in years to indulge in acrobatic dancing, understudies Judie in her act. Although her bones have stiffened a lot, too much for the job she goes through with it. The result is a positive scream and this scene alone will raise the roof of the Capitol Theatre when you see "Soldiers of the King" tomorrow.

Cicely Courtneidge, who will be remembered as the voluble Scots-woman in "Jack's the Boy," takes the dual role of the ex-Queen of The Marvellos and of the daughter, Maisie.

To quote a review of "Soldiers of the King" from the News-Chronicle, an English newspaper, the reviewer states: "Cicely Courtneidge is the life and soul of this film. Criticism would be out of place. Its sole aim is entertainment. If it makes you laugh, it is successful. If it does not, then you are a failure. 'Soldiers of the King' made me laugh. It is the merriest picture I have seen yet on the screen."

Some of the members of the cast are known to Belleville movie fans. There is Cicely Courtneidge (who is, incidentally, Jack Hulbert's wife), Edward Everett Horton, Anthony Bushell, (two more stars who seem to have deserted Hollywood), Bransby Williams (the greatest quick-change artist known to the stage of any country), Leslie Sarony (one of England's headline comedians), Dorothy Hyson (daughter of the famous Dorothy Dickson), and a number of lesser known players from the remainder of The Marvellos.

The direction of this picture was assigned to Maurice Elvey, who has been responsible for many of the successful British films, both silent and talkie.

Mercel Heniere

It is interesting to note that one of The Marvellos is played by Hercshel Heniere, whose film experiences takes him back to Mary Pickford's one-reelers, "The Goose Girl" and "The Schoolmaster and the Waif." He is a Canadian and ran away from his home in Canada just at the time D. W. Griffiths was launching out in the super-pictures of 1912.

Well, we have given quite a lengthy discourse on "Soldiers of the King," and in conclusion, mention that the complete performances at which this picture will be shown during the next three days, will be 2.45, 7.15 and 9.00, preceded by News, Cartoon and interest at all performances.

Improved Capitol Sound

Although just how the system of sound in a motion picture theatre works is known to the few only, the public is sufficiently intelligent in these days of mechanical progress to realize that nothing remains idle in the way of improvement.

It stands to reason that a 1933 radio must necessarily be an improvement on a 1932 model.

Such is the case with the improvements just completed in the Capitol Theatre sound system.

The improvements lies in the new type photo-electric cells and new type tubes, and to avoid unintelligible technicalities, the explanation is simply:

The responsibility of good sound rests, in the main, with the photo-electric cells, which first pick up the sound, and with the tubes which passes the sound (amplified tremendously) to the audience.

The photo-electric cells and tubes hitherto used by the Northern Electric Company were extremely delicate texture, and the lasting quality left quite a lot to be desired. The new type combination now affords considerably more volume, and in no doubt the volume can be kept down to a comfortable conversational tone. Consequently all extra noises are eliminated and the clarity of voice and music become much more accentuated.

This is another of many instances of the expense incurred by Manager Holmes to give the public the service to which he feels the large clientele of the Capitol Theatre is entitled.

Cicely Courtneidge is the centre of attraction as she is in "Soldiers of The King". British Super-comedy opening tomorrow (Wednesday) at the Capitol Theatre.

A DAY OF SCIENCE

Recent news was rich in the reports of scientific discussions both in America and in Britain. They leave one somewhat bewildered in a cosmos about which the expandonists and the contractionists cannot agree, but with a more hopeful view of our own little earth in a universe, "which is only a hypothesis like the atom," as De Sitter declares it to be. Such is the nature of our minds that we instinctively endow our immediate surroundings, our solar system, with an element of permanency. It seems to be established. And if it be true that the earth is two thousand million years old, and perhaps even older than the universe itself, why may we not consider our little planet with all the conceit of the Ptolemaic theorists, who saw the universe revolving about the earth? Need we be disturbed even by the flying away of the remote nebulae, whose distances from one another and from us become doubled in thirteen hundred million years? Especially when we are told that observational facts, such as these nebulae are in their vagrant behaviour, are not to be accepted "unless they are confirmed theoretically."

A little time ago Sir James Jeans was telling us that the universe was designed by a mathematician, and now we are told by another of the great authorities that nature works without mathematics and that it is simply our way of trying to find out God by measuring Him. It is the old voice that came out of the whirlwind, asking now of the universe what in the days of Job were the first and the last of all: "Who determined the measure thereof . . . or who stretched the line upon it?" Mathematics is but the line. We can conceive that the ultimates in physics may some day be measurable, but the things which are unseen belong to eternity.

The Chicago scientists brings us back to our own earth in the value of carrots (or carotene) along with our daily bread. If the matter that is in carrots and in certain other vegetables is the key to the mess the strong preventive power ascribed to it by the Cleveland scientist, especially in fighting common colds, it will indeed be a discovery of as much importance as the promotion of human health. An even greater boon may be in store for humanity in discovery of the new carbon which has been found in the leaf, the front page as pantothenic acid, pervading all living things from algae to man. This may be of more consequence to human life than the habits of the nebulae.

A recent philosopher has said that "this not contrary to reason to prefer the destruction of the universe to the scratching of the finger." And with all our concern for the relativists at Leicester, who have had to extricate themselves from an apparent theoretical position, we are more concerned about what will minister to our health and happiness and so prolong our lives than this stabilized part of the cosmos, with its past of 2,000,000,000 years and its prospect of as many more to come. —New York Times.

THE MURDER OF MUSIC

The radio is charged with killing "the lovely art of music."

At the same time the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers contend that the mechanization of music has compelled the composer to write in inferior music, has reduced interest in the study of music to a minimum, and has almost abolished professional opportunity in this art.

Yet by the increase in the radio audience from 16,000,000 in 1925 to 60,000,000 in 1930 the popularity of music is enormous.

The radio audience grows while the sale of pianos, phonographs, records, sheet music and the composer's remuneration steadily decreases.

In the Society's recently issued brochure on "The Murder of Music" it is declared that people "listen in to any one of several hundred broadcasting stations that repititiously and endlessly din into the ears of listeners old music and new music, good music and poor music." Musicians out of work are accounted for by the fact that mechanization has reduced the musicians employed in the theatre from 19,000 in 1925 to 3,000 in 1932.

A song hit used to last sixteen months and sell 1,116,000 copies; now the radio stations play a hit to the point of exasperation and it dies in three months.

A good word is an easy obligation; but not to speak ill requires only our silence, which costs us nothing.—Tillotson.

Ill deeds are doubled with an evil word. —Shakespeare.

How much better it is that he should speak ill of me to all the world than all the world speak ill of me to him.—Tasso.

Men trust rather to their eyes than to their ears. The effect of precepts is, therefore, slow and tedious, while that of examples is summary and effectual.—Seneca.

THE CREST

Never to let this moment go,
Only to catch it and hold it so!

Bitter are they who look always back,
Torn by their sense of the present's lack,
Racked by one endless and futile pain;
Joy that can never return again.

Barren are they who must look ahead,
Dreaming fair dreams like a maid unwed;
No bright coin in their hands to hold,
Only the hope of tomorrow's gold.

Neither bitter nor barren am I,
Riding the crest of the wave, tossed high;
Proud in the finding of utter bliss,
Winning with rapture life's smile, life's kiss!

Never to let this moment go;
Only to clutch it and keep it so!
—Aline Michaelis.

WAR CHIEF OF THE SIX NATIONS, Joseph Brant, who left a name in history as a great warrior and steadfast ally of the British in peace and war, would be pleased could he look back from the Happy Hunting Grounds and see the annual Labor Day on the Mohawk Indian reservation, just east of Belleville, which takes place next week. The energy and progressiveness of the great War Chief's descendants is always shown in the exhibits at the Mohawk Fair and all who attend come away feeling that they have witnessed something different and worth while, that they have been entertained, instructed and endowed with a respect for their Indian neighbors which they had never known before. To meet and mingle with the leaders of the Mohawk Indian community, to be privileged to penetrate the true Indian reserve, is to get a glimpse of lofty ideals, of a pride of race tinted with beauty, and a trace of the ancient mysticism of the Indian race which always is most alluring and attractive. If you are seeking a new thrill visit the Mohawk Indian Fair next week, but before you do read the history of Joseph Brant, War Chief of the Six Nations.

TUNNEY, REMBRANDT, PHELPS . . . Visiting Chicago Art Institute the other day, Gene Tunney showed more interest in the Rembrandts than in George Bellows's famous prize-fight picture, "The Stag at Sharkey's."

As the Institute's weekly news letter informs us, "he stood some time before Rembrandt's "Aristotle with the Bust of Homer," and finally unburdened his soul with "Ah, but that's a great painting"," a remark which should gratify William Lyon Phelps' who invited Gene to lecture on Shakespeare at Yale, and had afterward to explain things to the many who find it hard to recognize a former pugilist as a man of culture, says the Literary Digest.

WORLD'S FAIR AT SHANNONVILLE came back this year stronger than ever, and added another outstanding success to the long line of successful events with which the good people of Shannonville have so entertained the public. Shannonville is small in size, but its civic spirit is large, and its history is one of good deeds and that community which makes for civic happiness. Every fall the good people of Shannonville entertain their friends at what is known as "The World's Fair," and Saturday's effort was the best yet.

A ONE-ACT RUN

Short runs in our theatre have been common enough, but what American movie can beat the record of an English film, "The Merry Monarch," which is said to have cost £100,000 and had a run of one night. The Evening Standard (London) reports this and more than matches the record with one in the theatre:

"I remember three theatrical productions lasting only one night. But in the distant seventies a play finished after one act. That was not solely due to the quality of the play, but to the unwise hospitality of the author. In the first act occurred a banqueting scene, and to mark the occasion real champagne was provided. The actors of those days had leaner purses and less simpler lives; the opportunity was not to be missed.

"The curtain did not rise for Act II. because the players could not."

FORD HELPS UNEMPLOYED

4500 Men To Be Taken On In Plant At Detroit

Detroit, Sept. 19 (AP)—Hundreds of unemployed men gathered around the American Legion Memorial Hall in downtown Detroit today in answer to a promise of jobs with the Ford Motor Company.

The men, some 300 of whom had waited all night, filled the sidewalks on two sides of the building at Cass and Lafayette Avenues, overflowed into an adjoining parking lot and soon eight or more abreast for a block down Cass Avenue and on Fort Street, which parallels Lafayette to the south.

At 8 a.m. police estimated there were 4,500 men in the crowd, and there remained two hours before the first would be interviewed. A large detail of patrolmen was on hand, and the crowd was quiet.

The men were attracted by an announcement that the Legion will select 4,500 men will be hired anew at the Ford plants in the Detroit area. The announcement said 300 men will be selected daily until the quota is filled.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN WILL PRODUCE SILENT FILM

Hollywood, Sept. 19 (CP)—Chas. Chaplin has decided to believe in talkies and will start production on a silent picture within the next 60 days, he consulted associates today.

Paulette Goddard, to whom Chaplin was married, was reported as set to play the feminine lead in the picture. Chaplin also believes that the silent picture still has its place in art and entertainment and will make additional sound effects in his new picture.

Ramblings

Life has its perplexities for even the house-to-house salesmen who toil the daily rounds. A host being a peddler in a drive to gain new customers for his company has been making the back door rounds of various towns throughout the city with samples in his little basket. It's a tough racket. A dozen or more times a week he is forced into a conversation with all manner and breeds of dogs who resent the intrusion of their homes. Generally it's a draw. Sometimes he isn't so lucky. One week alone he managed to get nipped on the calves and ankles on three separate occasions. It got monotonous. So he figured out a plan. From heavy canvas, and using the steel strips from a resurrected pair of corsets as reinforcement, he fashioned himself a highly efficient pair of ankle and shin guards. Worn under his trouser legs they are unbelievable but very reassuring. So he goes to work now with his little basket, shielding merrily and with a whole lot more assurance. And so far each even one selling defender has attempted to test the efficiency of the new protectors. It is thinking seriously of taking out a patent and starting their manufacture. Look at the salesmen there are in the country!

There's a lot of new pep and snap to the official typewriter of a downtown office these days. Generally this office has been known as a place where a considerable amount of work is transacted in a day. Sometimes the amount of business is almost too much for the young lady in charge of affairs. But then came a change. It all happened one day when a salesman from a music house walked in with a little music box under his arm. He put it up on a shelf, hooked up a wire or two, and the little pocket radio began to play soothing music. The boss was intrigued. He bought one. The salesman pointed out that it would make the hours and days of business to have music at his fingertips. But he overlooked one good selling point for boss in general. Since the little machine has been put into operation, the young lady is calculating quite handily on her correspondence. She types in time to the rhythm — and has gained about one-third or her old speed. When she is done legal manuscripts she uses a slow waltz time. Happy business letters need a good fast fox trot. There was no mention made by her regarding crooners.

Lamp chimneys—the regular, old fashioned glass ones—are as extinct as the dodo, so an old-timer of the city informs. Even with the advent of the electric light this old fellow kept a number stocked over the old kerosene-burning standby. He's kept the custom up for years. But kept the custom up for years. But kept then it becomes necessary for him to buy a lamp chimney. Then it gets dusty and hard-to-clean or has to be found only on the back shelves of some dusty, unlit grocery store. It's almost impossible to get one in the city, unless you know where to go. Last week he hunted in over a dozen shops before he finally got one in a little corner grocery where the proprietor is still old-fashioned enough to stock them. Even he fears that in time he won't be able to get any more. There isn't any demand for them, and they don't make so many, he explains.

REVOLUTION AGAIN LOOMS FOR CUBANS

Rebels in Strength March Towards Cuban Capital

WILL NOT RESIGN

Grau San Martin Will Not Accede To Demands

(BY EDMUND A. CHESTER)

Havana, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Threats of another revolution and reports that 300 rebels were marching toward the capital reached the young Cuban Government today almost simultaneously with demands that President Gran San Martin resign.

From unimpeachable sources it was learned that Captain Juan Blas Hernandez, veterans campaigner against former President Machado, left Moron in Camaguey Province with a hastily armed band and was enroute to Santa Clara, in direction of Havana.

He left with the full authority of the local military commander, reports from Moron said, to resume the two-year revolt he ended, when Carlos Manuel De Cespedes succeeded Machado.

There were mutterings in oppositionists' camps of revolution as Grau San Martin persisted in his refusal to accede to demands of five powerful political groups, that he make way for a "National" Government.

"I will quit," he countered, "when anybody who has a right to ask me resign does so."

He made the statement at the conclusion of a meeting with a committee of Roberto Agramonte, mediators, gave him separate memorandas from the O.U.R.R. and A.B.C. political societies. The memo to Mendieta's Nationalists, former President Menocal's group, and the Mariantistas of Miguel Mariano Gomez.

"It doesn't matter who is President," Dr. Grau San Martin asserted, "so long as the revolutionary program is carried out."

Must Give Authority

A leader of the Student Pro-Government faction interrupted him to say that "Grau San Martin cannot resign unless we, the Student Directorate, who put him in the Presidency, ask him to."

The executives retired to treat directly with the oppositionists, but their demands were presented by the mediators. The September 4 meeting met without the President and drew up their ultimatum, terms of which was understood to contain a demand for his resignation and the appointment of a coalition cabinet.

The Government, meanwhile, proceeded with its plans. It set May 20, 1934, for a constitutional convention, whose delegates will be elected April 1, 1934.

A rearrangement of Cabinet positions was made whereby the public works portfolio was given Carlos Moreno, secretary of communications and Interior Secretary Antonio Guiterras became communications secretary.

The Treasury Department reported that September collections were running more than $500,000 behind but that it believed it would be able to make September pay-ments.

Treasury Secretary Domingo, however, was quoted as saying he refused to "utilize that optimistic bluff" of predecessors.

In an outbreak of violence that added to the burden of labor unrest, one civilian was killed and another wounded in front of the National Hotel early today.

Authorities named a soldier, Hermenido Vera, as the assailant, and claimed the shooting resulted from an argument over a taxi cab bill.

Recently the President said his foes have had several conferences, during which he has firmly refused to quit. In several political circles it was believed that he would resign finally, however. Opponents said a revolution would follow his refusal.

GIANTS NEED ONE VICTORY TO WIN FLAG

Drop Decision To Cards And Nearly Lose Good Hurler

HIT IN NECK

Senators Although Beaten Move Closer To The Pennant

(By Herbert W. Barker, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Baseball prosperity, represented by the National and American league pennants, was just around the corner today for New York Giants and Washington Senators. All the Giants needed to clinch the National league flag for the first time since 1924 was one victory for themselves or a defeat for their only rival, Pittsburgh. Washington was but half as well off. The Senators needed two victories, two New York defeats or a combination of one triumph and one Yankees defeat.

It was possible neither flag would be clinched today but the Giants, slated to play their final game at St. Louis, while the Pirates tangled with the Phillies in a doubleheader expected to end the National league race by nightfall. They let just such an opportunity slip through their fingers yesterday but the ex decision they dropped to St. Louis Cardinals worried them less than the narrow escape "Pat Fred" Fitzsimmons had from serious injury.

The veteran right hander held the 3-1 lead with two men on in the second inning, when a line drive from Bob O'Farrell's bat cracked him on the neck, Pitz went down and lay gasping. A club house examination revealed he had suffered no serious hurt.

Despite the defeat, the Giants moved closer to the pennant for Pittsburgh got no better than an even break in a twin bill with the Phils. Paul Waner's homer in the eighth gave the Corsairs the first game 3-1, but Ed Holley came back with a four hit shutout in the night cap and the Phillies won 6-0. Boston Braves pounded out 14 hits to wallop Cincinnati Reds 8-2, while Brooklyn beat Chicago Cubs 6-4.

American League

Following the Giants' lead, Washington also picked up ground although beaten. They bowed to St. Louis Browns 4-2 but moved one game closer to the flag when the Yankees split a double header with Chicago White Sox.

Sam Gray held the Senators well in hand all the way as Washington touched for 10 hits. A walk to Oscar Melillo and a triple by Ted Gullic gave the Browns two runs and the game in the eighth.

Johnny Allen held the White Sox to two hits as the Yankees won the first game 6-2, but the Pale Hose came back to take the nightcap 4-3 behind the six hit pitching of the Dallas recruit Leslie Tietje. Lou Gehrig hit a homer in each game to bring his season's total 29.

MANY STRIKES IN OPERATION

Industrial Picture In U. S. Not As Bright As Intended

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(CP)—Strikes still speckled the U.S. industrial picture today.

Among them were:

Brockton, Mass., shoe workers; Pennsylvania, coal miners, truckmen; New Jersey, silk workers; New York, conveyar, dock and delivery workers, Jersey City, Can Co. workers; Brooklyn cleaners, dyers and Cape Cod, Mass., cranberry pickers.

Senator Robert F. Wagner head of the U.S. Labor Board, urged both sides to avoid disputes as much as possible and seek peaceful settlement before the board.

Watch Miner's Labor

Now that the coal code bears President Roosevelt's signature, the question remained as to what 30,000 bituminous coal miners in Pennsylvania would do. Some strike leaders expressed belief the government "will see the code put into operation fairly." Others reserved comment.

There was no authoritative announcement as to when the miners will resume work. Also there was no definite statement as to what the H. C. Frick Coke Company, long time opponent of unionism, will do about union recognition.

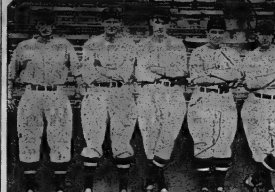
Buckshot wounded a spectator when pickets and working miners clashed in North Scranton, Pa.

A strike of 3,000 teamsters, which could hamper flour, grocery and furniture delivery, was threatened in New York unless employers shortened hours.

BYRD READY TO PROCEED

Second Antarctic Expedition Will Be Under-way Sept. 25th

Boston, Sept. 19.—(AP)—With his largest aeroplane arriving today, his sledge dogs trained and at hand and his two ships receiving the final dabs of paint, Rear Admiral Richard Byrd was applying the finishing touches to his second expedition into the Antarctic.



The huge twin-motored plane was scheduled to arrive in charge of Harold June, Stamford, Conn., aviator, who has aided Byrd on previous expeditions. The ship will be used in aerial survey work in the land down under. Admiral Byrd will pilot it over and beyond the South Pole.

Work of reconditioning the "Bear", staunch old whaler and revenue cutter, has been finished, and on Wednesday it is expected the ice breaker will be hauled into the navy yard for additional loading. The second vessel, the steamer Pacific Fir, still was in drydock but was expected to be ready for loading at about the same time.

Besides the big twin-motored plane, Admiral Byrd will take an autogyro type plane to be used in his survey. The 150 sledge dogs, Arctic huskies, were trained during the winter in New Hampshire and are fit and ready.

The expedition will take supplies enough for 70 men for two years. Admiral Byrd said practically everything needed could be carried on the two ships, including a large

BARNEY ROSS GETS EXPERT ADVICE FROM EX-STARS

Terris Rom Singer Leonard Cross

Four famed lightweight stars of the past, all of whom, Barney Ross, world's lightweight champion, as he trained in New York to give him some expert advice on how to prepare for his coming fight with Lou Ambers, champion of the world. Left to right, Tommy Terris, Sidney Rom, Al Singer, Benny Leonard, the greatest lightweight of recent years, and Dr. Leach Cross.

Spying on Sports

BY
William Ritt
Central Press Canadian

WHEN BARNEY ROSS smacked his way to his second straight victory over Tony Canzoneri he settled one question—the matter of whether or not he was the New Orleans Italian's flatic superior—but he gave the fight world an even more baffling problem to answer.

The fight fan, who loves to argue anywhere, anytime about anything, must feel grateful to Barney for presenting the new puzzle.

It is: Is Barney Ross a better lightweight than Benny Leonard was?

Of course, there will never be an answer, for the Benny Leonard of 10 or more years ago can never fight the Barney Ross of today.

x x x

BARNEY was a fine fighter the night he whipped Canzoneri to turn back Tony's challenge for his old possession, the world's lightweight championship. And Barney has not yet reached full development as a flatic performer.

All of which means that Barney is destined to become one of the great fighting men of the day or time.

The Chicago Jew has splendid ring equipment. He can take it, he has a lightning, stabbing left and he'll learn to perfect his defense.

Barney has the heart. He wouldn't have taken on the round-faced sachamp so quickly after their first closely disputed match if he hadn't.

x x x

BARNEY'S left was the dominant weapon in his last battle with Tony. He used it more too often and, remember, it was landing on the person of Tony Canzoneri, who is one of the best of his kind.

Barney is smart and likes to fight, but whether or not he is Benny Leonard's superior it is smart to allow Old Man Time to tell us.

When he reached his peak no one of his weight could lick Benny. Maybe no lightweight exists who can lick Barney today. But he must first show us by fighting all the better ones in his trying class.

And he will. That's one of the chief reasons why Barney Ross is already one of the most popular pugilists of today. He's a fighting champion—something almost as rare as a pro-Chinese Jap.

ALEX MORRISON says:

Limber shafts are being put in clubs turned out by the leading manufacturers, and the relatively whippy shaft is not entirely all that is required to reap the benefits of a limber shaft.

It is far more important to have the whip located in the proper part of the shaft.

If the whip is under or near the grip section of the shaft the player is then in the habit of swinging as a club with a hingelike action near his hands.

This makes the clubhead very difficult to control.

If the shaft is graduated so that the more limber part of the shaft is down near the clubhead the player will get full benefit from the whip and have little or no trouble controlling the clubhead.

FEW WORKERS BACK TO JOBS

Remainder Offer No Resistance But Show No Sign of Yielding

Long Branch, Ont., Sept. 19 (CP) —Under the armed guard of nearly 100 Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Provincial Police officers, a score of the striking relief workers at the Long Branch relief camp today left their comrades and started back to work under the regular scale of 20 cents a day and food and shelter.

The 700 or so remaining strikers offered no resistance but apparently remained staunch in their determination not to go back to work until some action was forthcoming on their demands for 30 cents an hour wages, for an eight-hour day, and inclusion under the Workmen's Compensation Act. Demands which the Ottawa authorities cannot meet.

CURRENT SPORT

Following last Saturday's wrestling bouts at the Kiwanis Karnival there was conversation with Mayor McLain, the 226 pound ex-football star from Oshawa. McLain is quite taken up with Canada and Canadians and intends remaining up here until the snow flies.

We asked Mayor if he contemplated playing professional football with the Canadian Tommies this year. His gall, along with some other ex-football stars who are now celebrities in the wrestling world and he answered in the affirmative. Tommie Cain and I assured him that he could count on me for at least four games," he said. McLain was picked as 1st All American tackle in 1922.

Although nothing authentic has been done regarding the matter Referee Tommy McGhee held a short consultation with the heads of the local Kiwanis Club relative to their sponsoring wrestling shows in Belleville this fall. McGhee promised the local service club the very best of wrestling talent procurable. If the project does materialize the bouts will likely be held in the Armouries with a profits going to the Kiwanis Club's charities.

Maybe the fans present at the bout did not notice the development of Al Getzewich's mustache. The ex-smacked marvel wears the 1-2 star, but the absence of development of his neck is attributed to the wearing of his mask he says. We don't believe that and come back he were. He informed us that the mask was merely a protection wool and he tied it about his neck with an ordinary cotton shoe string. He attributes his neck development to that little string.

Be Sure the Baby Understands Orders

(By Constance Cameron)

It is easy to forget how we felt in those days when we didn't know as many things as we do now. Because we can read a sign that says, "Stop" or one that says "Caution," we forget that there was a time when each was but a changing color, meaning exactly nothing to us.

Because we know as well as we know we're alive that two and two makes four, we grow impatient with little people to whom two and two are more words.

Let us, every little while, try to go into the world of our children and see what we really mean to them, what our status to them really is. I think we shall emerge awed and humbled solemnly with the responsibility that the visit will give to us.

The children depend on us for food and clothing, for a home. They depend on us for a great deal more than that. It is a big world, even as far as the next corner is breath-taking, adventurous. The world is filled with furniture, legs, houses, cars, trees—all huge to the small person but a few feet from the ground. In this world he learns on someone, runs to someone for shelter and advice and information. That someone is usually mother, mother rather than father because she is with the child a greater part of the time.

Limited Vocabulary

Mother is the child's "Stop" or "Caution," or "Go" sign. That is something to think about. What would your reaction be if the sign said "Go", and you obeyed, only to "Go" thoughtlessly, eager to be free of interruption, and he comes a cropper with too many ice cream cones, too big a bump for a little fellow, too heart-breaking failure when your thoughtful "Caution" might have spared him?

What will his reaction be if, when you say, "Caution" he does not understand your words, if you have not remembered that his vocabulary is limited and that he may not understand?

You are your child's only signal lower during his first years. That is a grave responsibility. Be true to your trust. Make your signs absolutely certain and safe. And be sure the child understands them.

Correct Manners

SERVING AFTERNOON TEA

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please give me full information about the arranging of a tea-table and the serving of tea? I have just begun to keep house as a twenty-year, and I have a definite ambition to a be a correct hostess at tea-time.

What is the correct procedure of setting the table for tea and serving it when one has a maid, and when one does it oneself?

What items are necessary for complete setting of the table? I have some wedding presents adaptable to the serving of tea, but some I fear that I have to get, and I do not want to get them until I know just what I need.

Thank you so much, Mrs. Beeckman, if you will do this for me.

Bride.

Good! I'm always delighted worm a woman gets the tea-entanglement, for there is no more gracious hour in the day than this, when one's friends may drop in for the friendly cup of tea, to find the hostess at leisure and charmingly ready to offer this most delightful form of hospitality. With very little effort and expense, the gracious hostess can derive from this form of hospitality the maximum return of friendliness and charm. And that's a great deal, these days.

First, about the tea-table. If a maid is to assist in the serving of tea, the kind of table is the drop-leaf tea-table. When you are ready, the serving in the table, you place it before you and opens it. On the table she lays the tea-cloth. If you have no maid, the most convenient kind of table, I think, is the tea-cart, because on top may be used as a tea-table and the shelf below for the requirements.

For the tea-cloth, I like a generous sized one that has a deep hem-stitched border and this is the best for either kind of table. The cloth may be any type of several kinds, depending on your budget. The traditional one is of eyelet embroidered linen with blocks of fine filet lace, but there are many prettily and effective kinds.

The tea-cart is brought in by the maid, or if you are preparing the table before hand you may place it beside the teacart. On the tray are the teapot, the strainer, a tea-caddy, a cream pitcher a sugar bowl, a dish usually of glass, for the slices of lemon, and a kettle over a lighted alcohol lamp. Important, too, and often forgotten is the tea bowl, of silver or glass or china, into which you will pour the dregs of the first cup of tea when you prepare a second cup, and in which you will place the piece of lemon used with the first cup. On either table—but not on the tray, since there will not be room—are the cups, saucers and spoons. Either the maid brings, or you have placed on the tea-cart, the plates — small tea-plates, seven or eight inches in size, for each place is the small tea- napkin.

If there is a maid, she will then bring in the three-tiered table known by the picturesque name of "curate's assistant". On the top shelf of this table may be a covered dish filled with hot crumpets, scones, toasted English muffins, cinnamon toast, or some specialty of the moment that you have devised for serving with tea-cheese dreams, for instance.

On the next shelf may be tiny sandwiches of plain brown bread and butter, or nut bread, or white bread with marmalade, jelly, cheese, lettuce or anchovy filling. Or there may be a combination of cheese straws and the most simple of tiny sandwiches for those who do not like the more elaborate things.

On the bottom shelf is the other course—small cakes, a layer cake, brownie or any other kind of tea-cakes. If there is no maid these ten foods may be placed on the lower shelf of the tea-cart.

As you sit behind the purring kettle and take up a cup and saucer you ask the guest " How would you like your tea?" The guest tells you be-cause of the number of requests, whether with lemon or cream, and, if with sugar, how many lumps. In the meantime either you or the maid has handed to the guest a plate with napkin on it. Then either you or the maid passes the filled cup to the guest.

Even if you have a maid, she does not usually stay after placing the "curate's assistant" convenient to you, for there is really nothing more that she can do. It is easier to have the rest of the serving done by the hostess, and easier to chat with no one else about.

You see, it's all very simple and very charming and very cosy. The important thing is to have every item in readiness before the tea-hour arrives, so that you can give all your attention to hospitality. Do write me again if I haven't covered every question that was on your mind—will you please?

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

Weird Break In New York During Second Hour of Trading But Some Recovery Made — Trading Heavy In Gold Shares With Only Moderate Gains—"Wet" Stocks Sensitive To Unsteadiness In Wall Street.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Toronto Stock Exchange wound up a sluggish day with a spurt led by International Nickel and Smelters, the whole list of leaders shaking off prices that reduced or wiped out early recessions and in many cases backed up substantial gains. Smelters closed at 141, up 3½ points and nicked at 142 a new high of 30 cents. Distillery shares were not so active as usual and they succeeded only in closing without losses.

Brazilian, C.P.R., and Ford A barely held their ground, the main interest centring in the metals. The tone was not in the ails though the list had narrow fractions on the downside at the close. International Pete at 19⅞ was unchanged and B. A. and Imperial were off ¼ apiece.

Blue Ribbon pfd. had a couple of points to lose and it did. So also other shares including Loblaw A, B. C. Packers and Canadian Canners and, closed on the up side.

2.30, Hudson Bay at 11.75 and Falconbridge at 3.35 were all higher.

Sales of orders carried Lake Shore up to 49.50 for a gain of 150 and closed 75 units at 49.25. McIntyre up 50 at 46.50 and the others were practically unchanged.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

(By Victor Enbank)
(Associated Press Financial Writer)
NEW YORK, Sept. 19. — (AP)— Chemical industries accentuated through the Security Markets today and the melting of their mysterious garments brought shivers to the faint hearted in Wall Street.

There was actually little to account for the erratic movements of stocks. The day started with only moderate irregular during the first hour, but there was a sharp and rather weird break in the second, which flooded the list in the course of 1 to 4 then a moderate rally regained some of the more severe declines.

Issues of International Nickel, Canadian Pacific Rail and Hudson Porcupine were a bit easier. Dome Mines firmed 3-8 of a point.

Most of the Mining Shares sagged within the early hour, but the more volatile homestake slumped 20 points at one time. Noranda, however, managed to go its own way. Issues off 1 to 2 or more included American Can, Anaconda, Allied Chemical, American Can, Cash, Chrysler, Johns-Manville, Industrial Rayon, Du Pont, Western Union, U. S. Smelting, Santa Fe, Pacific Pacific, Pennsylvania, National Distillers, Consolidated Gas and U. S. Industrial Alcohol.

FOOT CAUGHT IN TRACTOR CRUSHED

Plainfield, Sept. 19—The reception held at the home for Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sills was attended by Mr. Harry Tummon and family, Mr. and Mrs. Scott and Mr. Chester of Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Wellbanks, of Northumberland, and Mrs. Hamilton and family, of Shannonville, the Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Everson, of Plainfield and a brother with his wife and family.

At the close of the buffet luncheon the Rev. J. F. Everson proposed the toast to the bride and groom offering congratulations and welcoming Mrs. Sills (as Lorlin Scott) to the community and expressing the hope that she would soon find many new and warm friends among the people of the neighborhood. The groom made a very pleasing and clever reply.

Mr. C. Nicholson had the misfortune recently while driving the tractor to have one foot caught between the pulley and the flange on the wheel crushing the outside badly. He is confined to his bed and will be under the doctor's care for some time.

Mr. Wesley Fagan and Mr. J. Hamilton had the misfortune lately to loose a valuable horse.

On Sunday the Rev. J. F. Everson conducted anniversary services at Elim Lake an appointment on the Hobbs circuit. Mr. Everson was pastor there sixteen years ago. The Rev. D. W. Craigg, of Roblin conducted the anniversary services at Mount Pleasant on Sunday.

The men of Bethel congregation held a bee on Thursday and enclosed the shed in order to make it comfortable for the chicked supper which is to be held on Monday evening Oct. 2nd. A new steel roof is being put on both the shed and the church at Bethel appointments of the Plainfield pastoral charge.

HILLIER TWP. SCHOOL FAIR AT HILLCREST

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Benway and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Benway and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Clarke of Shoemaker.

Mr. Albert McKinnon of Brighton called at Charlie Benway's on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. S. Payne of Winnipeg has been spending some time with relatives in this county, coming on Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Leavens.

The farmers are sowing a good acreage of fall wheat in this district.

Mr. C. B. Clapp expects to truck a load of blue cheese from Kingston this week.

Mrs. A. G. Mitchell of Wellington spent the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Charlie Benway.

PERSONAL NEWS OF AMELIASBURG

3rd Ameliasburg.—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hoskin and friends, all of Peterboro, spent Sunday at Mr. E. Hoskin's.

Miss Marion Adams spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. Cecil Morland, South Ameliasburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tyler were the dinner hour guests of the latter's uncle, Mr. Frank Delong, on Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Humphrey and family took dinner at Mr. E. Fox's on Sunday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Mastin who left Friday in Peterboro and attended the Fair.

Miss Violet Sherman spent the week-end under the parental roof with her mother, Mrs. G. Sherman, Hillier.

"GOLD BRICK" HARD

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—It took Michael Pouppor and a Sheriff's officer an hour in general sessions today to saw through one of the gold bricks which the crown alleges formed part of a swindle to separate Pouppor from $1,500. Another Pouppor brother, Louis Bruno—Patrick and Emmanuel are on trial for conspiracy.

Hungerford Rural School Fair Held at Tweed C. S. Attendance Smaller This Year

Tweed (Special)—Hungerford Rural School Fair, the last of the County School Fairs, was held in Tweed Consolidated School on Saturday, September 16th. The threatening weather kept the attendance down to the small-est crowd in some years. The exhibits were not numerous in many of the classes. Only two sections were filled, S.S. No. 3, Hungerford (Thomasburg) and Tweed Consolidated. The pupil's of the Consolidated School sang two choruses, "Afton Water" and "The Mermaid" under the direction of Miss Lois Richardson, music teacher of the school. Following this two groups of twelve children from three of the class rooms took part in the Rhythmical Exercises. These children were trained by Miss P. Blaney, Miss G. Moran and Miss D. Hanna and performed the exercises in splendid style. Mr. O. Bailey of Springbrook, gave the commands.

The public speaking competitions were next contested. Eight speakers took part, all from Tweed Consolidated School. The contestants in order of judges' placing and their subjects were: Grade VIII—Pearl Strieker, "Why we Study"; Beryl Austin, "Henry Wadsworth Longfellow"; Marion Clark, "Canada's Contribution to Peace"; Robert Louis Stevenson"; Gerald Loftus, "The Royal Canadian Mounted Police"; William McCaw, "Lumbering in Ontario"; Grade VII—Ruth Poster, Donald Bateman, Charles G. What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

OKLAHOMA COWBOYS OF RADIO FAME NOW IN PERSON AT THE BELLE

Every one a group of real cowboy entertainers, sometimes called "the cowboys' band! You have probably heard Kenn Hadley and his Oklahoma Cowboys many times from various radio stations throughout the United States, as they have broadcast from over sixty-five of the leading and large radio stations for the past few years and last week were featured from Station CFCT, Toronto.

You will have a chance to hear and see them in person at the Belle Theatre where they will appear Thursday and Wednesday, matinees this evening.

This is the original Oklahoma Cowboys which was featured on the National Farm and Home Hour over the coast to coast network, of the National Broadcasting Company, and ones that create a sensation in every radio station with their fast and diversified radio programs.

Each and every member is an accomplished entertainer musician, playing and using a total of twenty-two string instruments. Every one wears dress in what might be termed their native costumes, large ten gallon hats, fancy boots, chaps and leather vests. Yes, sir, honest to goodness cowboys with their quaint and unique entertainment which they have learned among the lonesome prairies. As they say, they do plenty of playin', singin, dancin', and ropin' and that's only a few of the things they do.

Watch for the specially built and decorated car in which they travel. You can't help but see and notice it as it will be close to the Belle Theatre there today and Wednesday.

Dame-Mallory Film

The world's most famous cheerfoghfare, playground for million-aires and the millions, forms the background for the drama unfolded in "Hello Sister", featuring James Dunn and Sally Eilers, feature offering opening today with the above vaudeville unit, James Dunn as "Jimmie" saving-bank salesman, and Boots Mallory, pretty sub-blonde screen import from New Orleans, as Peggy, are principals in the romance that motivates the plot.

Supporting them in three widely different characterizations are Zazu Pitts as Millie, homely girl-friend; Minna Gombell as Monica, hardened lady and Terrence Ray as Mac, typical Broadway wise-guy. A Mack Sennett Cycle comedy and a Canadian News will be exhibited on the same program.

Garbo Fralges Film

Greta Garbo, Joseph von Sternberg and Marlene Dietrich, the three first persons to view "The Scarlet Empress", latest picture in Paramount film produced by Rouben Mamoulian, coming to the Regent Theatre.

Miss Garbo, seeking to enlist the services of Josef Mamoulian, new director for her new picture, saw Sternberg's "Docks of New York" and Mamoulian's "Applause" and was the highest praise Miss Garbo could bestow on her finest effort.

Briane Aherne, the new romantic sensation heard, the large supporting cast.

The Kingston Penitentiary Riots

Was there a riot in law? I think so. And was there a riotous liury to buildings? I think so. The criminals seemed to think so. There are as follows: First, there must be three persons involved, and that does not need any argument. Secondly, there must be a common purpose. That does not need discussing for the common purpose was general or concerted destruction of the grievances which she men believed they were suffering under. Thirdly, there must be carried into execption of that common purpose. That has been established also, for the men quit work at three o'clock in the afternoon, presumably under an agreement to do so, and contrary to the rules of the institution. They refused to do so. Then the Deputy Warden, Mr. Macdonald, was taken hostage and the riot was on. Sunday that peace was disturbed, and blood was transferred, and the complete destruction

Lida arrived wearing black crepe and looking tragically dramatic. She murmured brokenly of being "so alone now" of the long years she and Bennett had lived, unknown together, Elinor listened and her expression chilled.

To hear Lida Stafford from personating her daughter would be a genuine task, Barrett saw.

After dinner on the evening of her arrival Lida asked Barrett to walk with her on the terrace pacing the close-clipped grass by her side.

"We must have a frank talk, Barrett," she began.

"It can't be a long one," he said bluntly. "Elinor may want me."

Yes, are quite devoted to her, aren't you?" Lida questioned. He noted in the half-twilight the bitter menace of her smile.

"I loved her with all my heart," he said loudly.

Lida's comment was a dry, "Delightful!" Suddenly she forgot her tragic role and laughed.

"I don't understand you, Mrs. Stafford," said Barrett, coming to an abrupt standstill.

"You will be assured him suavely. "I shall be happy to explain!"

Leaning gracefully against the balustrade that guarded the terrace from the sheer drop, she spoke of Gerald and the woman in Connecticut. "I know only the bare facts now," she admitted as she finished speaking, "but I can easily fill in the gaps of the tale—if I need to fill those gaps—"

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

That Barrett realized meant having Marcia's story broadcast to the world. He stood with teeth set on his lower lip and scowled at the clustered lights in the hollow, lights that he did not see.

The tale might mean the end of Elinor's happiness, for he had promised Marcia that he would tell Elinor the true story.

"How much, is it you want, Mrs. Stafford?"

She laid a hand on his arm and as the touch he drew back. "I'm not going to be unreasonable," she said smoothly. "But I do like to think that when I really need help I can come to dear Elinor's husband—"

"Suppose we omit flowers," he suggested dryly. "I asked how much you want for silence."

Lida admitted that she really did need a little help. Things had gone so badly for her in a financial way. "But I think I could manage with $30000," she told him.

After a moment's consideration he promised her his check.

"Suppose," Lida suggested sweetly "we attend to it now?"

Smiling ironically Barrett agreed. They were in the living room and he had just given her the check when Elinor appeared in the doorway.

"Inopportune!" Lida murmured. She trailed off languidly. Elinor's expression showed mild surprise but nothing more than that. Barrett understood that her sense of loss was so great she scarcely noticed anything around her.

He drew her arm through his. "Come outside," he urged. "I want to talk to you."

Miss Hemingway had said, "Divest her thoughts."

She went with him without objection. They were to leave for New York the next day. After that her father would be gone for all time! ... could not forget that she had clung to him at her aunt's funeral. She had felt that she and her father—alone of the large group—shared the same emotions. Perhaps her father was the only person who would ever understand her, the only soul who would ever comprehend those needs that cannot be voiced.

A hunger for trust was one of them. She could not feel that Barrett—thoughtful as he was—quite trusted her. And love without trust was not love at all.

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

He settled with her in a broad, low, cretonne covered swing. Dropping an arm around her shoulders, he drew her close.

"Mind that," he asked.

"No."

"Have you ever been to Cuba?" he wanted to know.

She said she had not.

"I think you'd like it," Barrett went on. "It's a gay, pert, laughing sister of Italy. Suppose we start down there in a few days? I'm certain I can get reservations easily. Travel's all going the other way just now. Would you like it, dear?"

"It sounds very pleasant."

"It may be a bit warm but the wind always blows."

She felt she would like warmth, she said, as she shivered.

"We'll take long drives. You'll love the country."

"It sounds pleasant," she repeated dully.

He tightened his arm.

"Barrett, I—"

"Yes, dear?"

"I don't want this house."

"I know you don't!"

She began to cry again softly. He drew her closer. At a moment she was clinging to him and his heart began the pounding it knew so well.

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

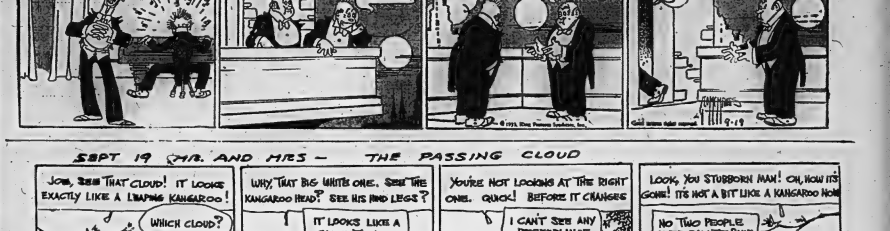
June in New York was hot. Houses with drawn shades told the world their families had fled, headed for the seashore or mountains. Stay-at-homes shed garments and sweltered. In newspaper columns the heat wave took precedence over all other events.

Marcia however, left her Long Island home on a train bound for New York. She had not seen Elinor or Barrett since their return from Cuba and she longed to be certain that Barrett's happiness, indicated so plainly in his letters, had made him forgive what she called "my little sin."

She was not comfortable about the matter. She had gone to Dr. Arthur Palmer, rector of the church she had attended for so long, expecting to pour her problem into sympathetic ears. She had been sure that he would absolve her after she had given something in atonement to one of his favorite charities.

But her visit had not taken the pattern she expected it would. Dr. Palmer heard her faltered tale without a word.

"I am burdened!" Marcia ended a bit dramatically.



"You will be as long as you refuse to tell the truth," he answered.

She stiffened.

"I came here thinking I could be helped by giving generously to one of the needs about which you know so well," she said.

"Give generously instead to the need you know," he responded. He leaned forward looking at her. "Your love for Elinor is unfair," he went on "because some day the facts

Half stunned and wholly infuriated, Sir Maluf wheeled and charged, determined to ride—Blake down. They met with a clash right in front of the Princess' logs. There was a dazzling quick play of swords, and to the astonishment of all, Sir Maluf included, the Blake from his grasp and hustled to the field, leaving him entirely at the mercy of his foe. Maluf reared in his horse and sat erect, waiting. He knew and Blake knew, that under the rules Blake was entitled to run him through unless Maluf sued for Mercy. And no one expected so haughty a knight to do that. Utter silence had fallen upon the stands as Sir Maluf sat proudly waiting for Blake to advance and kill him. Instead, Blake summoned a squire and had him return Sir Maluf's sword to him. Then the stands rocked with applause.

This time Sir Maluf, re-armed rode toward the American and bowed low. "I salute a noble and generous knight," he said graciously. Blake bowed in return. "Are you ready, Sir?" he asked. Maluf nodded. "On guard then," snapped the American. For a moment they jockeyed for position, then feinted and Maluf raised his buckler to his face to catch the blow. But as it did not fall, he lowered his shield.

As he did so, the edge of the American's weapon fell heavily upon the crown of Maluf's beaniee. Sir Maluf's arm dropped, he slumped in his saddle and rolled to the ground. Agile, even in his heavy armor, Blake dismounted and walked to where his vanquished foe, face up, lay stretched before the Prince's loge. He placed a foot upon Maluf's breast and pressed the point of his sword against his throat while the crowd waited breathless for the final act.

will come out and make trouble for your brother. Those facts are sure to be misunderstood, if that happens they will break his heart. Your brother's wife has seen too much deceit and dishonesty to forgive it easily. Unless you are brave enough to tell the whole truth she may read a lie in the circumstantial evidence. That lie will end her happiness as well as the happiness of your brother who has so long shielded you!"

Hands trembling, Marcia plucked at the clasp of her bag. "I certainly did not expect this from you Doctor Palmer!" she said shortly. "I expected help!"

"I am trying to give you help," he said sternly.

She rose. "I presume that even with you, Doctor Palmer, such affairs are private and personal matters?"

"Even with me," he admitted, smiling a little grimly.

After he saw her out he went back to his study, dropped into a deep chair, and invoked thoughtfully. He could understand Elinor Colvin's passionate devotion to her family. Sometimes he felt, especially after such an interview as this, that was no honesty in the world, that he was beating his head against a stone wall. Marcia Colvin knew that How Elinor Colvin would take this affair he dreaded to think.

CHAPTER 40

On nights when Marcia could not sleep she was haunted by Arthur Palmer's eyes and what he had said. He didn't know what he was talking about, she assured herself. He couldn't understand how she felt about Dick, her husband. If Dick who believed her to be so innocent, should learn the truth about her marriage to Lon Moore it would be a fatal blow. It would kill Dick! He would never, never forgive the fact that she had lied to him.

It was on one of the afternoons in June that Marcia called at her brother's home. Higgs opened the door for her. He said, "Mr. and Mrs. Colvin are expecting you, Miss Marcia."

"Thank you, Higgins," she answered, stepping into the hall. It was cool after the blistering blaze of the street.

She gave the butler a box of flowers she had brought from her garden and slipped from her silk coat which he took.

She heard music as she moved toward the drawing room. Elinor and Barrett were there. For a moment Marcia studied them from the doorway.

Barrett stood with his arms on the piano, staring down at the girl Marcia had never seen him before with that look of adoring tenderness. Elinor's face was raised to his and she was smiling. They were obviously devoted to each other.

"Well!" said Marcia loudly blithely.

The two at the piano started. Barrett turned and called out warmly, "Hello!" He was too happy, she saw, to hold resentment. Elinor rose.

"I'm so glad to see you, Marcia!" she exclaimed.

"Darling child!" Marcia murmured, kissing Elinor. "My heavens, but you look lovely! Lovely!"

"I happen to think so too," Barrett said slowly. With a quick sly glance at him, Elinor flushed. Marcia felt herself hardening as she stared at Barrett. She had thought him to be devoted to her but she realized now he had given her only the surface of his love, crumbs from his table. It was not a pleasant thought for one of Marcia's temperament.

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

She settled herself in a chair. "Tell me, was Cuba amusing?" she asked.

The hottest that Marcia could remember.

"Rather," said Barrett, again looking at Elinor. "I've always been attracted by the place.

"Did you like it too, dear?" Marcia went on, turning to Elinor. "Oh, I adored it!" the girl answered.

"You two talk just the way Dick and I did about Dick's place in Canada where we spent our honeymoon. But you aren't honeymooners and haven't that excuse," Marcia murmured. To herself she thought, "What in the world can make Elinor flush so?"

"We were really delighted with the trip," Barrett stated hurriedly. Higgins came in then with the flowers Marcia had brought. Elinor and Barrett both seemed eager to speak of the flowers, admiring them and praising them rather extravagantly. Barrett, drawing his chair closer to Elinor's, reached for an end of the string sash she wore obviously devoted to each other.

"Well!" said Marcia loudly blithely.

He had to be near Elinor, Marcia saw. The thought aroused a flame of jealousy in her heart that startled her.

Elinor asked about the baby and immediately Marcia was off. She talked with elaborate detail about how the baby smiled, the way he rocked while sleeping. She missed not a bead of the rosary every proud mother told but she saw to it that listeners no tendency to smile or hint at boredom as so many listeners supposed she felt she had the whole-hearted attention.

"You've been sweet about listening to all this," Marcia admitted when at last she had finished, "but it's so wonderful—having a baby for one's own! I can't help babbling. I hope some day you'll understand."

"I hope so," said Elinor and blushed.

Trenton Riversides Eliminated From O.A.S.A. Playdowns

F. B. NEAL

Trenton, Sept. 19 (Special)—Poultrymen of the Trenton district gathered in the town hall as guests of the Rexnord Marmill Ltd., where two of the leading authorities in the egg and poultry business addressed the gathering on many points essential to raising the best chickens and how i ocare for and correct method of marketing eggs.

Mr. Neal emphasized what a great industry chicken raising has reached especially in the last few years, but many just follow the few years but many just follow the other fellow while others learn the fundamentals and ways of a profit making business and succeed accordingly.

Mr. Neal is a nationally known authority on chickens and their breeding, also an expert on feed formula for not only fowl of all kinds but farm animals and fur bearing animals.

Mr. A. E. Reesor president and treasurer of Reesors Marmill Ltd., accompanied by Mr. Neal and Mr. T. A. Benson of the Poultry Service, Dominion Dept. of Agriculture visited many of the larger breeding farms in district and recommended them highly and made special mention of the wonderful strides in the community about Trenton on their improvements in the past few years of chicken raising.

Mr. Benson addressed the farmers attending the meeting on the care of marketing eggs.

Add Trenton o-Greened guy? woo ! It's supposing that you have a flock of laying hens, stated Mr. Benson in his opening remarks, that were bred for egg production and which will, with proper care, housing and feeding produce for you super quality eggs excepting for the usual small but important percentage of defective eggs usually produced by even the very best flock of hens. We will say then that your hens deliver to you super quality eggs of attractive appearance—"So far so good".

Care of Eggs

Now, what are you going to do to ensure as far as possible, that these eggs reach the consumer as super quality eggs? As I see it, many of this the following suggestions should be carried out faithfully. The male birds must be removed from the flock at the conclusion of the hatching season. The eggs must be clean,—all of them, or they will be receiving rather than attention. If your birds are confined to the poultry house, this means daily cleaning and clean nests, with a good supply of nesting material. The eggs must be gathered at least three times a day to prevent them becoming heated by summer or chilled or frozen in Winter, either of which will damage the eggs beyond repair. As in the case of milk, eggs should be cooled as soon as possible after being laid. Remove the eggs to a cool basement free from any odors of any kind, preferably on an open wire or wicker basket for about twelve hours. Then pack the eggs, large end up, in a clean case with clean fillers and flats and cover the case to prevent draughts passing over the eggs, or dust and dirt settling and so retain their original bloom. If your hens are allowed out of the poultry house on wet days, no matter how clean the house may be hens that have been out in the wet should be kept by and go straight to the nest with muddy feet, all any eggs that may be laid before leaving the nest, unless just one fistful of clean dry straw is thrown on the floor to attract the birds' attention as something new when they enter the house. If this is done they are almost sure to scratch. In the new straw and remove the mud from their feet before going to the nest, and this is easier than cleaning eggs. The straw should be changed, the clekning should be done with steel wool—eggs should never be washed or cleaned with a damp cloth unless they are to be used at home immediately.

All market eggs must be candled to detect any possible defects if they are to be guaranteed. Grading by a uniform, definite standard is also essential so that each grade into which eggs may fall indicates a definite quality. Grading in this manner is the language of trading, enabling the seller to know exactly what he is selling and the buyer to know exactly what he is buying.

Guarantee Flavor

Having done all these things, one very important thing remains that cannot be done by candling and grading, and that is to guarantee and guarantee the flavor of your eggs. This can only be done by absolutely controlling and knowing everything that the hens eat and drink. This means confining the hens and feeding them properly compounded and very scrupulously clean rations. In this way the demand for guaranteed eggs may be met and cultivated, leading to an increase in the consumption of eggs.

Mr. Benson also proceeded to give suggestions for success in selling, pointing out the prime importance of attractive appearance backed by uniform quality. The intrinsic value of eggs as a food was referred to, as was the wonderful power of advertising, and conveniently packages—cartons, for instance, were referred to as was the great opportunity to increase the value of eggs through the benefit at stake if all concerned.

At the conclusion of the speeches questions asked by those present were gladly answered.

The meeting has proved most interesting to those present who also feel that much information given to them has been brought to light.

Riverside Eliminated by Peterboro In Ontario Softball Play-Downs

Harry Smith and Jack Trenton champions in the local softball league have finished the season after dropping the second game of the series to the Peterboro Sugar Bowls in the Lift Lock City yesterday.

After leading 4-0 in the fourth by gairymen the latter failed to drop the decision 15-11.

Manager Smith started Leo Coughlin on the mound where he held the northern lads for four innings when he faltered letting Ernie Chambers replaced Coughlin in the fifth but after two innings was taken out in favor of Langdon.

Roy Smith, the dairymen's first baseman, his one of the nicest boners off Sturgeon, the Sugar Bowl's south paw, that the Peterboro fans have witnessed this season.

The Riversides have come out on top after a most gruelling test. It took five games, to oust Wooler in the Trenton play-off and four hard games to stop the Delaney Bear Cats of Belleville, but dropped two to the Northern lads. Good luck, Peterboro and hats off to the Riverside Dairy team of Trenton.

FAIR WAGES ARE SOUGHT

Trades And Labor Congress Tackles Knotty Problem At Parley

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 19.—Swinging into its full stride, the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada early today heard further reports from committees on the many of the numerous resolutions which still await its decision.

Fair wages rules and regulations occupied attention of the delegates with several of them urging the Government to enact Legislation prohibiting contractors spending the fair wage resolutions and making them applicable in all cases where money grants or subsidies are accorded.

Before the day is over the convention is expected to tackle the knotty problem of fixing fair wages and working conditions, and is practically certain to adopt resolutions urging the government to confine working hours to 30 per week. The six-hour day and five-day week has previously been endorsed by the Congress as a means of increasing employment.

Quebec delegates particularly are anxious to have the Congress press the Government for the eight-hour law for industrial and hotel employees in that province, many of them claiming such employers are sometimes forced to work 12 and 14 hours per day.

The convention will, it is expected, ask the Government to make the 48-hour week applicable to all public works, with no reduction of wages for workers. One resolution which may be reached today goes so far as urging the convention to "go on record as favoring the reduction to 30 per week with a minimum of $25 per week, and time and a half labor and a minimum of 75 cents per hour for female labor."

APPOINT PARKER TO SENIOR POST

Judge Parker, Native of Stirling, Well Known In District

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—(CP)—Three judicial appointments were announced Monday by Hon. Hugh Guthrie Minister of Justice. Norman John Macdonnell, K.C., of Toronto, has been appointed to the Court of Appeal for Ontario. Judge Duncan Parker is promoted to be senior county court judge for the county of Prince Edward, Ont, Ian McLean Macdonnell, K.C., of Toronto, succeeds Judge Parker as judge of the County of York.

Judge James Parker was appointed junior judge for the County of York.

Judge James Parker was born in Stirling and is a brother of William Parker, local manager of the Royal Bank.

DAM GIVES WAY

Mexico City, Sept. 19 (AP) — More than 50,000 acres of cultivated land north of Ciudad Victoria were under water today as a dam gave way under the force of floods resulting from Friday's storms.

The number of dead grew to 126 as stream gauges and relief workers recovered more bodies in San Luis Potosi and Tamaulipas. Sugar plantations and factories in the flooded zone were destroyed.

ARCHBISHOP O'BRIEN CONFIRMS LARGE CLASS AT MARMORA

Marmora.—On September 13th His Excellency Right Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Archbishop of Kingston, held a Confirmation service at the Sacred Heart Church, when about fifty boys and girls were confirmed their sponsors also in attendance. The procession was very impressive as it wended its way from the Separate school to the church.

Prior to the laying on of hands the children were examined in their Catechism by the Archbishop. His address to the candidates was very uplifting and the Diocesan Synod for the year was also listened to with much interest.

Also in attendance were Rev. Dr. L. J. Byrne, of Kingston; Rev. J. V. Meagher of Madoc, and Rev. M. J. Paulk of Stirling.

The sacred edifice was exquisitely decorated with a profusion of autumn blooms.

Sponsors.—Messrs. F. N. Marolt, T. E. Neal, G. Wellman, W. R. Linn and J. Jones were in attendance Afternoon in Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Curtis visited Peterboro on Wednesday.

St. Paul's Sunday School teachers met at the Rectory on Wednesday evening for a short meeting. Edward Kettlebourgh was unanimously elected secretary-treasurer in the place of Miss Frances Crawford who is now at Queen's University.

Mrs. Jack McKuhki and two children, of Buffalo, N.Y., are spending a few days with friends.

Miss Gladys Geban is visiting in Ottawa over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanford and Mrs. D. Sanderson attended the Peterboro Exhibition on Thursday.

Mr. Desmond McGrath returned to Oshawa on Thursday after spending a few weeks at Crown Lake.

Miss Vivian Woodhouse of the Bell Telephone staff is holidaying in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. French and Connie motored to Ottawa over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Ryan of Trenton were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Henry over the week-end.

Mrs. Wm. Sanford and hotel employees in that province, many of them claiming such employers are sometimes forced to work 12 and 14 hours per day.

The convention will, it is expected, ask the Government to make the 48-hour week applicable to all public works, with no reduction of wages for workers. One resolution which may be reached today goes so far as urging the convention to "go on record as favoring the reduction to 30 per week with a minimum of $25 per week, and time and a half labor and a minimum of 75 cents per hour for female labor."

About fifty boys and girls enjoyed a delightful evening at Mosquito Bay on Thursday night to a corn and weiner roast. Lanterns were hung on the lighting line sleds pain down to the cottages. The party was arranged by Mountain View boys and friends and the Mountain View Maids acted as host and the Victoria boys' team. The jolly group formed a ring around the camp fire which illuminated the beach and sang old and modern songs. Following a boat ride on the calm waters of the Bay of Quinte, games, races and everyone was treated to weiners and buns, corn, pickles, tea and coffee. The jolly party broke up around midnight all joined in singing "Good night ladies" and "Auld Lang Syne" and "Auf Wiedersehen."

TWENTY-THREE ARE CONFIRMED AT STIRLING

Stirling, Sept. 19—Confirmation services were held at St. James' Roman Catholic Church, Stirling, on Friday morning at 11 o'clock when His Excellency, Co-adjutor Archbishop M. J. O'Brien, D.D. of Kingston administered the sacrament of confirmation on a class of twenty-three. The procession left the rectory and proceeded to the church with the following order: Cross-Vivat, Vivat Pastor Bonus. The boys who were to be confirmed followed the acolytes followed the cross girls, then the Acolytes bearing the candles and lighted tapers and then priests followed by Archbishop O'Brien. The Litany of the Holy Name Society lined the walk on either side and formed a guard of honor for His Excellency.

Before the altar beautiful with lights and clusters of flowers, Rev. D. J. Farrell, pastor celebrated Mass. Rev. Father Dan Mass the choir sang the Kyrie from St. Peter's Mass and the Gloria—"Peace Be Still, Our God Is Dwelling." Before administering the sacrament of confirmation Archbishop O'Brien spoke to the children of the benefits they received from it and exhorted them to consecrate their lives as almighty God is doing a building the first object in the life of every person, the salvation of their souls. Then sang During confirmation, "Come Holy Ghost" was sung by the choir.

The Archbishop then addressed the congregation taking as his text "If I Should Deliver All My Goods To Feed The Poor and Have Not Charity, It Profiteth Me Nothing." In his sermon the Archbishop pointed out that it is the duty put on this earth to work out our salvation and that wealth in itself is of no importance in comparison. Speaking of the suffering of all our works to God, he said, was poor condition of the world, that they will be rewarded by a good and happy death. After a brief talk on vocations and confirmation the Archbishop concluded his sermon with his blessing.

Miss Grace Pitman returned to Stirling over the week-end after she has been relieving Mr. G. Chute as organist and choir leader, United Church during the latter's illness. Stop Rheumatism At its Source Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. Uvea, a blood impurity, should be removed by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and urea remains, it changes to uric acid which in minute crystals lodges in joints or between muscles causing excruciating pains. Avoid rheumatism by keeping your kidneys in good condition. Flush them every three weeks with Dodd's Kidney Pills—for over three generations the favorite kidney tonic and remedy. Non-habit forming.

RHEUMATISM GOT HIM

80-years-old Pianist is Relieved by Kruschen

Although old age has not yet kept this man from his occupation as a pianist, rheumatism did threaten to do so recently.

"Two years ago," he writes, "I was suddenly taken with rheumatism, all down my left arm. I tried many things—all to no purpose. Then commencing with a half-a-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts every morning, and soon I felt benefit. My arm, which was painful and nearly useless,—to my astonishment is now, after a few weeks' treatment, quite better. I am more than pleased, as I am a pianist, and play/sing for matters worse. I am just entering my 80th year, and I feel in good health."—G.L.A.

The mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, neutralizing uric acid, which is the commonest cause of rheumatism. They also restore the digestive organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby preventing further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine health.

INFLATION IN U. S. MAY SPEED PROGRAM

Canada May Not Proceed Unless States Initiates

Saskatoon, Sept. 19.—(CP)—Inflation of currency in the United States, now regarded as a possibility may determine whether or not Saskatchewan will undertake a public works programme for relief purposes this winter. This was suggested in a negative way here last night by F. R. MacMillan, M.P. who said he understood that, "unless the United States initiates a public works programme is not likely."

Preparations in the United States for inflation also was indicated by Hon. Adrian Lacombe, conservative member for Saskatoon, who stated that he had heard United States had $2,000,000,000 worth of money printed now for such an eventuality.

Hon. Howard McConnell, K.C., Saskatchewan Minister of Municipal affairs also present at the meeting said in a speech later in the evening that Mr. MacMillan was "probably right" on the public works question. The provincial government had received no word from Ottawa yet as to any building programme for Saskatchewan.

SENATOR COUZENS MAKES SPECIFIC CHARGE

Judge Prevents Further Testimony Before One Man Jury Says Couzens

No Chance To Reply To Banker's " Statements Because of Judge

MORE EVIDENCE

Might Cause Bankers To Request Chance To Be Heard

Detroit, Sept. 20.—(AP)—James Couzens, Canadian-born United States Senator from Michigan, in a statement today, declared that Judge Harry B. Keidan, who sat as the recently-enclosed one-man grand jury investigating bank collapses here, had prevented him from giving further testimony before the jury on the Detroit Bankers' Company holding company for the First National Bank.

In a lengthy discussion of the activities of the Grand Jury and the possibility of a payoff to the depositors of the closed First National and the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, the Senator charged that Judge Keidan had restricted his testimony. In his second appearance before the jury in reply to bankers, who had denied the truth of statements he made in a previous appearance.

He said he had a large amount of evidence he intended to introduce but that Judge Keidan told him he felt that such a presentation would cause the bankers to again request a chance to be heard and further delay the conclusion of the Grand Jury."

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Chicago, Sept. 20 (CP)—Traction officials at a convention were told that the government had given permission to distribute windshield stickers to auto drivers on which H.E.A. would mean "no riders allowed." Hitch-hikers have become a "major problem" to transportation companies, said an official.

Chicago, Sept. 20 (CP)—If every dog has his day, so has a horse. There should be no discrimination, a judge ruled in the case of John Jackson, a peddler whose horse bit Charles Sarsenon.

A horse could have one bite, the judge held, adding he'd dismiss the whole affair if Jackson would pay Sarsone's hospital bill.

Maple, Wis., Sept. 20 (CP) The trees in the apple orchard of E. G. Doherty, Maple farmer, have their duties all mixed up. It's fall, but they're in full bloom.

Allerton, Ill., Sept. 20 (CP) — They greeted the Rev. J. T. Hendrix with a shotgun when he came home from the Methodist Conference.

It wasn't that the pastor isn't liked. In fact he was so greeted because the parishioners think highly of him. The gun was only a game with, and thereby cut down the cost of living, for the pastor's pay isn't very large.

DR. ANNIE BESANT, NOTED THEOSOPHIST, DIES IN INDIA

Suffered Fall From Which She Never Recovered

Madras, India, Sept. 20.—(CP)—Dr. Annie Besant, who was known throughout the world for her leadership in Theosophical activities, died here today. October 1st she would have been 86 years old.

The peacefulness of her last few days was in vivid contrast to the storm of her life. She was in a state of half-consciousness for some time, never speaking at length even to her most intimate friends.

Dr. Besant had no malady except old age. She was mentally and physically worn out.

In 1931 she suffered a fall from which she never recovered. On that occasion she was unconscious for 36 hours and, according to a Theosophist friend, an inner group of the order sat in a circle about her and restored her to consciousness by concentrated transference of power from themselves to her.

Many Theosophists expressed the opinion, that her last days were marred by a disappointment over Mr. Krishnamurti, a Hindu in whom Dr. Besant said at one time, the "reincarnation of Jesus" would be manifest. Subsequently Krishnamurti announced that he no longer held with the tenets of Dr Besant's religion.

Numerous of her followers said, however, that she had felt no great disappointment, and that the personal rapport between Krishnamurti and herself never waned.

In the latter part of 1922, after Krishnamurti had renounced his special claims of "mastership" which he had been made for him, he spent two months with her at Adyar. They sat for hours, day after day in silence.

Bundle of Money Found in Abandoned Car Burned Believing it Stage Money

New York, Sept. 20—A bundle of old-fashioned ten, twenty and fifty-dollar bills that had been hidden in an automobile, abandoned for more than a year, was found by four boys in a junk yard in Jersey City and burned, in the belief that it was "stage money," the police informed Tuesday.

Before setting fire to the bills, one of the boys gave a yellow $50 note to garage mechanic who was working on a car. The mechanic thanked the boy with a smile, took the bill into pieces and used it as a washer for a bolt.

After examining three $20 bills and four $10 bills which one of the boys had taken from the car, police culminated that the bundle had contained about $5,000. All of the bills were of the large size that were in circulation about five years ago. The automobile in which they had been found was a 1923 model that had been purchased a year ago by Frank DeLasso, owner of a junk yard at Bright and Centre Streets, for $4.

Mrs. Margaret Quirk of 161 Bright Street, Jersey City, brought $100 in the bills to the police yesterday and told them they were all that had been left from the bundle. Her son, Thomas, 12, and Edward, 9, she said, had brought the money to her after burning the bundle.

The two brothers with James Cosgrave, 9, of 130 Bright Street, and Anthony Grisolia, 12, of 236 Bright Street, were playing in the abandoned car standing at the edge of the junk-yard, when one of the boys found a woman's purse under the back seat. Upon opening it they found a wad of "stage" bills.

The police took the remaining bills to a bank, where it was said they were genuine and had been issued in 1923. The police were unable to trace ownership of the car, but they believed they that the money possibly had belonged to a bootlegger or gangster, who had been killed.

The Cosgrave boy was the only one to derive any benefit from the find. He took a 50-cent piece and spent it for candy while his companions were burning the bills. The remaining bills will be returned to Mrs. Quirk after the police investigation.

Trucks Hijacked on Lonely Road New Form of Racket

SEIZE TRUCKS

Men Blindfolded And Driven Aimlessly About For Hours

Monroe, Mich., Sept. 20 (AP) — Five men, crews of two Louisville-to-Chicago merchandise trucks, reported to the Sheriff's office here this morning that a dozen men, masked and armed with machine guns, had hijacked their trucks near Columbus, Ind., Monday night; and held them prisoners until 8 a.m. today, when they were dumped out from a car along a highway in Monroe county.

The men, all from Chicago, said the hijackers removed 2,000 pounds of cigarettes, tobacco and other merchandise from the two trucks, taped the eyes of their prisoners, placed them in one of the hijackers cars, and drove aimlessly from 11:30 p.m. Monday until early this morning. Then they said, they were placed in one of the trucks, driven aboard for several hours, and dumped onto the roadside, the hijackers fleeing.

One of the trucks was found near the place where the men said they were freed. The other has also been located.

The men gave their names as Michael Sorowski and Walter Lenk, drivers, and A. L. Parks, Edward Premel and Richard Beachdill, all of Chicago.

Here is Ven. Archdeacon R. H. Knowles of the Anglican diocese of Qu'Appelle, standing by the automatic telescope built in the back yard of his beautiful home in Regina, Sask. Stovepipe, old iron pipes, several blocks of wood and other easily obtained articles went into the making of the instrument. The only things shown that could not be found in any city were the eye-pieces, reflector glass and sighting tube. It works perfectly.

The Rink Situation

Lovers of ice skating and hockey in Belleville and vicinity have been considerably disturbed of late by rumors that the Arena rink would not be operated this season. Enquiry of directors of the Arena Co., elicited the fact that the company which installed the artificial ice plant has declared its intention of removing the plant at once unless the balance due of approximately $12,500 is paid, asserting that the plant can be placed in another city. Fourteen thousand dollars has been paid on the ice plant and there is approximately $12,500 due.

It is interesting to recall that the Arena building was constructed on the land purchased from the city, the purchase price of the land being $8,000—an artificial ice plant installed—the total investment in building and plant being $110,000. W. J. Hume, of Walkerville, contributed $54.00 toward the cost, of the project, other directors $15,000 and a number of citizens took stock in the company.

It is understood that the position of the Arena Co., now is that a sum of approximately $32,000 is needed to pay the $18,000 indebtedness on the plant; $18,000 secured by the bank, and accounts payable amounting to about $1,500.

Unpleasant Facts

It has been ascertained beyond the possibility of doubt that the Lindsay Company are determined to take the ice plant out of the rink unless the balance due is paid at once. It is also certain and beyond any possibility of doubt, that the directors of the Arena Company have determined that they have done as far as they care to in the financing of the rink project and invested all of their own money they can afford to, so will be obliged to see the ice plant taken out, which means that there will be no ice skating or hockey in the building this winter, or any time in the future, for that matter. This is absolute fact and the situation as it exists at present.

The Arena ice rink, one of the finest artificial ice rinks in Canada, a fine building suitable for large public gatherings, winter and summer entertainments, maked purposes, etc., erected and equipped at a cost of over $110,000, will be lost to the city of Belleville as a civic asset for lack of $30,000.

Suggestions Solicited

The rink situation as explained above is one in which every citizen of Belleville is vitally interested, and should receive the earnest consideration of all—a comparatively few of the citizens have tried to carry this project along and provide exercised and entertainment for young and old—they are not able to go any farther. It is now up to the citizens as a whole to keep or lose the rink. The Ontario Intelligencer feels that this is a question of sufficient civic importance to demand close and studious consideration at once, not wait until the rink is dismantled before taking action, and will welcome and publish the written opinions of citizens with suggestions as to a solution of the problem.

HENRY VISITS SETTLERS IN ALL DISTRICTS

Premier And Party Now In Fort Frances District

ROAD PROGRAM

Believes Depths of Depression Passed In Ontario

By FRANK FLASHETT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Fort Frances, Ont., Sept. 20.—(CP)—Premier George S. Henry arrived here today on another lap of his tour of Northwestern Ontario and began a series of meetings with local officials. Three political meetings in the constituency of Rainy River have been arranged for tonight with members of the Premier's party billed as the chief speakers. They are at Fort Frances, Rainy River and Emo.

Convinced the depths of the depression is past, the Ontario government is prepared to launch a programme of construction to absorb a considerable number of the unemployed, Mr. Henry told audiences at Arthur and Port William yesterday his present tour is designed to get first-hand information on which to base the Government's programme. While early he is not prepared to state, he stated road building operations in Northern Ontario would be speeded up at an early date.

Visited Settlers

Keenly interested in the progress of the back-to-the-land movement, Mr. Henry visited some of the settlers in the neighborhood of Port William. He said that the new settlement there was one of the bright spots in the province with some 100 families placed on the land and now backed by a ready market in the city. The Government was prepared to continue this work next year, he said, but the factors had been a great success and the new markets which had been made were possibly due to insufficient care in the selection of the settlers. On the type of man placed on the land everything depended. Only those possessing a little capital, experience and a great deal of initiative and willingness could be expected to succeed. In addition settlers should be people who wish to establish a home rather than to make money.

Noting prospects of successful land settlement existed in Northwestern Ontario, Mr. Henry declared. He was convinced there was much fertile land available and was particularly interested in opening up the area between Fort William and Nipigon. The road to this community around Dryden and if it could be extended southward and eastward it would add to the stability of the population in this part of the Province.

B. F. ACKERMAN PETERBORO, DIES

Native of Prince Edward County and of U. E. L. Parentage

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 20.—(CP)— Benjamin F. Ackerman, President of the B. F. Ackerman Bean and Company Limited, large farmers, feeds and shoe makers, died here today at the age of 83. He was born at Ackerman's Corners, Prince Edward County, Ontario. Of United Empire Loyalist parentage, his father settled in Adolphustown in Norwood at the age of 20 and then moved to Ameliasburg, to Peterborough. During the war years his firm filled large orders for the Canadian and British forces while to accommodate the trade in the United States a branch factory and warehouse was built in Regina to soon after the war.

Mr. Ackerman was also active in local church and civic affairs here. He was a member of the Wickfield Hospital Board for 12 years and also served on the Board of Education. He was Honorary President of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. and past President of the Little Lake Cemetery Board.

In 1875 he married Charlotta Frances Lumsden, who survives him along with two sons, Lt.-Col. Charles Ackerman, past president of the Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion and William C. Ackerman, as well as two daughters, all of whom live here.

He and his brother were the first to make bricks in this city, when it was broke out.

ASSEMBLING THE SEAFARER II.

Work is progressing on the assembling of Seafarer II, the new aeroplane in which Capt. The work is being done at the De Havilland airport, just outside of Toronto, Ontario. Photo, above, shows part of the aeroplane, as it was shipped atop a freight car from Montreal, being inspected by V. O. Lerich of the De Havilland Co., supervisor of the assembling operations.

CANADIAN DOLLAR AT NEW HIGH RELATIVE TO U.S. DOLLAR

Quoted First Time Since 1931 At Less Than One Percent. Discount

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(CP) — The Canadian dollar went to a new high in relation to the United States dollar in New York today before closing at the highest since September 19th, 1931, at less than one per cent. discount.

Rumors of inflation in the United States disturbed world exchanges resulting in a rise of French Francs and other gold currencies in terms of non-gold currencies.

The rise of the Canadian dollar to its highest quotation since the United Kingdom went off the gold standard in September, 1931, is attributed by experts here to fall of U.S. Currency and the rise of the price of gold.

New High For Gold

Gold in London today was quoted at 132s 4d, a new high, making a new low for the Pound Sterling which nevertheless rose in relation to the United States dollar to $4.82 or within about 1-8 cent of its gold parity. The weakening of the pound in terms of gold and its strength in terms of the United States dollar is accounted for by the continued depreciation of the United States dollar in gold.

This morning it stood at 82.94 cents as against 84.78 cents yesterday.

The Canadian dollar has been at various and considerable discount in relation to the United States dollar for two years. On Sept. 21, 1931 it stood at a discount of about one per cent. on today's basis. Two days later when the United Kingdom had left gold standard and Canada while officially still on standard in opinion of some bankers was off the discount has mounted to 10 per cent. Later the Canadian dollar went as low as 70 per cent.

Quebec, Sept. 20 (CP)—According to requests by defence counsel for delay in order, that Sir Alfred Cope British coal magnate, could come to Canada to testify, Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lafleche today adjourned until October 10 trials of 7031 persons charged with forming a price combine.

ASHCAN DERBY IS ENJOYED AT THE FAIR

Moncola, N.Y., Sept. 20 (CP) — Imagine the agonies of the entrants in the Ashcan Derby.

Twenty-eight autoists lined up their ancient automobiles yesterday for an "ashcan" race signalling the opening of the Moncola County Fair.

Just before the starting gun, the drivers were ordered to put their cars in reverse. The race was run backward!

Frank L. Carter, in a 1912 model, won. He said: "I knew I'd win. This car runs better backward than forward."

MELTING GOLD COIN ILLEGAL

Jail And Fine of $250 With Product Forfeited, Penalty

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.— (CP)— A warning to those who might be tempted to melt Canadian gold coin in order to secure the high price now prevailing for the raw metal is contained in a statement issued by the Department of Finance today. Heavy penalties await those who might be tempted to take advantage of the market in that manner. The statement, put out , as a general answer to inquiries being received from holders of gold coin, was as follows:

Canadian gold coin which is legal tender in Canada, that is to say, Canadian $10 and $5 pieces, British sovereigns and half-sovereigns, and United States $20, $10 and $5 pieces, may not be melted, broken up, or used otherwise than as currency. Section 25 of the Currency Act provides that the penalty for illegally dealing with such gold coin shall be a fine not exceeding $250 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months or both fine and imprisonment, and furthermore the articles in respect of which the offence was committed may be forfeited. Legal tender gold coin is not accepted as a deposit by the Royal Canadian mint.

HIJACKED AND HELD CAPTIVE MANY HOURS

Dozen Men Masked And Armed With Machine Guns Noted

SEIZE TRUCKS

Men Blindfolded And Driven Aimlessly About For Hours

Monroe, Mich., Sept. 20 (AP) — Five men, crews of two Louisville-to-Chicago merchandise trucks, reported to the Sheriff's office here this morning that a dozen men, masked and armed with machine guns, had hijacked their trucks near Columbus, Ind., Monday night; and held them prisoners until 8 a.m. today, when they were dumped out from a car along a highway in Monroe county.

The men, all from Chicago, said the hijackers removed 2,000 pounds of cigarettes, tobacco and other merchandise from the two trucks, taped the eyes of their prisoners, placed them in one of the hijackers cars, and drove aimlessly from 11:30 p.m. Monday until early this morning. Then they said, they were placed in one of the trucks, driven aboard for several hours, and dumped onto the roadside, the hijackers fleeing.

One of the trucks was found near the place where the men said they were freed. The other has also been located.

The men gave their names as Michael Sorowski and Walter Lenk, drivers, and A. L. Parks, Edward Premel and Richard Beachdill, all of Chicago.

OUTBREAKS OF MALARIA ADDS TO CUBA'S BURDEN

(By John F. McKnight)

Havana, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Widespread outbreaks of malaria were added today to the burden of suffering Cuba. Many towns of the island reported numerous cases of the disease, and conditions were especially bad at Cienfuegos.

This new affliction came as the government headed by President Gerardo Machado Martin was doing its utmost to hold power against the opposition of enemies at home, it and as that Opposition Movement crystallized into virtual civil war.

Various and conflicting reports came from the hill country, where guerrilla province, where soldiers, students and workmen were attempting to overthrow the government headed by Captain Juan Blas Hernandez, the "Cuban Bandino".

Life of Attorney Leading Attack on Crime Threatened by Gangsters

Oklahoma City, Sept. 20.—(AP)— The life of Joseph B. Keenan, assistant Attorney-General leading the United States drive against crime, has been threatened by Gregg (Machine Gun) Kelly, kidnapper chief, it was learned today on good authority today.

Keenan received the threat in an airmail letter from Chicago at the end of yesterday's Federal Court session in which Harvey Bailey, Albert Bates and ten other persons are on trial for the kidnapping of Charles F. Urschel, oil millionaire. Kelly, accused by the Government of having aided Bates in carrying out the Urschel abduction, and his wife are both at large.

Like another letter purported to have been written by Kelly and received by the Daily Oklahoman yesterday, the Keenan threat bore the fingerprints to identify the writer.

There was an apparently well-founded rumor here that closely guarded Federal camp that Urschel himself received a threatening letter from Kelly just before he went on the witness stand yesterday.

It was said the letters spoke of certain "ceremonies" that "are going to take place". The letters were said to boast that "Bailey and Bates will be there to watch".

It was understood further that the letters brazenly boasted that the $185,000 in Urschel ransom money which has been recovered is being held intact to organize and pay off underworld forces for carrying out the death threats.

KIWANIS CLUB FAVORS SCHEME

Report of Karnival Is Given By Chairman At Luncheon

Mr. Charles Dolan and the Orpheum Coolers were entertained as guests of entertainers at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club members Monday noon. Mr. Dolan, however, is absent from the city on a week's fishing trip, and Mr. George Pothier, manager of the Belle Theatre, explained the Orpheum's wish to provide an additional performance in the afternoon, which, invented their presence at the luncheon.

President McIntosh announced a joint meeting Monday evening, October 2nd, at the Hotel Quinte, of the Rotarian, T'y Men, and Kiwanis Clubs, at which General A. E. Ross, M.P., of Kingston, will be guest speaker, and Rev. Ben. Finkle, general manager and George Lee, manager of games, at the recent Karnival, gave preliminary reports with constructive criticisms of the week's event in the Armouries. Manager Finkle thought, with the exception of the Labor Day week end, this year, the attendance would equal that of a year ago, and he was hopeful that a greater profit would be realized, for the efforts expended.

President McIntosh spoke of a membership drive to be soon launched and the necessity of more Kiwanians in the local club. A membership of the Kinsmen Club, George Lee and Eru Pinkle was named to look into the proposition of running a series of wrestling bouts in Belleville this fall.

D. C. Macaulay reported on the trip of inspection taken to Zwick's Island, Wednesday afternoon last by members of the Club, the City Council, and the Parks Board totalling a number of leading citizens. Belleville, Mr. MacLaurin pointed out, had at present no adequate waterfront accommodation of any place he had visited in regard to same. Mr. Macaulay's artist or Toronto had pointing out that a number of fine sites were opportunity there was for making an ideal resort out of the island. There is running a ferry in the fall and winter, manual labor would be used for the work done and 90 per cent. of the costs would go for wages or the laborers employed.

With the big island now purchased on now when men needed work to back and has a greater part of the cost looked after by the Federal and Provincial governments a basis would be made, and future work carried on moderately from year to year would make the island one of the beauty spots of Ontario.

Needy Project

It was a needy project and looked at from every angle a good proposition. If the members of the club could tactfully get the consent of officials, the good will of the citizens generally, and immediately get the work under way, it was the speaker's opinion that they had done a good piece of work and accomplished much for men, unfortunately now unemployed and towards the beautification of the city.

YOUNG COUPLE ARE REMANDED

Charge of Attempting To Steal Gasoline Laid

Charged with attempting to steal gasoline from a parked truck Harry Cassell, 22, and his wife, Mary, 19, of 4 Williamson Place, Toronto, appeared before Magistrate Hicks in Wednesday's police court and were remanded in custody for one week.

Although Cassell's wife was not included in the charge of the alleged attempt to steal gasoline, she was waiting for her husband in their car near the truck when she was arrested by Constable Taylor as the officer was patrolling the beat about midnight Tuesday. The constable found Cassell near Wray's truck which had been parked for the night at the rear of Wray's furniture store. On the floor of the truck was found a three gallon empty tin can and a piece of hose about three feet in length.

Upon being questioned by Constable Taylor as to his actions, Cassell could not give a satisfactory reply and was arrested. Under the truck was found a quantity of gasoline upon which Cassell is alleged to have been while attempting to procure gasoline from the truck by tampering with the gas line. Later, he was found to syphon the gasoline from the tank, the officer interrupted him. The gasoline in the gas tank had been removed but the actual operation of syphoning into the can, started by Cassell when he was apprehended.

Following the arrest of Cassell, his wife was found asleep in the car in which they were travelling. The car had run out of gasoline on Bridge Street, West, was parked in court regarding their marriage Cassell assured the court that they had been married about two months ago in Toronto. When asked by E. C. Donnan, K.C., Crown Prosecutor who had married them and on what church, Cassell was unable to give a satisfactory answer. They are now living with friends and records are looked into. Cassell was driving his father's car at the time of his arrest and was returned from Brockville to Toronto, he said.

Wany Masters

AMATEUR STANDING OF OTTAWA IMPORT AGAIN QUESTIONED

Admits Touring With U. S. Team, But Insists Amateur Status "As Good As Hamilton or Toronto Baseball Outfits"

WALLY MASTERS TRIES REJUVENATION

By Central Press Canadian

Without making any wild prophecies of spectacular humbling of Montreal, Toronto and Hamilton machines, forecasts in fall might have to be retracted before many weeks have passed. Ottawa's football experts, whether active players or not, are more by standers, are taking a hopeful of the 1933 season carry-over from 1932, and ing the Red, White and Black somewhere near the top than to any season since the football collapse of 1927.

Interest in football has been difficult to generate in the capital of recent years, but the general autumnal game regretfully confessed, succeeds in bewildering knockouts at the hands—or feet—of the other members of the Big Four has not entirely disappeared from the Ottawa sporting public that is daily growing less enthusiastic. This will only be changed by a better showing this year.

Upon the husky shoulders of Walter Masters, erstwhile great gridiron booster for the University of Pennsylvania, has descended the awesome burden of the 1933 Ottawa football conclusion, to break the back of a mighty interfority complex that has tied players and public in knots for the past few years. Masters believes that will demonstrate at least a knowledge of the fundamentals of football.

Wally Masters has had practical football experience with Penn football trouble. All the wraith of Carnegie amongst the Quakers, including the fate of Wally and his team mate Carlsten, upon their appearance with Ottawa a year ago. Accused of professionalism because of their connections with mid-west baseball teams in the United States, Masters and Carlsten were darkened to safeguard the purity of Canadian amateur football.

But Wally liked Ottawa, he liked the team and the management. Now he is in charge of the boys he played beside and is begging, urging, into shape rapidly.

driving and cajoling them to play football in a fashion which will at least get them the respect of their somewhat scornful rivals.

Nick Bawlf Approves.

No less an authority than Nick Bawlf, coach at Cornell University and coach of Canada's 1923 Olympic track and field team, has put the stamp of approval on the Rough Riders of 1933. Nick, after attending several of the practices under the broiling sun on Ashbury College campus, where Wally took the forty or so candidates for the team to escape public notice, was not hesitant in his praises and announced that Masters' method differed little from that of Percy Haughton, Lorne Greene, who coached the greatest football team that ever wore Ottawa colors.

But already storms are in prospect for the rejuvenated Rough Riders. Eligibility of any player who was imported from Carleton Place to Ottawa Tuesday to join the team, is being questioned in some quarters, because of his activeness in Carleton Place football as captain of Michigan State team and a more than average half-back.

Able, who slops the scales at 180, does not deny having toured with a Detroit team, but he insists his amateur status was as good as any Toronto or Hamilton baseball outfit. His version of his athletic activities has so satisfied the Ottawa moguls that they are quite prepared to defend him in any A.A.U. investigation.

Except Able, no other American football player, except one on the roster of the Rough Riders this fall. Ottawa's experience with Masters and Carlsten has made the management a bit chary of signing up outside players for any possible amateur cards whither than snow.

Jimmy Hill, another Carleton Place boy, who played baseball there with Able Kilowitz, has been adroitly catching at the receiving line-up, skin around Ashbury and Lansdowne Park and looks attractive to Coach Masters, who may line him up with the team yet.

Dave Sprague, once upon a time a Hamilton protege, may be seen on the ball line. He is the tallest man on the squad by several inches. Others newcomers are: Lorne Johnson, Bud Andrews, Jack Kline and Will Patterson, who are being whipped into shape rapidly.

Jim Rice Crowned Career When Pearce Beat Phelps

Ranks as Foremost Row ing Coach in World—Leaders Coached by Rice to Many Victories

By BEN GOLDBERG
Central Press Canadian Writer

Jimmy Rice is undoubtedly one of the greatest scullers in history, says Jimmy Rice, one of the coun try's foremost rowing coaches, and the man who coached Pearce to victory in the world's professional sculling championship against Ted Phelps of England.

"He is one of the strongest men I've ever handled," declared Rice. "He is a good football player and boxer."

All his life connected with rowing, Jimmy Rice is known from coast to coast the continent over. He started his athletic career when seventeen as an amateur sculler in two years in the Canadian championship. He was later disqualified from the amateur ranks for giving water-walking exhibitions.

A more colorful figure in the world of sculling would be difficult to find. His experience as a competitor and coach have given him a knowledge of the game that few men possess. To put it in his own words, he says, "I never like of anything else. It's been my life work."

He probably know more bums and millionaires than any one in the world," he smiled.

As a professional Rice rowed against many of the best. In 1894 Rice and Jake Gaudaur defeated Eddy Durnan and Ras. Rogers at Orillia.

Jimmy Rice is a native Canadian having been raised on Hanlan's Point during his early youth. There he mingled with scullers and associated with Ned Hanlan.

His long and varied coaching activities have taken Rice to many different places.

His first coaching job was with the Toronto Rowing Club in 1893. From 1894 to 1898 he had charge of the Toronto Argonauts and then went to the Brockville Rowing Club. In 1900 he was made coach of the Detroit Boat Club.

Much of Rice's later experience was seen in several leading American universities. He began with Harvard where he stayed two years. For seventeen years he was head coach at Columbia University. Then he went to Pennsylvania University for two years and also to Havana College for the same period of time. In 1927 he returned to the Detroit Boat Club remaining there until last year.

This year Rice has been devoting most of his time coaching the Leander Boat Club. Under him, improved triumphant. They captured the Hanlan Memorial trophy emblematic of the Canadian championship. In the junior and senior 150-lb. crew and in the 160-lbs. senior singles, Leander won Canadian titles. All summer Pearce has been under Rice's guidance.

Pearce's victory crowned one of his most successful years.

Jimmy Rice's home is in New York City. He has a 24-year-old son who is 6 ft. 4½ inches tall and weighs 190 pounds. He rowed Columbia's freshman crew, but was always more interested in his studies. He is now a graduate of Columbia and is an assistant groundkeeper to the building and grounds staff of the university.

"There is very little difference between the scullers of to-day as compared with those of yesterday," said Rice. "The present day scullers are better, however."

"Yes, I think Hanlan was one of the best scullers of all time," he declared. "He was a master at work, but the sliding seat and height many scullers its fine points."

There are few men who have as many friends as Jimmy Rice in the world of sport.

WESTERN IS WEAK

By Central Press Canadian

Encouraged by progress made in the development of rugby football material un der a new system, Head Coach "Pat" Ouellette promises for another drive in the campaign, more confident than ever his Sarnia Imperials are pointed for a Dominion championship. Ouellette and his charges are not offering a pre-season championship anthem for their opponents to shout, but firmly believe they have the necessary wherewithal to make a bolder bid for titular honors than in 1933.

The Imperials marched to a senior O.R.F.U. title with a versatile attack and the most powerful forward line ever moulded together in the oil city. With a year's experience back of them under Ouellette's modern coaching methods, and the addition of some fine new material, Imperials approach the 1933 season with warranted optimism.

Gordon Pallmer, quarterback of the Western University Mustangs, is the most notable addition to Sarnia's ranks. Pallmer's selection is a product of the district. It is likely he will share punting duties with Hugh "Bummer" Stirling, Sarnia's huge booter. Lyle Bennett, Mc Kay, another western star, is one of the new candidates for outside wing. Art Mascuci, former lineman at the University of Detroit, is back again at Coach Ouellette's assistant. Mascuci did great work with Sarnia's husky, but inexperienced line last season, developing one of the best forward walls in eastern Canada football.

"Rocky" Parasca, another former University of Detroit grid star, who was kept out of the game most of last season through injury, will make another attempt to get going in Canadian football. Parasca did not measure up to the class of football expected of him last fall and has his work cut out to gain a regular job away from hosts versed in the Canadian style of play. Norm Perry, one of the best backfielders in Sarnia's O.R.F.U. lead in 1932, will be the mail, cog in the ballcarrying attack again. Jack Hayes is the quarterback choice, although several other players are to get a chance to show their wares at his position.

Faulty Kidney Action

The kidneys are the filters of your system, but many people suffer from faulty kidney action than is generally thought. It is not necessary to have pain in the region of the kidneys to have an incoordination there.

The spinal region which supplies the nerve force to the kidneys is the seat of many disturbances of easy region of the spine, hence it is very common to find trouble there, which produces disease in many forms and often in remote parts of the body.

SMOKE EATERS HAVE TROUBLE WITH ENGINE

Woodbury Heights, N.J., Sept. 20 (CP)—The volunteer "smoke-eaters" of Woodbury Heights are on the job all right but sometimes they can't find their engine.

Councilmen and the Community Improvement Association have been grumbling over the engine and now the council decided to form a new fire company.

Recently, when Chief Carrigan arrived to call a fire drill the engine was missing. A Grand Sheriff had seized it. Carrigan sounded the fire alarm—and to his amazement the missing engine dashed down the street—manned by councilmen.

HASTEN MONEY FLOW IS PLAN OF DIRECTOR

Wants It Going Out At Rate of 50 Million Month By Dec.

INCREASE STAFFS

Sufficient Funds On Hand Without Sale of Bonds For 6 Months

Washington, Sept. 20.—(CP)—A plan to hasten the flow of money into the United States farm belt so as to get it moving at the rate of more than $50,000,000 a month by December stood revealed today by Henry Morgenthau Jr., governor of the farm credit administration. His plan contemplates putting 400,000,000 into the farm belt through farm mortgage loans in the next six months. He called for greater liberality in appraising farm lands, responding to recent criticism by legislators in farm areas and spokesmen for farm organizations that the $3,200,000,000 farm relief and refinancing programme was lagging because of low valuations and delays in disposing of applications.

Morgenthau's call for greater speed in administration was also made in a message to officials and employes of the 12 Federal farm banks, and more than 4,000 farm loans associations.

He told them to increase their staffs in order to keep pace with the flow of applications from distressed farmers. These are pouring in at the rate of 1,000 a day, and final action on 185,000 applications is pending.

He estimated that the applications for loans amounted to about $800,000,000 and that two-thirds of the sum Land Banks have outstanding is needed.

The Mortgage Act, passed in May, authorized Morgenthau to issue $2,000,000,000 in bonds in addition to creating a special loan fund of $200,000,000 to relieve facing foreclosure.

No Bonds For Sale

No bonds will be issued for public sale during the next six months, Morgenthau said, as there were sufficient funds on hand to meet needs for coming months. Of $400,000,000 available, $50,000,000 is represented by funds raised by Land Banks and another $150,000,000, an advance from the reconstruction Corporation, in addition to the $200,000,000 special fund.

The staff of the Federal Farm Loan Banks has been increased from about 300 to more than 2,000 and in all 4,000 will be employed.

During June and July loans were made at the rate of $10,000,000 a month, $3,000,000 monthly but activity has been stepped up and Governor Morgenthau estimated that $14,000,000 in loans would be made compared with $27,000,000 for the entire year of 1932.

WATER IS NOT AT LOW LEVEL

Shoals Have Not Appeared Near Harbor Lighthouse

Even though the level of water in the river and harbor appears to be lower at present than for years, it will likely be some months yet before it approaches the lowest mark recorded in the past 50 years ago, according to waterfront men, who keep accurate track of the ebb and flow.

"When you see the shoals coming out around the base of the old lighthouse in the bay," stated Mr. Jack Roblin, old time resident, "then you know that the water level is low. That happens every once in a while, but it is not very often so yet to go before you'll see it," he stated.

He is well known among residents of the water in the district because of his maximum height every few years. From then on the water gradually recedes to its low level for the same period. Next year will probably see the lowest mark.

"The water isn't so low now," declared Jack Roblin, "I can remember when a dozen years or so when you could walk across the bay from where the lower bridge and not get your feet wet."

Trenton Council Appoints Clarence Orser as Engineer

Succeeds Late Gales Coleman In Fire Department

Trenton, Sept. 20.—(Special)—Clarence Orser has been made chief engineer of the Trenton Fire Department to succeed the late Gales T. Coleman, who died about three weeks ago. This was the decision of the Trenton Town Council at a meeting held in the town hall last evening.

Mr. Orser is well-qualified to handle his new duties as he has been a member of the local fire brigade for the past twenty-one years, ten of which he has assisted chief engineer. Mr. Orser's successor as assistant, will be elected at an early date, by members of the fire department.

Mathew T. Greaney

A well known and highly respected citizen of this town since childhood, passed away Monday at his late residence here, in the person of Mathew Thomas Greaney. The deceased was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Greaney and was born in Smithfield 77 years ago. Mr. Greaney had been ill for a number of months, and two weeks ago a more serious illness developed which was resulted in his death Monday last. His wife, previous to marriage, Miss Annie Quinlivan of Watertown, predeceased 16 years ago.

The late Mr. Greaney was long associated with the lumbering industry of Trenton and district. For a number of years he was first employed with the Gilmour Co. of this town and later with Gilmour and Fortune and the Trenton Cooperage Mill. It was only a few years ago he retired from the business activities of that industry. He was at one time Mayor of the town of Trenton and played in the Trenton band during the years long since passed ago; his love for music he ever retained.

Mr. Greaney was a member of St. Peter-in-Chains' Church and was held in high esteem by the whole community. To those left to mourn his loss is extended the sympathy of friends and neighbors and fortunately there are many here and throughout the district.

Surviving are, a daughter, Mrs. T. P. Coleman, and one son, Alfred, both of this town; and two sisters, Mrs. Harry Griswold and Mrs. Mary Krane, also of Trenton. A son, William, predeceased his father in 1926.

Late Mrs. Hubert Hodgson

Following an illness of several months' duration, Mrs. Pearl Hodgson, beloved wife of Hubert J. Hodgson, retired grain merchant of this town, passed away Sunday last in the Belleville General Hospital. The deceased who previous to marriage was Miss Pearl Conlin, was born in Murray Township, Northumberland County, 72 years ago, and had resided in this community the past 25 years. She was a member of St. George's Church and a lady of many friendly calls and a large circle of friends. To those bereaved in her passing goes the sympathy of friends and neighbors here.

Surviving immediately are the husband; one brother, Arthur, a resident of Colorado, and one sister, Adelaide; and five sisters, Mrs. Arthur Sutton, of Millbrook; Mrs. William Sutton, of this town; Mrs. May Francis of Windsor; and Mrs. Dunlop and Mrs. Remington residing in the United States.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon from her late residence, McLellan Ave., with many friends and neighbors in attendance. The Rev. F. A. Smith, rector of St. George's Church, conducted the service at the home and at the graveside in St. George's cemetery.

Acting as bearers were: Messrs. Ralph Dafoe, A. Dafoe, A. Couch, E. Paul, M. Burtt and J. Hearns.

HERNANDEZ IS BEING CHASED

President of Cuba States He Is Ready To Resign

(By John P McKnight)

Havana, Sept. 20.—(AP)— A mixed army corps of soldiers, guards and workmen tracked the rebellious Juan Blas Hernandez in the rugged Guaniguanico mountains today, while at home the scenes were set for another political upheaval.

Elpidio Mendoza, a doughty campaigner against dictators, was once more near Las Cesuas, in Camagney province, with a force of 500 men. He is a firm ally in the conviction that President Ramon Grau San Martin should resign.

On their trail were 600 soldiers, machine guns, artillery and bombers, and armed with 12 machine guns, a group of students and laborers.

There were many rumors about the government's plans that 2,000 troopers surrounded the rebels near Pinar del Rio, and that 5,000 more had said soldiers and rebels exchanged shots near Trinidad, in Las Villas province here of. "The Cuban Sandino" agreed that he will not surrender.

At Morron, in Northwestern Camagney Province Town which the rebels captured, the government was pushing on into the hill, the police force was dispersed by soldiers and imprisoned as staunch supporters of the rebel leader.

On the Havana Front a less dramatic episode was being enacted in which the President asked Hernandez, 5,000 hearers as a "duel to the death", in which his followers were "sworn to maintain the free country of which our liberators dreamed."

He said his resignation was in the hands of his supporting factions and that he would abide by their decision.

The student directory, his main civilian supporters, were in permanent session in the Hotel Nacional, and although they had taken no action, it was reliably learned they would support the resignation.

There were unconfirmed rumors of revolutionary activities in provinces in Santa Clara and Oriente provinces, which, with Camagney, form the eastern half of Cuba.

COTTON MEN WANT PARLEY ON SITUATION

Believe Inflation Only Means To Help Farmers Quickly

VESTED AUTHORITY

Delegation Unable To See Either President or Wallace

Washington, Sept. 20.—(CP)—A call for a nation wide conference of U.S. Agricultural leading, in event the administration fails to act promptly toward increasing farm prices by currency inflation has been authorized by a delegation from nine cotton States here" to urge adoption of some programme to help the farmer quickly.

The delegates held a lengthy session that extended to last night after failure to see President Roosevelt because of illness and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace because of a previous appointment. Senator Smith of South Carolina also was faced with authority to call the general conference.

A letter to President Roosevelt urging him to take immediate steps calling for inflation, removal of the cotton processing tax and minimum prices of 30 cents a pound for cotton and $30 a ton for cotton seed also was approved by the delegation.

The delegation was unable to agree on a resolution calling upon the Governors of the cotton States to suspend sale of cotton and cotton seed until prices of 30 cents a pound and $25 per ton.

Unable to see President or Secretary Wallace yesterday, the delegation met with Rexford G. Tugwell, the farm administrator supervising the farm programme. Peek, after listening to the proposals, declared, "if you kill the processing tax you kill the heart of the farm relief. It is the only source of revenue for this purpose."

As to inflation, he said, "the President speaks only himself."

Peek invited members of the House and Senate Agricultural Committees to confer with the farm administration in working out plans for raising prices.

BERNT BALCHEN SAFE LOCATION UNCERTAIN

Started for Hospital for Operation for Operation

Cape Town, Union of South Africa, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Wireless phone messages from pilot Bernt Balchen, aillayed anxiety for his safety today, but his whereabouts remained as much a mystery as his disappearance, when he started for a hospital for an appendicitis operation.

Surgeons were ready to operate on the famous flier at the Volks hospital, where he telephoned his fellow polithal pilot Gerhart Willhelm he was going but where he did not arrive. He was booked for the appendectomy by Dr. Ernest Gilchrist, but requiries revealed, that he had neither been at the hospital nor returned to his ship—the Wyatt Earp.

The Swedish flier Bernt Balchen consulted after leaving the ship yesterday, also said, he received a telephone call at Kimberley, in which Balchen said he would be back for the operation in good time.

Police, menawhile, aided officers and crew of the Wyatt Earp) but failed to find any trace of him. Hubert said he was not worried.

The flier left the ship on which he arrived with air Hubert Wilkins for the Lincoln Ellsworth expedition in Walvis Bay and Windhoek started for the hospital in a taxi.

PAYS BOUNTY ON CROWS' FEET

A vigorous drive against crows, launched by C. S. Bailey, Camrose, Alberta, theatre owner, has wound up the season with the death certificates of 2,500 of the feathered marauders. Photo shows a mountain of crows' feet (not an advertisement for tonic) gathered at the end of the summer's haul. Mr. Bailey paid 15 cents a pair for these trophies and they came in by hundreds. He has conducted these campaigns for three years. Bounty paid during the campaign being 1930, when 2,900 pairs of feet were collected. Mr. Bailey hopes other towns in Western Canada will follow his example.

DEATH BY OWN NEGLIGENCE IS VERDICT OF JURY

Find Car Driven By E. H. Jamieson On Wrong Side of Road, Travelling Fast

"We, the jury empanelled, find that Everett H. Jamieson died at the Belleville General Hospital on September 13th last, as a result of an accident on the Madoc highway, north of Foxboro, the night previous to his death. We also find that death was accidental, caused by his own negligence."

Such was the verdict returned by the Deseronto jury which inquired into the death of Everett H. Jamieson, who died following a collision between a car driven by him and a truck driven by Frank Howes, of Toronto, near Foxboro on September 11th. last.

The inquest was presided over by Dr. W. Boyes at the police court last evening; Sergeant Arthur Harman presented the jury, while K. C. Donnan, K.C., County Crown Attorney, conducted the investigation.

Dr. E. F. Ward, attending physician at the time of the accident, told the jury of being called to the scene at 9 p.m. on September 11th, and finding Jamieson in an unconscious condition alongside his overturned car. He was taken into the Madoc highway, about one mile north of Foxboro. He stated that moving the injured man to a nearby house, later summoning the ambulance from Belleville and taking to the Belleville General Hospital. Dr. R. Stokes, of this city, told of attending the man about 10 p.m. the same night. He was suffering from a fractured skull, concussion of the brain, and was unconscious. He died approximately 18 hours after the accident. He did not regain consciousness.

Helen Kirsa, local restaurun proprietor, identified the deceased.

Witness Before Accident

Helen Lucas, residing at 310 Front Street, occupant of the car with Jamieson, told of meeting Mr. Jamieson and driving together from Toronto. She said she warned Jamieson regarding his driving on the wrong side of the road just previous to the accident. When asked if Jamieson took any action concerning the witness told the court that everything had happened so quickly that she did not at a loss to remember exactly what actually occurred. She stated that coming up a sprinkling car or truck and it seemed directly in front of them. She was thrown clear and recovered her face with her hands when the first impact occurred. The next thing she remembered was seeing Jamieson slumped over the wheel and then helping him to get out of the car into the ditch. She thought his condition normal and that he had been travelling at a fairly moderate rate of speed.

Frank Howes, Toronto, driver of the truck with which the Jamieson car collided, told of seeing a motor vehicle approaching in the opposite direction, he was travelling south, at a rapid rate of speed. He was on the car was well over on the wrong side of the road. Mr. Howes said he then swung his truck and turning to the scene of accident. He found Jamieson entangled in a wire fence. His truck was travelling at about 15 or 17 miles an hour at the time of the collision. Arthur Stone, a passenger in the truck, corroborated this evidence.

Jamieson Well Experienced

Mr. and Mrs. David Phillips of Madoc, were also on the scene, and told the court of assisting in the extraction of Jamieson from the wire fence. Traffic Officer B. T. Byles, who investigated, produced photographs of the scene of the accident and of the wrecked automobiles. He stated that the left side of the car had been torn away. The officer found that no blame could be attached to the truck driver. Inspect was well on the right hand side of the road. The Jamieson car travelled 214 feet after the collision, while the truck was stopped in less than 75 feet. He was of the opinion that the Jamieson car was at least travelling on the wrong side of the road and travelling, he thought, at a rapid rate of speed.

The jury was out for only nine minutes returned with their verdict which exonerated Mr. Howes from any blame.

FRUIT SOCIAL WELL ATTENDED

"King Edward" Veteran Pumper of Halifax Fire Brigade Again on Job

HALIFAX, Sept. 19.—(CP)— That's one million dollar fire fo bring him out of retirement, but old "King Edward" had the smell of smoke in his nostrils again today.

"King Edward" is the veteran of the Halifax Fire Department —an old-fashioned steam pumper—and he has been out of service 25 years. Smoke belching thickly from his sturdy chimney, he was rushed by side to fires behind three prancing horses. And very few fires he missed in that span of years.

Yesterday he left the Station House in different fashion. Pier No. 9 was burning; a million dollars worth of property at stake. Drivers were calling for every available piece of fire fighting equipment. "King Edward" was one. House, Ed was hitched ignominously behind a truck and headed for the conflagration.

After hours of continuous work, the old pumper was still going strong. Above the cracks of the flames, the hiss of the water and the firemen's shouts, could be heard the ancient pumper's deep-throated slugging. Old King Edward was back on the job.

Belleville Presbyterial Holds 8th Annual Meeting at Stirling

Rev. Robert Hall Elected Chairman of Presbytery

Stirling—The eighth annual meeting of the Belleville Presbytery of the Hamilton Synod of Canada was held in the auditorium of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Tuesday, September 19, 1933.

The meeting consisted of two sessions, the morning assembly meeting at 9.30 and being concluded at 11.30 while the afternoon session convened at 2 p.m., and did not disperse until 5.30 p.m. At the conclusion of the morning session a chicken dinner was served in the basement of the church by the ladies of St. Paul's United Church when some one hundred and thirty guests partook of a delicious repast.

The morning session was opened promptly at 9.30 by the roll call which revealed an attendance of sixty-two clergymen and sixty-eight laymen.

The reception of twelve new ministers into the Presbytery was the first feature of the assembly with the retiring chairman, Rev. T. H. J. Anderson of Newburgh, Ont., delivering a hearty address of welcome to his new confreres.

Rev. Dr. James Semple, of Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, on behalf of the newly-received ministers replied thereto in a fine, Anderson's words of welcome.

Officers Elected

The election of officers for the ensuing year was held and Rev. Robert Hall, B.A., B.D., of John Street United Church, Belleville, was elected Chairman. Rev. James E. Beckel of the Bay Circuit, Napanee, Ont., was elected Secretary-treasurer of Secretary, while Mr. Harold Wilson, B.A., of Belleville, elected Treasurer for the ninth term, a most testimony of his splendid and faithful discharge of duty in this capacity.

Professor Shaw

Professor J. M. Shaw of Queen's University, Kingston, was the guest speaker of the first session. Professor Shaw is the new committee appointed by five leading Protestant churches of the United States to study the effectiveness of Protestant foreign missionary effort. He gave an address on "Missionary Methods" in which he outlined the scope of the investigation in a most interesting manner and shed a good deal of light upon the progress of Protestant missionary effort in the Orient. At this the first session adjourned for dinner.

The meeting was, resumed again at 2 o'clock when Rev. Dr. Scott of Coborne of Toronto delivered a rousing, and inspiring address upon "The Presbyterian John Maintenance Fund" with which he occupied fifty minutes. In the latter, the speaker touched upon prison reform, a subject of paramount importance at the present time. Citing instances of unjust sentences imposed upon first offenders and adopted on mere boys for petty thefts, he stirred his hearers to a realization of the need for redress of these wrongs. Continuing his speech, Dr. Coborne advocated the classifying of our six Ontario prisons in such a way that the hardened criminal and the first offender might never be allowed to mingle together as is often the case now, and went on to say that a great opportunity for reformation existed out for the same offense should exist.

At the conclusion of Dr. Coborne's address, the report of the various committees were given from which a lengthy discussion arose out of which developed some new number of excellent resolutions for the year were evolved and adopted by the assembly. The meeting then adjourned at 5.30 p.m.

Attend Rally

A number of members of the Holy Name Society accompanied by their families, journeyed to Kingston on Sunday where the former took part in the third annual diocesan Holy Name rally.

Mrs. Bain and daughter Joan of Toronto, are guests this week of the former's sister, Mrs. (Dr.) E. A. Carleton.

Dr. and Mrs. Smylie and Miss Florence Gallagher of Toronto were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Belshaw.

Mrs. Wm. Waller has returned home after spending the past week visiting relatives in Norwood.

Mrs. Caleb Bateman is paying a visit this week to her daughter, Miss Margaret Bateman of Montreal.

Miss Pearl Belshaw has assumed the duties of stenographer in the Stirling Creamery to replace Miss Lulu Bailey, bride-elect.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert McGregor moved to Peterboro on Tuesday. They were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Marion, who will attend Peterboro Normal School.

Mrs. H. J. Wood was a Kingston visitor on Sunday.

Miss Gertrude, B.A., who has spent the past two months vacationing at Oak Lake, left on Sunday for Lockport, N.Y., enroute to New York City, where she will enter Columbia Hospital early in October. Miss Bailey will take a post-graduate course in obstetrics.

Mrs. Harold Fairfield, Toronto who has recently returned from a trip abroad, is visiting for Sunday evening and during her stay here is the guest of Miss Gladys Joblin.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Delnard were Toronto visitors on Monday.

Messrs. Ted Hildebrandt, Harry Lowden and Lloyd Bateman of Lawrence Manuro returned on Sunday from a visit to the Century of Progress Fair, Chicago.

Rev. J. A. Koffend, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, accompanied by Mr. Arthur Duncan motored to Sunbury, Ont., on Monday.

The members of the Anglican Young People's Association of St. John's Anglican Church met at Mrs. Ralph Bateman's home on Friday evening from whence they hiked to Mr. Sam Dafoe's farm, Oak Hill, where an enjoyable corn roast was held. All report a good time.

St. Paul's Y. P. S.

St. Paul's Y.P.S. met in the church auditorium on Monday evening with an attendance of eighty-six. The meeting under the direction of the local department opened with President Harry Hulin in the chair, singing the Y.P.S. hymn by Wm. Pitchett and the Scripture lesson read by John Munro followed by prayer by Fred Joblin, vice-president of the Y.P.S. Following the business session. A hearty welcome home was accorded to Miss Ruth Bateman who has been absent for some time in charge of a parish in Corning, Saskatchewan. Miss Joblin, thought taken quite by surprise, replied in a few words and extended a welcome to all.

Rowland gave a most interesting address on the "Call of Africa" and a "Layolist" in which he traced all government developments from the British occupation of Lindia up until the present day.

A splendid illustrative feature of the evening was the presentation of electric fireplaces by the Rev. E. W. Rowland to Mr. and Mrs. Russell Pilman (nee Louise Parnell) and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wells (nee Martha Pilman) to which the newlyweds responded. A contest was next staged by Lloyd Rowland and the meeting was brought to a close with the announcing of the Mizpah Benediction.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS

John Oxenham's book of verse contains a color sketch of a lost soul "sitting in the rim of light—repenting of his sin." That may very well express the position of nations today oppressed by a pessimistic mood of introspection. The question is asked, does science enhance the happiness of our race? It is a knotty problem. Probably no two words are more loosely used or more diversely interpreted than the terms progress and science. We owe to the scientific method an immense debt. This will be readily acknowledged. It has enlarged our horizons. Many of the former secrets of nature have been placed at our behest. By application of mind to nature, the function of art, man has multiplied his power a hundredfold. This is true in a mechanical sense. The Victorian era of mechanical inventions and productivity has been actually surpassed by the mass production of the twentieth century, with ramifications of skill and of increased ingenuity outspread into every department of human life and activity. We are in touch with a vaster cycle of facts. We respond to a far more intricate complex of stimulating influences. Our means of travel and of converse are worldwide. Were the phone, telegraph and wireless suddenly wrenched from our grasp, civilization would grope confusedly in glum embarrassment. Moreover, it is surely permissible to think of these enormous benefits the scientific method has conferred upon our estate by way of improved conveniences in the household, in the matter of better sanitation, in the matter of hygiene, in favor of health, in the checking of dangerous diseases, and in the introduction of acknowledged benefits that mark a very broad gap between the age in which we live and those conditions under which folk grubbed along somehow in the medieval period, called the Dark Ages.

All is true and we would do well to remember it. We have today a greater sense of the significance of liberty, equality, and fraternity than obtained in any previous period of known history. Yet, with it all somehow it has come to pass that we are made to feel like ants upon the rind of an orange, and are daunted by the vast tyranny of things and tend to sink in sullen submissiveness to a form of pessimism that divides its efforts between sodden fatalism and fierce revolt. Once it was confidently predicted that as toil was diminished, intellectual effort would have a bitter incentive into life and zest. Today the chance of excellence in the field of intellectual plaint is heard that with intellectual activity at its zenith, the lot of toil has become unbearable. Is it not distressful that some swarthier and more primitive race has not ever, by now, about loudest for a new earth declare the social system intolerable, in spite of the fact that their frenzied endeavors would give human society an incurable wound.—Montreal Gazette.

A ROYAL PICKAX

Sceptres and swords are familiar symbols of royal authority. But the pickax in the hands of Mohammed Nadir Shah Ghazi, King of Afghanistan, became more than a sign of royal authority when he wielded it with thousands of volunteer workers in the preparation of the site for the new royal military academy.

Sirdars and Ministers of State joined him and toiled side by side with the humblest workers. The energy and enthusiasm of the vast army of volunteers, relates a Kabul correspondent of the Calcutta Statesman, completed in two weeks a task that would ordinarily have taken months.

The old academy, which was erected at the suggestion of the present King during the reign of the late Amir Habibullah Khan, has proved inadequate and for the new building a plot of sixty acres, south and west of the historic Bala Hissar, was chosen.

It was here, below the sheltering citadel, that Kabul stood for a long time. But the place had been neglected and until lately was a wilderness of earth mounds and debris. An immense effort was needed to start the new work, but the people of Kabul, and its environs, including the Army, volunteered their co-operation, and the King at the very start set an active example to a crowd of 20,000 willing workers. Enlivened by the presence of military bands, and encouraged by the sight of Sirdars and Ministers working together with laborers, the huge crowd plied shovel and pickax with national enthusiasm. Shortly afterward they were followed by smaller armies of officials, students, soldiers and villagers keen to share what had become a festival of the State.

In a short space of time a large area of sixty acres was leveled, 12,000,000 cubic feet of earth having been dug up and distributed.

We are often prophets to others, only because we are our own historians.—Mad. Swetchine.

Experience is the common schoolhouse of fools and ill men. Men of wit and honesty are otherwise instructed.—Erasmus.

I take the best definition of exercise to be labor without weariness.—Johnson.

TRIUMPHANT MOSS

The shadow here
Lies all the day.
No flowers bloom,
No grasses stray;
But nature hides
All lack, all dearth
And with green moss
Clothes barren earth.

How velvet-soft,
How emerald-green,
This brave moss thrusts
Its web between
The straining roots
Of lofty trees!
How well it learns
Growth's mysteries!

Past barriers
No briar dare cross.
Still creeps the strong
Triumphant moss!

JIM CURRAN, Editor and publisher of the Sault, Star, was a visitor in Belleville on Monday. Jim has a distinction above Ontario editors. While other scribes are concerned with the task of keeping the wolf from the door Editor Jim Curran resolutely welcomed the wolf at his front door, also his back door, and has so capitalized on the wolf and his friendly nature, or otherwise, that the Sault Star's editorial columns of Front Page publicity free of charge all over the world. Result, Sault Ste. Marie is overrun with tourists to see the wolf that Editor Curran has tamed. And the tourists spend much money in the Sault with Jim Curran's advertisers, so the wolf stories are all to the good. Jim's colleagues in Toronto scribes as to whether a wolf will attack a man or not has never been settled. Jim says no, Toronto scribes say yes, so Jim has challenged Toronto to come out into the wilds, walk fearlessly up to the first wolf or wolves they meet, and say Howdy. Jim says he will guarantee the wolves will not bite—but the Toronto scribes are doubtful of the efficacy of Jim's guarantee, and are of the opinion that if they bite and the wolves bite, they may have some difficulty collecting themselves in sufficiently presentable form to show Jim Curran that he is all wet on the wolf question. The contest as well be called a draw between Jim and the Toronto scribes, with the wolf as arbitrator in case of a clash later.

EMPLOYING A LANDSCAPE ARTIST to report on the possibilities of Zwick's Island as a public park is a good business-like way to save the same specialist report also on the river-side park project, otherwise known as boulevard or embankment. Two reports for the price of one. He might also with profit be asked to look over Victoria Park and suggest improvements. This popular park is used almost entirely by citizens who do not own motorcars and have to walk to the water front, and as such, is entitled to more attention possibly than more distant projects.

WHEN WAS THE WATERWORKS STANDPIPE CLEANED OUT LAST? asks a member of the Sidelight Family. Question referred to the waterworks department with a call for Manager Austin. In asmuch as the standpipe is open to the winds and wings of heaven, and carries a supply of water which finds its way into the tea cups and coffee pots of the citizens, this is rather an important question. We are informed that when the standpipe was cleaned out last there was abundant proof that frequent and regular cleaning out would be in the public interest.

France Goes Bill Collecting

And May Succeed In Gaining a Close Rapprochement With Russia If Not Kopecks

By PAUL A. SHINEMAN
Central Press Canadian Writer

France is going bill collecting.

Now it is the shadows of the Russian czars that may rise to hurt at the French the epithet "Uncle Shylock" which heretofore has been reserved for Uncle Sam. For it is an open secret that France would like enormously to collect that tidy little sum of 20,000,000,000 pre-war gold francs (approximately $4,000,000,000) which her citizens loaned to Czarist Russia before anybody had dreamed of Communism.

With the London economic conference buried in the potter's field and the vexatious problem of her own national debt temporarily forgotten, the French Republic is launching the delicate subject through one of her former premiers, the disarming and good natured Edouard Herriot.

M. Herriot, leader of the French radical Socialist party has gone to Moscow. The fact that he holds no government position at the moment and went on a purely unofficial visit, gave the statesman-scholar free rein to discuss the most delicate questions.

The "ticklish" aspect of any Franco-Russian debt conversations would lie in the necessity for France to reconcile her apparently diverse current views as a debtor nation and as a creditor nation. Here is the nub of the issue in these same $3,862,650,000 in war debts.

Thanks is Germany

But, whether or not France collects a single kopeck of the money loaned the czarist empire, the visit of M. Herriot will do much to forge an extravagance in railroad fares. Passenger cruise school teachers certainly returns from Moscow with the assurances of an open door policy from Franco-Russian rapprochement. For this he may thank Adolf-Hitler and the rising tide of Hitlerism in Germany.

France could not be better represented in the Soviet capital than by Edouard Herriot. It was this friend of Russia who brought about French recognition of the Soviet Union in 1924 when he succeeded Raymond Poincare as premier. True, it was Herriot's plea later that M. Herriot was referring ironically to the "Soviet Paradise" and branding it as the two-faced friend of both German militarism and Italian fascism. Communism are persistently frank in their affections and rarely are held strictly accountable for their words of front over a period of six years.

Much Experience

M. Herriot carried with him to Moscow considerable experience in each of the fields which his mission touches. In his support international amity he has the backing of his radical socialist or "illiberal" party which was formed some ten years ago as an organization trying to unite the democratic parties of Europe and even of the entire world. On the other hand, Herriot's familiarity with the problem of international debts was greatly increased by his recent mission to Washington to discuss war debts. His uncompromising attitude regarding the payment of such debts did not please the French, but stands him in good stead in tackling a similar problem in Moscow.

Add to this the prestige which M. Herriot commands as a former premier of his country and you have all the qualities of a model unofficial envoy. Indeed, the clerking of the ex-premier to the status of extraordinary ambassador at the time of the recognition of the present Roosevelt last April was not appealing to his superior, Premier Daladier.

The strange combination of scholar and politician that one finds so often among French statesmen is again present in Edouard Herriot. After an early youth passed among the Greek and Latin classics, the young man signalized his military service by writing a novel, "Philo and the Jew" at the age of 25 and having it crowned by the French Academy. He is known as a man of letters, art connoisseur, and book collector.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Leroy Shooster and Shorty Judge was standing outside the Kristal Kandy Kitchen looking at the different kinds in the window. Pre cents each they was being fer least small amount you can buy in there, and Leroy Shooster said: Gosh, if we only had 3 cents among us we could buy 6 cents worth and whoever put the 3 cents in could get the most, according to law.

Leroy's father being a lawyer, and we all fels in our pockits and all we had was a cent apeece, prperly all knowing it without feeling, and I said, Well say, there's a idee, let's take turns going in and asking if they sell 3 cents worth, and by the time the 3rd one goes in they'll proberly be so tired saying no they'll get 6 go.

O, all rite, I'll go first, Shorty Judge said. Proberly thinking it was the least dangerous, and me and Leroy gave him our cents and he went in and came out again, saying: He said no, he's a fraud looking guy, he did.

I'll go next, Leroy Shooster said. Who did with the 3 cents, and he went in and came out again, saying: He said no, he's a fraud looking guy, he did.

And he handed me the 3 cents and I went in feeling against it, and there was a man behind the counter with pop eyes and a mustash like 2 shaving brushes, saying: Well, and what do YOU want?

Would you mind please telling me the time? I said, and the man started to set as if he was going to run out from behind the counter, and I quick went out, sucksmiting Leroy and Shorty saying, What did he say? and me saying, He wouldn't even answer.

The Kingston Penitentiary Riots

The crime of which I find Kirkland guilty is punishable with seven years imprisonment. I do not intend to give him seven years. The riot itself was not as serious as it might have been. The men were in full charge that afternoon for some length of time. The warden and staff had lost control completely. The men could have destroyed property if they will, and could have done personal violence to the warden, officers and guards. They might, I think, practically all have escaped if they had attempted, but generally speaking, no attempt was made to do any of these things as such. More than that, the leaders, or perhaps I should say the speakers, as they deny being leaders, the speakers at least restrained the men from doing any violence or injury, and so far as Kirkland is concerned, he obeyed that, and possibly gave the order himself, not by way of speech but by way of conversation. I find no evidence that Kirkland personally attempted to injure any person or damage any property. I think the witness, Earl, was mistaken as to the identity of Kirkland, and with two or three hundred men milling around, as they express it, in the dome, he might easily have been mistaken. I free Kirkland entirely from the suggestion that he had anything to do with the torch or that he injured any property or injured any person, or that he carried any weapons that afternoon. There was damage to doors, but this was done to free the men for the purposes of demonstration, and not with a desire to damage property as such. Doors were barricaded by some of the men, but this was done after shots had been fired and the announcement made that the soldiers were coming. It was an act of self-defence as the men saw it, rather than with an evil purpose. The officers and guards were ordered to move to the front to receive the shots, and this also was for self-defence or protection rather than a deliberate attempt to injure anyone. Two men, Garceau and Behan addressed the crowd, and told them not to do violence or injury to property. Buck told them that the soldiers would not hurt them if they did no violence to person or in jury to property. Jones, in substance, said he told another man to desist from breaking sewing machines. All of these things have a tendency to lessen the degree of rioting, and Kirkland's part in it, and should count in his favour as to the length of sentence.

Then to go back to the cause of the riot. This peaceful demonstration which developed into a riot, was for the purpose of emphasizing the demands of the men for redress of certain grievances which had been long and considerably debated. Many of the grievances for which this demonstration was staged have already been granted to the men, proving conclusively that any mind that those demands must have been reasonable. I do not think I need enter into them in detail as to inhuman treatment. I am satisfied that considerable brutality and the men had some reason to believe that inhuman treatment as he saw it and a number of the witnesses gave evidence of the things of which Kirkland and the men complained. Some of these have been ameliorated by certain amendments. That must be some merit in the demands of Kirkland and the men as to inhuman treatment.

There is one other thing I think I should mention. Kirkland had seen fit to elect to be tried speedily, thus avoiding the calling of a jury, which would entail a very great expense and lengthening of time in the trial. I think I may go this far, that certainly the sentence should not be a greater because of that fact.

All these things help me to modify Kirkland's sentence from seven years considerably; yet I am sure that Kirkland himself will recognize that I must give him some substantial sentence, for he was convicted of violence, and rioting cannot be permitted, as he well understood himself. I am sure. The sentence must not only be punishment, but must also be a warning to others that all such offences will be severely punished by the courts in their train. I sentence him to one year in the Kingston Penitentiary, the date of commence at the termination of his prison sentence.

Giants Win National League Pennant After Being Defeated

SENATORS LOSE

Washington Must Win Two Games To Clinch Flag

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

William Harold Terry, the sturdy young man from Memphis, who took over the management of New York Giants a year ago, when John McGraw retired, led his club back home from the west today with the National League pennant added to its baggage. Meanwhile Washington Senators still were marching time along the American League pennant trail, needing two more decisions for them or against New York yankees to clinch the other place in the World's series.

The Giants setting the National League pace yesterday, or rather had it settled for them when the Phillies knocked their last rivals, Pittsburgh Pirates, out of the running. Expecting they were "in" from the second inning on, the Giants went down to a 13-3 defeat in the hands of St. Louis Cardinals in the last game of the western tour.

But, they could afford to lose that game and all the nine others that are left on their schedule after the Pirates dropped a 3-2 decision in the second game of a doubleheader. After beating the Phils 7-1 behind Larry French's steady pitching in the opener, the Buccos fell when the Phillies put on an eighth inning rally for two runs.

The American League race tightened up meanwhile as the Senators, with a chance to clinch the pennant right in front of them, lost their second straight game to St. Louis Browns, 4-0, when Dick Coffman allowed the teams leaders only six hits. The Yankees did their part toward staying in the race by overwhelming Chicago White Sox 10-1 and 10-3.

Lead Reduced

This reduced the Senators' lead from nine to 7 1-2 games but didn't make any serious difference in the pennant race as any victories in their remaining games still will win the flag for Washington even if the Yanks take all of the nine they have left.

The Giants, who couldn't even draw a big crowd on their own home ground during the season, had a big welcoming party ahead of them at the end of their homeward journey as champions wih a parade through town to the city hall for an official greeting as the climax tomorrow morning.

Outside of the games, which had a direct bearing on the pennant races, there was little of importance in yesterday's Major League programme. Lefty Grove took place in the spotlight as he walloped his 300th game out of the season to help Philadelphia Athletics beat Detroit 9-2. Bill Werber of Boston also did some serious clouting, contributing two doubles and a triple to help the Red Sox triumph over Cleveland Indians.

Who's Who In New York - - - - Some Successful Giants

FRED FITZSIMMONS

FRED FITZSIMMONS, powerful New York pitcher, has been with that club since 1925. He was a product of Michawaka, Ind., having been born there July 28, 1901.

Fitz turned professional in 1920, joining the Muskegon, Mich., Central league club. After three seasons there the Indianapolis American associations bought him. Four years of experience in the big middle western minor brought Fred a contract from the Giants.

For years Fitzsimmons has been the mainstay of the Giants on the mound. Last season was his first poor year. He won 11 and lost 11 in 1932.

The husky right-hander is five feet 11 inches tall and weighs 185 pounds.

LEFTY O'DOUL

FRANK J. O'DOUL, 1932 National league batting champion and Giants' outfielder, was born in San Francisco, Cal., March 4, 1897.

Lefty began his career with the San Francisco Pacific Coast league team in 1917 as a pitcher. In 1919 and 1920 he was hurling for the New York Yankees. The Boston Red Sox got him on waivers in 1922 but released him to the Salt Lake Circuit team. Salt Lake converted O'Doul into an outfielder the next season.

A brief trial as a gardener for the Chicago Cubs was followed by a return to the Coast league. The Giants obtained him in 1928 and traded him to the Phils for Fred Leach. The Phils traded Lefty to Brooklyn in 1930 and in the early part of the current season he came back to the Giants in the deal which involved Sam Leslie and Watson Clark.

O'Doul weighs 190 pounds, is six feet tall and bats, throws left-handed.

GUS MANCUSO

AUGUST ROONEY MANCUSO, first string catcher of the New York Giants, was born in Galveston, Tex., Dec. 3, 1905.

Mancuso started his career with the Beaumont and Houston teams of the Texas league in 1926, but finished his first year in the East Texas circuit. The following season Gus caught for the Fort Smith Westerns, which club sold him to the Syracuse International.

Syracuse sold him to the St. Louis Cardinals. Gus was a good catcher with the Cards but they had a star in Jimmy Wilson so, in 1932, it was a break for Gus when they traded him to the Giants.

This year Gus has received much praise for the manner in which he has handled to New York pitchers. Mancuso is five feet nine and one-half inches tall, weighs 175 pounds. Bats, throws right-handed.

CURRENT SPORT

Whether there is any truth to the rumor or not that we canned say it as yet but, street talk has George Blaeholm, who pitched for the St. Cyrians juniors here last Saturday, taking a permanent residence here in the near future. The rumor started in the grandstand during Saturday's ball game, when a Trenton fan mistook Blaeholm tan let the cat out of the bag.

Blaeholm is one of the best junior hurlers we have lamped in quite some time. Blaeholm has a fair amount of speed and has a good form to his curve ball which incidentally is no mean effort. We are not attempting here to steal from Northumberland junior hurlers, when we mention Blaeholm for the simple reason there is more junior pitching material in the Trenton and Belleville today than there has been in years.

Both Ira Pitcon and Kingston Dorr are beginning to talk of provincial championship. We hope both towns realize that championships don't take it from a baseball town, but like guns to the line every times—the farther you go in the O.B.A.A. race, the tougher the competition and the more it should according to statistics, turn back fewer—so there is no time for Belleville to get complacent. Belleville will be stacked.

Last night the boxers down at the Recreation Park Pavilion served notice after spending a summer of idleness. Jon Foreman, Percy Farry put the boat militarers through a light training period following which it was announced, that Tuesday and Friday nights had been set aside for the boxers to train.

Larger and more adequate quarters will be afforded the S.E.A.C. leather pounders before the strenuous training period sets in. The club officials announced recently their intentions of staging a series of boxing bouts before the New Year. Only one date has as yet been set, however, that being Thanksgiving night, Oct. 9th. An extra special card is being arranged for that night with outside heavyweights the feature, that can be procured in Belleville. Whether Gerald Morris will defend his Central Ontario bantam title that night or not could not be learned as a return bout with Jack Swain should about fill the house to the rafters.

Up at the airport the "Foreign Legion" boxers have started fall training already under the tutelage of Bill Adams. According to Flight Lieut. Lamie Wray, who is in charge of sport at the station, they have over 40 leather slingers training for same. They are presenting their first fall card on Oct 4th when 12 high class bouts will be staged.

In order to adequately meet the increased crowds expected at these bouts this fall a large set of benches have been erected in one of the hangars. The seating capacity at previous bouts staged at the airport was anything but satisfactory, but with the new plan of seating every person present will be within a few yards of the ring. With the flourishing boxing clubs in our midst the fight loving fans of this district should reap the benefit.

ALEX Morrison...

Most shots are missed even before the backswing is started.

The player may not realize this, but a check on the performance of the average golfer will make it clear.

After gripping the club, placing his feet, looking along the intended line of play, he starts and invariably will then hold his club on the ground behind the ball for some time. The time depending on the uncertainty about the outcome of the shot.

During this seemingly harmless pause for the purpose of "concentrating", tension takes hold of nearly every muscle and joint in his body and once gripped by tension he stands little chance of executing a smooth swing.

A slight wavering of the body will stave off this tension.

How Rival Teams Compare in Pending World's Series

(By Alan Gould Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—For the first time since 1906, the American and National pennants for the "world baseball championship" both will be directed on the field by player managers.

There have been a number of player picks since then, of course, on one side of the battleground or the other but William Harold Terry of the Giants and Joseph Cronin of the Senators will be the first to combine master-minding and personal exploits in the world series since Fielder Jones led the Chicago White Sox to triumph over Frank Chance's Cubs.

The Senators expect history to repeat itself, Cronin carries the Washington banner into the championship fray, where "Bucky" Harris, then the "boy wonder" left off as the pilot of the pennant-winning Senators of 1924-25. They expect to "take" the Giants.

Great Faith In Terry

Giant rooters have faith in Terry as John McGraw's successor, for the reason that he has already achieved the supposingly "impossible" by bringing the club home in front this year after being picked to finish no better than sixth. "Memphis Bill" himself thought the club he would be handed in England in the first division and third place was the best he hoped for. But once we got the ball we could win, why we simply couldn't lose," laughed Terry, when I talked with him during the Giants' triumphal final tour of the West. "You can say we have won because we built up the greatest four-man pitching staff in either league and you would be correct. You can say we got a lot of breaks and that's right too. But the big thing to me is that every man on this club got out there, day after day, and helped his best self. We forced a lot of those breaks because we refused to be licked."

Terry and Cronin both are great hitters. Devastatingly they are the class of their positions, in either big league. They have the knack of setting the pace or protecting the hits, that count the most. Otherwise they are radically different personalities. As ball players go Terry is a veteran, while Cronin is in his prime. Bill will be 35 in October and Joe 27 the same month.

RACE MEET ON THANKSGIVING

Three Races On Each Day For Two Days With Good Purses

Mr. H. K. Wicks, Secretary of the Harness Horse Association, was in Belleville today arranging the advertising campaign for the two day harness horse meet to be given over the Belleville course Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 9th and following day. The Harness Horse Association is composed of horse owners, promoters of races and representative followers of the sport from East and West and was formed for the purpose of promoting and encouraging bigger and better race meetings throughout Ontario. During the last three seasons some mighty fine exhibitions have been given and the one at Belleville will be no exception to the rule.

The Association do not look for profit, content to balance the budget and demonstrate just how interesting and attractive a real conducted harness meet can be made. They introduced the loud speaking equipment were the position of horses and the time at each eighth mile was announced, the two man starting system were the horses annlined up behind a barrier to eliminate the "turning" evil and many new features, that make the sport more interesting and happy. The Canadian National Exhibition used a good many ideas that were embodied in the Harness Horse programme and this year the two man starting system will be used at Belleville with Mayor Tice giving the word and Al Proctor the inventor of the Proctor barrier using it. Entry schedules for each event are strictly adhered to and competent officials selected throughout Ontario control the standings the tentative card will be a 2 year-old pacing stake for $400 and a silver trophy, a 2.24 pace, and a trot. The 2.20 pace with a purse of $250 and a silver cup, the 2.30 pace and trot for the same purses of $250. Three races a day will be run. Several letters from parties in the East have asked to put on the dash racing, but it will be so popular as the Stratford and Simcoe meets and the Secretary is busy sorting out the possible starters in the above named classes. Some of the classes may fill when the entries close, dash racing will be put on on distances of one half mile, one mile and one mile and a half, and it is just possible that a two and one mile trot may be put on for pacers eligible from 2.26 to 2.30 will be given. Mr. Wicks has had over thirty years experience in the harness horse field and can well be trusted to serve up a card that will be remembered for years to follow. He will visit Montreal at the end of the week where a 9 race event's being staged at the Mount Royal mile track. The distance racing is the most popular sporting attraction today in Quebec. Every effort will be put forth to make this event one of the best given in Ontario and horsemen are being invited to a man.

SCENE SHIFTS TO BUFFALO

Rochester Has 2- 1 Edge At Present In Series For Pennant

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 20 (CP) Scene of the first game of the International League Golden Jubilee Year baseball championship, tied to this city, where night games still stand tonight between Rochester and Buffalo and continue until one team has won four games.

The Bisons have won two of the three contests at Rochester and have the complete edge as the Hornets although they have had but little luck in Buffalo since 1931 that season.

They won yesterday 6-3 with the heaviest consistent hitting attack of the series in the Red Wings' 12 hits were made off the offerings of by Ethel Crabtree and Ray Pepper, outfielders and they merely paced the victor behind the excellent pitching of Jim Lindsay, who got up the burden with two on base and one out in the third and did not give a run the rest of the way and two safe blows.

Figure that Ray Pepper and Les Koenecke as the leading division of the three games, Pepper batting seven safe drives in 13 trips to the plate and Koenecke being far ahead of his Bison mates with six in 13 tries.

Many times a player will get to hitting the ball decidedly to the left of his intended line of play.

The ball may fly in either a hook or slice curve without apparent reason.

The swing in both cases seem's to be the same. In fact, it seems to the player the same swing that affords the player a straight ball.

However, the player doesn't realize that he has changed his stance, particularly the position of his feet in relation to the ball. The relation of the feet to the line of play is one thing and to the ball something entirely different.

The faulty direction is not caught the first time but only after forward of the feet.

VICTOR VANQUISHED

Al Foreman retains title of lightweight champion of British Empire, defeating Tommy Bland of Toronto in ten slashing rounds at Montreal last night.

ELIGIBILITY UNQUESTIONED

W. A. Hewitt, Sec'ry of O. H. A. Praised By Officers

Toronto, Sept. 20.—(CP)—Eligibility of W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, to act as secretary of the Ontario Hockey association—a position he has held for 30 years—is unquestioned as far as members of the Association's executive are concerned.

When the executive met yesterday it was on a personal application of some 33 players for a change of club affiliation this season, they refused to consider the matter, on motion of the suggestion Mr. Hewitt, through his connection with the professional amusement corporation, was ineligible to continue his connection with the amateur body and with this attitude we entirely disagree," stated a resolution passed at the meeting. "True the major activity of the Maple Leaf Gardens is professional hockey, but Mr. Hewitt has no responsibility in connection with that interest, which has its own separate management and administration." The resolution went on to point to a similar case which had prevailed in baseball, where William Norther although connected with the arena, where professional baseball is played, had been active trustee of the Allan Cup and treasurer of its funds.

Decision on the players' applications was laid over for two weeks while the executive investigate their status.

AL FOREMAN NEW CHAMP

Defeats Tommy Bland of Toronto In 10 Slashing Rounds

Montreal, Sept. 20 (CP)—The Canadian Lightweight crown was back in Montreal tonight when Al Foreman's warring Irishman crammed in with the British Empire title, the Lonsdale belt which goes with it, and the Australian championship. Foreman gained a 10-round decision over Tommy Bland of Toronto here last night and recaptured the Canadian title he lost to Billy Townsend of Vancouver, in 1930.

Bland, who defeated Townsend to become champion, defended his title gamely, but could not withstand the blistering attack of the swarthy Montrealer. Foreman's savage punching had Bland groggy in the sixth and seventh rounds but the Toronto boy stood up to it despite a partially paralyzed thigh and put up a whirlwind finish in the last two rounds to cut down Foreman's margin. His finish earned him enough points to gain him a close decision from one of the three judges, the other two voting for Foreman.

Foreman, who had his British Empire title at stake in his first fight in five months, showed the effects of his rest from the pugilistic wars and his timing was a little off. Outboxed at times by his tall, young opponent, Al scored steadily at infighting and shook the Canadian champion repeatedly with thudding body blows and vicious crosses to the head.

Bland had a slight edge in weight, scaling 134 to foreman's 133 pounds.

GRANDMOTHERS HONOURED AT W. I. MEETING

MARMORA—In choosing the occasion or their September meeting for Grandmothers' Night, and the home of Mrs. U. Pinner for the place of the meeting, Marmora Women's Institute ensured for its members one of the most enlivening programs of the season. The president, Mrs. J. A. Rice, occupied the chair. The roll call, "A Story or Olden Times" was well responded to by the 37 members present. Under general business the secretary was instructed to send letters of sympathy to two members, Mrs. G. Nichol and Mrs. Alex. Kennedy.

The program was then given with Mrs. L. Green announcing the numbers. An appropriate reading, "An Old Fashioned Fair" was given by Mrs. W. Kerr, Jr., after which Mrs. W. A. Sanderson and Miss M. Brown very ably rendered, "When You and I Were Young Maggie." A short game, "Pass the Ring" was then played; a duet, "Sleep Kentucky Babe," by Mrs. H. R. Hamilton and Mrs. Kerr, Jr., was much appreciate. An excellent paper on "Health" was given by Mrs. Frank Sweet. Contributions of Grandmothers' Sayings" were then read, followed on paper by members and read by the Secretary, Miss Florence Sopha.

A parade of the members in grandmothers' costume concluded the entertainment. Honors went to the hostess of the evening, who also received a gift for being the oldest grandmother present, as did Mrs. H. R. Hamilton for being the youngest member at the meeting. Nine grandmothers in all were present. Mrs. Pinner were what is probably the oldest bonnet in the district. It originally belonged to the late Mrs. Ann Bayburn of Tweed, and the present owner thinks it must be nearly a century old.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O'Connor of Sudbury, were week end guests in town.

Miss Gladys Gehan is visiting relatives in Campbellford.

Mr. Hugh O'Connor of New Liskeard, was home over the week end.

Mr. George Dunn of Peterboro was in town on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. French and Miss Constance motored to Ottawa on Saturday and are visiting friends there for a few days.

When Baby Starts School

By CONSTANCE CAMERON)

Quite a few years ago, I watched my mother who was teaching kindergarten, help school fifteen very young children get into their coats and hats, rubbers and mittens to go out for recess. Not one seemed to have the slightest idea of how to help himself. She tried to help each to help himself, but with only six minutes out-of-doors for them it could be spent getting ready for that play time.

I was furious. "Why," I demanded, "don't mothers, at least teach children how to put on their own coats and hats and rubbers before they have the attempt to enter them in school?" You see, it came home to me rather poignantly, that huge task of teaching fifteen little children those things in a space of two or three minutes. Perhaps if each mother would visit kindergarten, she'd realize that there are times where from fifteen to thirty-five children to be considered and cared for, and that instead of fifteen to thirty-five mothers to do it there is only one or perhaps two women, and they must also be guide for his entrance into the collective life of the school room a little better.

Mrs. Wesley Reid, Toronto.

It isn't hard to encourage a toddler to learn to dress himself. If you allow him to try is when he first shows signs of wanting to. That is the point where most mothers slip up. It takes so long. It is quicker and easier to fasten Johnnie's shoes or Mary's bloomers than to let either child struggle with the confounded himself. But it saves time in the long run, if the mother will encourage this urge when it first appears. And I repeat, no teacher should have the shameless courage to send to school a toddler who cannot as yet get into his own clothes. That is her part of the job, not the teacher's.

All little children entering school should also be equipped with good toilet habits, and the knowledge of how to fasten and unfasten their clothing alone.

FEATHERS are the thing on all the new dresses, in divers ways. For instance, a dress of black velvet has shoulder straps and a necklace all made of immense blue lilac feather centres, made of lovely white and yellow feather. A dress to dream about.

• • • •

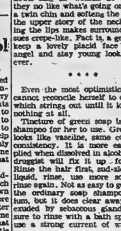
• • • •



TEAR LEAVES fall off the calendar and you'll find yourself wearing a large brown dress, most likely in fine woollen or faille, with a fur collar, a smart little model in matching velvet with tiny little bows posed against the hair by the ear. And a matching blood stream or sable dyed squirrel will complete a lovely picture.

• • • •

A NEW THOUGHT for these times is flowers fresh or truly artificial in the hair. One beautiful lady wears, just across the top of her rolled up curls, a garland of poppies and cornflowers, with a matching bracelet high on each arm.

GO BACK to another era and you will find that many of the new hairdos are very much like their styles of another day. For instance: one of the most important fashions in evening wraps will be the little pastel-coloured jackets of broadcloth with leg-o'-mutton sleeves and large buttons.

STILL THEY COME—those lovely while evening ensembles— despite the insistence on color. A ravishing model is in heavy white crepe, high and soft in the front neckline, deep in back, casually tied at a medium waistline with a narrow self girdle. The top is a cape of long, white but unruried ostrich, mounted on chiffon.

Fabric Hollywood by surprise. Jean Harlow, platinum blonde, film star, flew to Yuma, Ariz., with Harold Rosson, ace camera man, and returned to Los Angeles by air with Rosson as her third husband. Miss Harlow the widow of Paul Bern, Hollywood film executive, who committed suicide. Her new husband, shown above is 38.

Youthifying Requires Headwork

Beauty is not brainless, nor do brains make beauty. There's many a girl so intent on cultivating her mind that she never remembers to cultivate it. And just look how many are on the skid, due to too much pushing ahead in the wrong kind of things that just happen in life, it does take a bit of headwork to pull oneself together.

Let's say that Mary Jane is forty. She's been a home girl, a wage-getter, which one doesn't matter, perhaps the cosmetic counter didn't lure her, she never had a yen for outdoor life, golf or just chugging along. And suddenly that face which looks at her from the mirror appears to be growing old, acquiring something funny about the eyes, skin gone sreepless. Many little lines at the mouth corners. Texture not so good.

Traveling to the full length mirror, anatomical changes are apparent. Hips and waist spreading gradually from 34 to 38, roundity has sneaked up on her.

A bit of dieting and exercising, and gaining back that girlish figure aren't going to make Mary Jane what she was to twenty. What she's got to do is think of Mary M. J. outline an entirely different life plan. She must have more leisure, more fresh air, lollier companions, more adjustable ideas. And a lot of other things.

If she goes on a diet jag, living on grapefruit and lettuce leaves, cutting out fats, starches and sweets according to reducing orders, face lags won't get any better. She'll smart as smart!

Avoid Habit Of Facial Gestures

They Etch Deep Lines In Skin, So Keep The Face Placid

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Facial gestures are devastating to the smoothness of the skin; they help Popper Time put age marks on the celestial countenance.

Lifting the eyebrows places crosswise tracks on the forehead. Stand before the mirror and watch what happens. Pulling the brows together prints exclamation marks between the eyes. Very bad; they are not easily erased.

That habit of drawing the chin down and in—women do it when they no like what's going on—forms a twin chin and softens the flesh on the upper story of the neck. Pursing the lips makes surrounding tissues crepe-like. Fact is, a girl should keep a lovely placid face like an angel and stay young looking forever.

Even the most optimistic woman cannot reconcile herself to oily hair which stirring out until it looks like nothing at all.

Tincture of green soap is a good shampoo for her to use. Green soap is the finest vegetable oil soap in consistency. It is more easily applied when dissolved in alcohol; your druggist will fix it up for you. Rinse the hair first, and-as in the liquid, rinse, use more soap and rinse again. Not as easy to get out as the ordinary egg shampoo mediums, but it does clear away grease exuded by sebaceous glands. Be sure to rinse with a bath spray and use a strong current of water.

Run over heels deform the feet and put strain on the muscles of the legs. They are responsible for calluses on the soles of the feet.

Narrow toes produce ingrowing nails, sometimes hammer toes result. The short shoes brings along a trail of ills. Women do not pay sufficient attention to having shoes fitted properly, or to selecting the comfortable last.

Pailed calves can be trained down, to slender lines. Place hands on hips, and run around the room, bringing the heels up as high as you can go. Walk on the toes; that's an elegant exercise.

Some Interesting Recipes
Using Condensed Milk

Another Fall has come and the countryside is perfumed with the sweet scent of luscious ripe fruits—apples, pears, plums, peaches, apricots and grapes are abundant and lower in cost than they will be again for another year. It very often happens, however that when we are in the midst of plenty we seem to lack inspiration and find ourselves thumbing through recipe books for new ways of making use of it.

If the family is tired of both raw and stewed fruit here are recipes for deserts containing fruit which they are bound to eat with enjoyment:

Modern Steamed Pudding

1 cup mixed fruits, lady fingers, 1 cup sweetened condensed milk, 1 cup hot water, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons melted butter 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Break or mold or top part of double boiler. Place layer of finely cut fruit, bottom, cover with layer of lady fingers. Repeat until fruit and lady fingers are used. Beat eggs until frothy. Add sweetened condensed milk, water, beaten eggs, melted butter, salt and vanilla. Pour over fruit and lady fingers in mold. Let stand one hour over steam in double boiler of water. 1-2 hours. If double boiler is used keep bottom part two thirds full of boiling water. Serve hot with sauce or whipped cream. Serves eight.

Fruit Dumplings

Proceed as for Baking Powder Biscuit, adding one tablespoon sugar to dry ingredients. Roll to 1-4 inch thickness on slightly floured board and cut in four-inch squares. Place fruit (one teaspoon crushed pineapple or 1-4 of a pared, cored apple may be used in the centre of each square and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Moisten edges of dough with Evaporated Milk and fold into triangles, pressing lightly together. Place in deep, buttered pan. Bake 25 minutes in hot oven (400 F.). Serve with Soft Custard (see below). Makes eight dumplings.

Soft Custard

3-4 cup Evaporated Milk, 3-4 cup water, 1-4 cup granulated sugar, 2 egg yolks, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon flavoring.

Blend Evaporated Milk with water in double boiler. Set over hot water and bring to scalding point. (Do not boil). Add sugar, slightly beaten egg yolks and pour hot milk gradually over egg mixture. Blend thoroughly. Return to double boiler and cook slowly, keeping water well below boiling point (200 F.) and custard at 130 F. Stir constantly until mixture coats spoon and has thickened. Remove at once from heat. Cool and add salt and flavoring. Chill. Serve over dry sponge cake or fruit. Make 1 1-2 cups.

Fresh Fruit Cobbler

Roll dough prepared as for Baking Powder Biscuits to 1-4 inch thickness. Line a buttered baking dish with dough, allowing dough for overlapping on two sides. Peel four to six ripe, juicy peaches, leaving them whole. Place peaches on the dough in pan in rows. Add 1-2 cup granulated sugar and 1 tablespoon butter in small pieces. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Fold over the overlapping dough, bringing edges together. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 F.), until crust and fruit are done. Serves eight.

Applecious

1-4 pound vanilla wafers, 3 large firm apples, 1 cup Condensed Milk, 1-2 cup water,

Butter a baking dish and line with vanilla wafers. Cover with layer of peeled sliced apples, repeat until wafers and apples are all used. Blend Condensed Milk with water. Pour over the wafers and apples. Cover. Bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) 30 minutes. Uncover and bake 10 minutes longer. Serve hot or served with a pudding sauce. Serves eight.

Graham Cracker Pie Crust

Roll enough graham crackers to make 3-4 cup crumbs. Cut enough butter into crumbs to measure 1-4 cup. Add 1-8 teaspoon cinnamon and 1-4 cup sugar. Mix well and press into a nine-inch pie plate lined with Chocolate Wafer Paper. Cover with whipped cream sweetened with confectioners sugar. Chill before serving.

Magic Apricot Variation

It is possible to use apricots in place of peaches in the recipe above.

Chocolate Wafer Pie Crust

Roll enough chocolate wafers to make 3-4 cup of crumbs. Cut enough chocolate wafer into halves to stand around the edge of pie plate. Line bottom of pie plate with crumbs and fill in cavities between wafers. Pour in filling as usual

Fresh Peach Ice Box Dessert

3-4 cup Condensed Milk, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon almond extract, 1 cup fresh peaches, sliced, 12 sponge lady fingers or slices of stale sponge cake.

Blend Condensed Milk and lemon juice until mixture thickens. Add salt and almond extract. Add crushed peaches Line a mold with lady fingers or slices of sponge cake. Pour in half the peach mixture. Cover with layer of lady fingers. Add remaining peach mixture and top with layer of lady fingers. Chill for several hours. Unmold and serve.

PRIMA DONNA WEDS

BERLIN, September 20—Mafalda Salvatini, prima donna of the Berlin Opera, today married Jurgis Saulys, Lithuanian Minister to Berlin. The ceremony took place at the Charlottenburg registry office. She was a pupil of Jean de Reszke, and sang with Caruso.

Here's a New Recipe for a Creamed Rice Pudding

4 tablespoons rice
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2½ cups Borden's Milk
1½ cups water
½ cup raisins

Wash rice, add with the sugar and salt to the milk diluted with water in a well buttered baking dish add a sprinkling of nutmeg. Set the dish in a pan of hot water and bake three hours in a slow oven (300°F.) stirring several times the first hour to prevent rice from settling to bottom.

There is a case of delicious evaporated milk. So sure you use Borden's St. Charles, that we back up the statement with a money-back guarantee.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

Market Presents An Enigma To Force Prices Breaking Under Barrage of Profit-Taking — Nervousness Seen Over Sell-off Occurs After Firm Opening—Bar Gold Reaches New All Time High.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 20.—(CP)—Toronto Stock Exchange listings closed with a generally weak tone after pressing through a series of nervous slips and recoveries throughout the day. Losses did not exceed two points through the day until a final sell-off carried leaders off 1 to 3.

Nickel sold off to $21.90 and recovered $22.25 before closing with the end to $21.70 down 90 cents. Smelters had a series of point swings, closing at $41 1-2, Brazilian, and Ford A registered net losses of about 3-8 and C.P.R. was unchanged. Supertest and McColl oils recorded small losses. In the Utilities the Quebec Power Stocks recorded small gains while fractional gains for Bell Telephone and B.C. Power "A".

TORONTO MINES

TORONTO, Sept. 20. — (CP) — While leaders were off, shares continued today on a heavy scale, the market had a note of insistency that prevented any material rallies from making the most of the offers of buyers for stocks sold in the London Market. After setting up new top ground in the half hour, profit-taking trimmed the whole group and only a couple recovered. McIntyre featured the afternoon session with an advance to $47.50, up $1.25 to a new high record. Base Metals and Golds were slightly weaker and slower. The whole list weakened throughout the day.

Dome hit $40 early in the day but weakened to close at $38.25, off $1.50. Hollinger, Teck Hughes and Bralorne closed off 10 to 25 cents and Wright Hargreaves 40 cents. Lake Shore retained a small advance and Pioneer advanced 25 to $12.50.

NEW YORK CLOSE

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Stocks quickly worked upward in the late dealings today, retrieving about half their forenoon losses of 1 to 3 or more points. Metals tended to recover from early mid-day lows. Homestake Mining cancelled a 10-point drop. U.S. Steel regained a loss of 2 points and Bethlehem and U.S. Smelting continued to show declines of around 2 points in the late trading while losses of 1 to 3 points were reduced in American Can, Allied Chemical, American Smelting, National Union, Pacific Gas and Electric and several others. Transfers approximated 2,500,000 shares.

ARREST TWO AT OSHAWA

Believed To Be Men Who Escaped From Constable Wickett, Saturday

Two men giving their names as Francis Leo Konnaghan, 22, and John Henry Chandler, 19, both of Oshawa, were arrested by Oshawa police on Tuesday night following information supplied by the Provincial Police Force at Whitby. The men are alleged to have escaped from County Constable Wickett of Stirling early Saturday morning after they were apprehended in an alleged stolen automobile from Port Hope. The other two members of the quartette are to have made their escape from Constable Wickett are still at large.

Konnaghan and Chandler were apprehended at their respective homes in Oshawa following the finding of a large quantity of alleged stolen goods, that had been cached near Oshawa. Provincial Constables Adams of Whitby and Constable Gray of Marmora went to Oshawa late Tuesday night where all of the merchandise stolen from Marett's general store, Marmora, last October, and other alleged stolen goods from Stirling were recovered.

Konnaghan and Chandler were taken to Cobourg where they faced numerous charges of stealing and entering. They were remanded until the 25th instant. In the meantime the two apprehended men will later be brought to this city where they will face the charges of robbery. Two charges of motor car thefts will also be laid.

No information relating to the disposition of the actions at Stirling, when they escaped from custody, has been made public as yet.

Livestock

TORONTO, Sept. 20. —(CP)— Good cattle were at the opening of the Toronto Livestock market today and trade was slow on the best quality offering with prices steady. There were 500 head of cattle left over from Tuesday's market.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were:— Cattle 360, Calves, 102, Hogs, 610, Sheep and lambs 990. Butcher cattle ranged from $2.50 to $4.00 with the latter price for a few. Some butcher cows brought $2.50 to $2.75. Bologna bulls sold mostly at $1.75. Fed calves were steady at $7.00 for tops. Calves opened steady at $7.50 to $8.00 for choice vealers. The majority went at $7.50. Grass calves sold at $5.00 to $5.50.

Hogs were unsettled with packers bidding $4.25 f.o.b. for $6.50 off truck and $6.75 off car. Salesmen were asking higher prices.

Lambs were steady at $3.75 for good ewes and wethers and at $4.50 to $5.00 for culls and bucks. Sheep were also steady at $1.00 to $3.00 according to quality.

Cattle, calf, sheep and lamb quotations remained unchanged.

Hogs: no quotations.

FLYING SUITS MADE IN CITY

Jim And Amy Mollison Will Fly In Suits Made By Deacon's

Belleville will contribute materially to the chances of the complete success for Jim and Amy Mollison in their proposed non-stop flight from Wasaga Beach to Baldoyle, Dublin, one of the most important items of a flying outfit is the clothing to be worn, to give the greatest comfort in varying temperatures, be easily put on and taken off, and withstand the most severe weather. On sale to-day in Toronto will be the flight from Wales which ended in a crash at Baldoyle, but Mollisons were suits of Grenfell cloth, made in England, which is specially designed and made from the suggestions of Sir Wilfred Grenfell to suit conditions in Labrador where intense cold prevails. When the plane crashed in Baldoyle, the Mollisons were in good health and taken to a hospital where they received first aid and damaged beyond repair. In making preparations for the great flight it was desired to obtain clothing made from the Grenfell cloth, so they got in touch with the English manufacturers. They immediately cabled the Deacon Shirt Company in Belleville, who have been using the Grenfell cloth for some time, to look after the Mollisons.

Last Friday a representative of the Deacon Shirt Company, Limited, took the measures of Amy and Jim Mollison at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, and today the flying outfits are on the way to Toronto.

The flying suits are very smart and sporty in appearance, as well as carrying assurance of comfort—they are made under direction of Mr. E. R. Hinchey, superintendent of the Deacon Shirt Co., Limited.

Two Piece Suits

Two-piece suits of white Grenfell cloth, with silk lining and camel's hair cloth inner lining. The coats are single breasted, made by Delaney, carry the same ingredients as the outer material, and have a generous roomy with two large pockets protected by fasteners and fastened at the bottom with ribbons which bring them snug to the ankles, while long boots are worn outside. An inner pair of boots are also worn. The coat is tucked in with a belt.

For headgear a sort of sailor cap is worn by each of the flyers with sneakgie.

The Mollisons desired flying outfit which would withstand zero weather to be experienced in flying over Labrador and also be easily removed when tropic weather was encountered later on.

INCRIMINATING EVIDENCE GIVEN

Witness States Jackson Said "I'm Ready To Hang"

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 20.—(CP)—The case of Edward F. Jackson, Milkwaukes negro, charged with the murder of Constable Lee, also a negro from Milwaukee, went to the jury this afternoon. A formal verdict was expected and the sentence was set aside.

The Crown's principal witness was 12-year-old Ruby Saltern, only eye-witness to the occurrence in the yard of the Lee home where Jackson shot Lee. She contradicted much of Jackson's own previous testimony, in which he said he only shot Lee after the latter had attempted to pull his automatic and attack Jackson.

Jackson declared Lee was reaching for his automatic, when he pulled his own gun and shot him dead.

"There were four persons in the Saltern's yard when I approached through the woods, but when they saw me they all ran into the house except Lee," he said. "Me and him walked to the front door. He said he asked Lee to get some more wire and cement so he could finish the foundation of the house the two were building for themselves, and Lee had replied he would get it when he was ready.

"I turned then to walk away and was then shot in the back of the head by gun." Jackson declared. He made a lunge at him but he pushed me back over a truck wheel. He still was reaching for his gun so I pulled mine and shot him.

"I emptied the gun at him because he didn't seem to stumble or fall down or do what I'd seen him do in the movies. He was still reaching for his gun when he fell."

The negro spoke with a Southern drawl but he told his story concisely and did not alter it in the least under cross-examination.

After the addresses of Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., prosecutor, counsel, and Thomas F. Battle, K.C., special counsel for prosecutor, the case went to the jury.

EXCURSIONS COME TO STAY

C. P. R. Officials Watching Closely Action of United States

Calgary, Sept. 20 (CP)—Rumored consideration of a scaling down of railway fares in United States is subject to observation by Canadian railway executives, E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said here last night. Mr. Beatty is enroute to Vancouver.

"The question of lower fares is a matter of development and depends on future traffic," Mr. Beatty stated. "But I believe, judging by the manner in which they have been patronized in the past few months, excursions have come to stay."

Mr. Beatty refused to comment on the possibility of the proposed 10 percent reduction in salaries of railway employees being rescinded, contenting himself with the statement that "this is a matter for the representatives of the men to decide for themselves."

IDAHO, NEW MEXICO ENTER WET COLUMN

Prohibitionists Fail to Gain State in 31 Elections

New York, Sept. 20 (CP)— The score card at the fight over U.S. repeal read today:

Repeal 31, Prohibition 0.

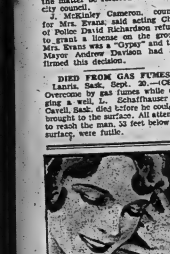
Idaho and New Mexico, voting yesterday, approved the proposed 21st. amendment, which will repeal the 18th. from the constitution.

This placing the repeal forces in a position where they can spot the prohibitionists three States between now and September 27th. and thus have prohibition out of the U.S. constitution in December.

The next state to vote is Virginia, on October 3. Florida votes on October 10 and six more—North and South Carolina, Ohio, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Utah—on November 7th. The anti-prohibitionists need only five of them to obtain the 36 States needed to amend the constitution.

If they get the five, they expect the formalities of ratification to be concluded in December.

LICENSE IS REFUSED PORT HOPE WOMAN



City of Calgary Not Obligated To Grant License

Calgary, Sept. 20 (CP)— Mr. Justice T. Tweedie has refused to rule on an application for writ of mandamus requiring city of Calgary to issue Mrs. Bobby Evans, formerly of Port Hope, Ont., a chiropodist's license, and directed that the matter be referred back to the city council.

J. McKinley Cameron, counsel for Mrs. Evans, said acting chief of Police David Richardson refused to grant a license on the ground Mrs. Evans was a "gypsy" and that Mayor Andrew Davison had affirmed this decision.

DIED FROM GAS FUMES

Lantis, Sask., Sept. 20.—(CP)— Overcome by gas fumes while digging a well, L. Schaffhauser of Cavell, Sask., died before he could be brought to the surface. All attempts to reach the man, 35 feet below the surface, were futile.

"MAN FROM TORONTO" WILL AID BELLEVILLE CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Members of the Belleville Rotary Club are now selling tickets for their adopted movie, "The Man From Toronto," starring Jessie Matthews (of "The Good Companions") which is due for exhibition at the Capitol Theatre next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 27, 28, 29.

Tickets, price thirty cents, are being offered for sale by Rotarians and by Crippled Children Fund workers, the proceeds of the showing to be devoted from the sale of these tickets.

"The Man from Toronto"

Fergus Wimbush (Ian Hunter), in response to the conditions of a legacy by a Canadian relative, comes to England to see the bride his late uncle desired him to marry. If he weds Lelia Farrar (Miss Matthews), Fergus and she will share the thumping legacy. If not, the money goes to charity.

Fergus Wimbush duly arrives, but Lelia resolutely refuses to meet him. Ultimately, however, she decides to impersonate the typist in her solicitor uncle's office and in that disguise observes Wimbush—as he enters.

"Might be worse," she muses, and boldly in character she enters the conversation proceeding in the other room.

"Will" says Fergus to the solicitor (Fred Kerr), "I might look her over, and if she is not too bad I will think about it."

By the simple process of pulling and (in the Duesenberg) car, Lelia steals a march on him and arrives at her fiancee's country seat, Colonial. Here, the imp of mischief overpowers her and it would be a happy thing for Fergus if he had engaged in the guise o f "Polly Perkins," Lelia spoke down to him from Toronto. Poor Fergus, so smitten is he by Polly's charms, does not forgive the typist and the object of his trip—which is just what Lelia wished for. It is a real genuine love at first sight. And, although there are a number of hilarious complications, the only ending that could be desired is, of course, forthcoming.

It is all very good fun, excellently acted and staged. Fred Kerr, Renee Gadd and Marjorie Yarde are in support of the stars.

Now that you know you are in for a real treat, do not refuse, when approached by the ticket vendors who will call at your address from Belleville Rotarians to see "The Man from Toronto."

The tickets are good for any performance during the current engagement of the picture only and cannot be used at any other date, before or after.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

"SONG OF SONGS" BRINGS DIETRICH GREAT ROLE

A spoot question in Hollywood for many months, how Marlene Dietrich would resist to a director other than her discoverer, Josef von Sternberg, was settled with the completion of the production of "Song of Songs," coming to the Belle tomorrow (Thursday), for two days, matinee daily.

Unquestionably Miss Dietrich gives her finest acting performance in the picture, which was directed by the gifted Rouben Mamoulian, Broadway producer now in New York stage, and the maker of Maurice Chevalier's "Love Me Tonight," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and other films. After seeing Mamoulian has accomplished with Miss Dietrich, it is understandable why Greta Garbo pressed him as her next director for her new film.

"The Song of Songs" presents the Miss Dietrich in a new and far more, human and understandable characterization than she has had previously.

Different Role

In marked contrast to her roles in "Shanghai Express", "Morocco," "Dishonored," and "The Blonde Venus," which she appeared as a sophisticated, disillusioned woman of the world, she is seen as an innocent young girl in the major part of the picture, which was adapted from Hermann Sudermann literary classic of the same name.

The star, too, gives a less restrained performance than she has in the past, especially in the scenes in the sculptor's studio, when she is delighting her ideals to her lover.

The leading man, Brian Aherne, makes his screen debut with this picture. One glance at him on the screen and the spectator realizes why he has been dubbed the most romantic lover in Hollywood. Incidentally, he is the young English actor who created a sensation on the New York stage with his role opposite Katherine Cornell in the Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Other notable members of the cast include Alison Skipworth, Hardie Albright, and Helen Freeman.

Beautifully produced, dramatic, human to the core and filled with interesting, understandable dialogue, and a happy ending "The Song of Songs" bids fair to be listed among the new season's outstanding pictures.

Selected Shorts

A selected array of short offerings have been assembled for presentation on the same program consisting of the Paramount Publix Revue in "The Big Fibber", Lillian Roth in a delightful musical comedy monologue, "Ain't She Sweet," and the popular Belle News, introducing interesting world events of interest while they are news.

Oklahoma Cowboys

Ken Hackley and His Oklahoma Cowboys delighted record breaking audiences at the Belle yesterday. You have probably heard this group of novel, wild, western cowboy entertainers from one of the many radio stations from which they have been featured. They have made themselves very popular by thus being natural in offering the public their ideas of entertainment, which are different, unique, as well as novel and comical. The funny cowboy, Zeke, as he is called, is a scream. You can never tell what this clumsy cowboy will do next to keep you laughing. Be sure to see them tonight.

Cicely Courtneidge and Edward Everett Horton, in "Soldiers of the King" opening at the Capitol today

genue (Dorothy Hyson) appearing in dainty dresses and fascinating and loveliest member of this famous family of versatile entertainers. The plot is catchy, the fun fast and furious, the plot-interest well sustained, and the comedy of exciting romance.

The story of "Soldiers of the King" concerns the adventures of a fictitious English stage family, the members of which cause to have entertained the British public continuously from Beyonne to Bay, but which is now facing disruption under the impact of modern life. Romance finally has its way, but the family pride and traditions of the Marvelles are preserved and all ends happily. The brisk pace, delightful atmosphere and "esprit" or "Soldiers of the King" make it a sure winner...when-ever you enjoy the best that the film world has to offer can afford to miss. By all means go and see "Soldiers of the King" during the next three days at the Capitol Theatre and be sure to take the family with you. A good time for all is guaranteed.

The complete programme which commences daily at 2.45, 7.15 and 9.30 includes Cartoon, News and Interest.

ACTUAL BLOOD TESTS

of 11 Patients by a Reputable Physician Proved the Value of this Remedy for

Run-down, Tired, Below-par People

THERE is one way that the efficiency of any medicinal preparation in the treatment of rundown, fagged, nervous conditions arising from anaemia can be proven beyond the shadow of a doubt. That is by blood tests of patients before and after taking the remedy.

Such tests were recently made by a reputable physician on eleven patients, samples of their blood being examined before taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and one month after taking. In the words of the physician "the improvement was nothing short of remarkable."

The patients did not know what was wrong with them when they came to the physician—just that they had no pep, tired easily, lacked reserve strength and looked sallow. The blood tests showed that their haemoglobin was below normal and in most cases their count of red blood corpuscles was low.

The Importance of Haemoglobin to Every Day Health

It is the haemoglobin in the blood that carries life-giving oxygen from the lungs and digested food from the digestive organs to the innermost cells of every organ and tissue. The haemoglobin also clears the system of poisons. A blood test showing deficient in haemoglobin fails to build up the system and clear it of poisons.

It is the duty of the red blood corpuscles to act as rafts and convey haemoglobin throughout the blood, and as haemoglobin brings life-giving oxygen and nutriment to every cell in the body, it can easily be understood that any deficiency in the number of red blood corpuscles or in haemoglobin results in poor health. The value of any medicinal preparation in the treatment of rundown, weak, thin, anaemic conditions depends upon its power to increase haemoglobin.

Remarkable Results of One Month's Test

The physician's charts of these patients' progress under one month's treatment of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills showed remarkable results. In ten out of eleven cases the haemoglobin content was materially increased as well as the count of their red blood corpuscles; in several cases the increase was double what normally might be expected. (The reason for the one exception was given as X-ray examination to be a case of abscessed teeth, the poisons from which was infecting the blood stream and nullifying the action of the pills. Removal of these teeth and continuance with the treatment of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills quickly brought about the desired results.)

The patients themselves reported that they felt far better, stronger, more energetic and as the physician said "they experienced a much better state of well being."

Immediately below are the physician's tabulated results of these "blood tests":—

PHYSICIAN'S RECORD OF TESTS

Normal Male Adult—Haemoglobin 95% to 100%—Red Blood Corpuscles 5,000,000
Normal Female Adult—Haemoglobin 90% to 95%—Red Blood Corpuscles 4,800,000

Patient	Date of 1st Test	Haemoglobin	Red Blood Corpuscles	Date of 2nd Test	Haemoglobin	Red Blood Corpuscles	Remarks
1	Nov. 14/32	68%	4,480,000	Dec. 14/32	88%	5,024,000	Remarkable increase in haemoglobin. Increase in red blood corpuscles also most satisfactory.
2	Nov. 14/32	60%	3,700,000	Dec. 16/32	84%	5,408,000	Remarkable increase in haemoglobin. Red Blood Corpuscles returned to normal. Feels fine working.
3	Nov. 15/32	67%	4,544,000	Dec. 16/32	84%	4,544,000	Patient stronger. Says "Pink Pills have given me a new start in life."
4	Nov. 15/32	75%	4,096,000	Dec. 16/32	88%	4,288,000	Improvement in both haemoglobin and Red Blood Corpuscles. Patient says "Pink Pills are wonderful."
5	Nov. 16/32	68%	2,880,000	Dec. 16/32	75%	2,944,000	Improvement in haemoglobin and red blood corpuscles. Patient notes increase in strength.
6	Nov. 16/32	64%	2,688,000	Dec. 19/32	75%	4,301,000	Haemoglobin increased. Red Blood Corpuscles increase by much more than 1,000,000.
7	Nov. 18/32	68%	5,376,000	Dec. 19/32	90%	5,376,000	Patient says feels great.
8	Nov. 19/32	85%	5,984,000	Dec. 17/32	96%	5,728,000	Patient has more pep. Feels fine.
9	Nov. 21/32	83%	3,776,000	Dec. 16/32	88%	5,792,000	Haemoglobin and R.B.C. increased. Color of skin much improved.
10	Nov. 18/32	72%	3,584,000	Dec. 21/32	87%	4,960,000	Patient feels much stronger.
11	Nov. 14/32	75%	4,000,000	Dec. 14/32	75%	4,640,000	3 dead teeth. Infection sudden action of pills.

NOTE: Before consenting to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the treatment of run-down, chin-blood, anaemic conditions, the physician was given a blood test of the patients' blood. Records of these tests are shown, but the patients' names and records of the tests are on file.

If you are tired out, run-down, lack energy and strength, try a one month's treatment of this "Blood-Tested" Preparation

If you have only three-quarters or two-thirds of the proper amount of haemoglobin in your blood, you cannot expect to have normal pep and strength until you increase your haemoglobin to normal. A new and safe way to do so is with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The "blood test" furnish absolute proof of the efficiency of this preparation.

Results such as this physician obtained with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, show the reason why this preparation has been a standard remedy for forty years in the L.estreat of run-down, thin blood conditions. Only a product of genuine merit could have retained public confidence for so long a period and obtainable from druggists in Canada, United States, Britain and 66 other countries. Sole at package.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHARINE NEWLAND-TAYLOR

COPR. 1933, CENTURY, INC.

Again Barrett was looking at Elinor with that humble, adoring look. He laid his hand upon Elinor's. He had to make a trip down town and Marcia volunteered to give him a lift. Before her husband left her unmoved, he said his goodbye to Elinor, kissing her and adding, "Don't forget me." He tried to make it seem a jolt but quite obviously it was more than that.

"It looks as if life were happy for you, Barry," Marcia commented after they were on their way.

"Happy doesn't half express it," he responded.

"I'm so glad," she commented. She seemed herself that she really was glad. And yet Barrett's infatuation, measured her. When she had been a child Barrett had always been willing to do anything to stop her tears. Now that was changed. A fool could see that Elinor ruled him, or could rule him if she wanted to.

When Barrett returned home at a bit after six he found Lida Stafford sitting with Elinor. As Lida greeted him she gave him a sly glance and a smile which he knew Elinor noted.

A little time passed and then Lida rose, "Tom is to see me tomorrow morning, will you, Barry?" she asked sweetly. There was cheerfulness with which I want help," again the sly glance.

It was a command, cloaked mockingly in the tone of an appeal.

Elinor and Barrett dined, Barrett played two games of chess, and then Barrett lead along Lida's uncle he had liked — and that he felt Elinor would like. On the surface the evening seemed as placid as many others they had shared but beneath the calm surface he felt Elinor's unspoken question. The thought chilled his heart.

Later that night when they were upstairs she called through the open door between their rooms, "Barry—"

"Yes, dear?" he answered. He knew at once that it was coming—the question he would rather not have her ask and to which he must respond with a lie.

"May I corde in, Barry?"

"Of course, dear."

He had taken off his coat and was fumbling with the studs in the front of his shirt as she entered. Elinor was swathed in a negligee of yellow chiffon. It was the color most becoming to her, setting high lights of gold dancing in her hair.

She sat down on a low stool and watched him frowning at himself in the mirror.

"These things are obstinate," he murmured. Then, triumphantly, "There we are!"

He was hoping that he could divert her. He did not want her to ask, "What makes mother look at you the way she does, Barry?" If she asked that, or anything like that he would have to find some way of lying.

Her smile became a trifle stiff and he saw that her eyes were wistful, frightened. Always before when she had come into his room he had dropped everything to welcome her.

Elinor noted his preoccupation. She told herself that she should have realized his devotion, all those little attentions, could not last.

"Barry," she began again.

"Yes, darling?"

"Barry, what make, mother—I don't know just how to express it —but why does she look at you so slyly sometimes? The way she did this afternoon? It's almost as though there was something you and she knew that was a secret."

"Lord dear you know your mother better than I do! How would I know why she does anything?"

"I don't know why I asked," Elinor said slowly, "but I thought you did know, Barry. I remember I've felt that you did. I don't know how to express it but I thought I could see avesion—or shrinking —in your face. These last few weeks I've thought just by looking at you. You have such an honest face, Barrett."

He hoped he did not—at the moment. But it was true. And Elinor had seen that he was hiding something from her. She had seen that he was ashamed of the deception, too. He couldn't tell her that he and Lida had no secrets because that wouldn't be true. And he could not tell her the truth because of his promise to Marcia.

There was nothing for Barrett to do but curse the luck that had led him into such a trap.

CHAPTER XLI

Elinor rose slowly. She felt suddenly plunged back into the old existence of deceits and dishonesty, wishing so haughty that codes might be right and true, yet being certain they never were.

"Barry," she said, "I can't live if things aren't—as they seem. You know how entirely my heart is yours—"

"Of course I do!" he exclaimed. He caught her in his arms to kiss her haughty.

As suddenly as it had swept her, her fear faded. She laughed. "It's just that I've been worrying about nothing at all, isn't it?"

He nodded, face pressed against her throat and hidden there. He didn't want her to read his eyes, revealing his terror at what she might think if she knew about Gerald. He had never broken a promise but he did not see how he could keep the one he had made Marcia if keeping it should make Elinor unhappy.

"I didn't understand mother's look, dearest, but it was foolish of me to take her seriously," she admitted.

"Yes, darling, it was."

"It bothered me all evening—"

"Darling!"

"You do love me?"

"You know I do!" he faltered, tightening his arms about her.

And that was the end of the matter—for the time.

It was on a day in early July that Lida decided it was for "duty" to tell Elinor the entire story. Lida had always been capable of turning a trick to a moral necessity. She had felt the scorn Barrett could not keep from showing for her and this was to be her revenge.

Never had any man looked at her as Barrett had—her daughter's husband, her son-in-law! His eyes, whenever they met hers, were remindful of hatred. He could not have shown more aversion to a beggar on the seat.

Lida assured herself that under the circumstances Elinor would be able to extract from Barrett a huge amount of alimony. This done, Lida was sure she could have about what she wished. Elinor hated quarreling over money—hated quarreling over anything at all. She would do anything to maintain peace.

"She must leave him! He isn't fit to be her husband!" Lida thought. "She must be brave and stand by her rights!"

But Elinor did not comply with Lida's suggestions. She received her mother in the drawing room. What was a beginning that Lida, who wanted a boudoir intimacy in her daughter's house, did not like.

"It's urgent, dear," Lida said as she sat down.—"Why don't you get away?"

"Barrett has to be in town just now. He's helping Doctor Patrick," Elinor answered. It was for her a wholly convincing reason.

What had her mother come for? Elinor, who knew her so well, was aware that when Lida seemed concerned about anyone it was likely to produce a pain in the neck. Her eyes grew troubled as she waited.

"I'll have Higgins bring us some iced tea," she suggested, hoping she could divert her mother.

"Not at present, dear. I haven't time. I have a few words I must say to you and I want to catch a train at five for Bellport."

Elinor sat back and Lida began The color faded from the girl's cheeks. She closed her eyes a moment, then opened them. It was true that each week Barrett went away for a long day. Objects in the room that she knew well became suddenly remote and misted. She must not let her mother see what this talk was doing to her.

"All that I want," Elinor heard Lida saying, "is to help you in your struggle toward truth. You must leave this man, build a strong life for yourself! And I will help you—"

Lida was astounded then to hear Elinor laugh. A long, unsteady, almost hysterical laugh. Lida could not believe her ears.

"Why, Elinor!" she exclaimed. "I don't understand you at all!"

"No, of course not, Mother. I am not going to leave Barrett. You would, didn't you? And I suppose you thought I'd collect a huge sum of alimony—"

"He certainly should support you after he's wronged you so!"

"I am not going to leave him and that's final. No decent woman would leave a man who has done as much for her as Barrett has for me! Everyone would know about it if I did that! The story would get out. Later perhaps I will, but not now. And I think you'll have to excuse me now. The less is bothering me at this time—"

Higgins let Mrs. Stafford out of the house. His stony expression did not change as she smiled at him condescendingly. Higgins had seen Elinor go up the stairs and knew something was amiss. He was certain that the mother had said something cruel to her and Higgins was devoted to Elinor.

As soon as the door closed the butler hurried up the stairs. "Mrs. Colvin," he said after tapping at her door, "can I bring you a glass of iced tea and some sandwiches?"

He waited a long minute. They came steadily once the answer: "Thank you, Higgins, but not now. I'm not feeling very well. I don't want to be disturbed, Higgins, please—"

"Yes Mrs. Colvin. Certainly," he replied, sure that his suspicions had been correct. Mrs. Stafford had said something cruel to Mrs. Colvin. Higgins went slowly down the stairs.

Barrett came in eagerly a little before six. He had been gone since early morning. He had mislaid the tea hour with Elinor and was eager to see her. He had been helping a group of archeologists lay their plans for a trip to a part of South America which he had once longed to visit. Now his mild interests in their plans showed him how genuinely he had been changed by Elinor and his adoration of her.

The house seemed unusually quiet. "Where is Mrs. Colvin?" he asked Higgins.

"She is in her room Mr. Barrett. Mrs. Stafford called and Mrs. Colvin excused herself. She went to lie down and asked not to be disturbed."

Barrett's face lost color. He hesitated a moment and then, all his eagerness drained from him by fear, mounted the stairs.

He tapped on the door that was cloed between their rooms, heard Elinor say, "Come in if it's you, Barrett."

Not "dearest" or "Barry," but "Barrett".

He opened the door. She was standing by a window in the yellow negligee, by a window. He saw that her hands were tightly gripped and knew that if he could touch them he would find them cold in spite of the day's heat.

"I'd rather you didn't kiss me, please," she said breathlessly as he neared her.

"You may be quite certain," he said, "that I never shall unless you would much rather I would. I think you know that?"

"Yes, I do," she answered. There was a pause and then Elinor said slowly "Mother's— told me."

SEPT 20 MR. AND MRS. AIN'T IT THE TRUTH

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Blake did not run his sword through his fallen foe as the crowd expected. Instead, looking up at Prince Gobred, he said: "Here is a brave knight with whom I have no real quarrel. I spare him to your service, noble Prince—and to those who love him," and his eyes went straight to the eyes of the Princess Guinalda. Then he turned and walked back along the front of the grandstand to his own tilt.

Knights, ladies, men-at-arms, freemen and serfs stood upon their seats and shouted their applause. The men in Blake's tilt, ashamed before, thus being detailed to what they believed to be the losing side, were proud grins and now looked upon Jimmy as the greatest hero in Mimmr. As Blake was being divested of his armor, Sir Richard said: "Thou hast done a noble thing, my friend, but I know not if it be a wise one."

"You didn't think I would stick the poor mutt when he was down, did you?" demanded Blake. "'Tis what I would have done to me had the positions been reversed," said Richard, "His jealousy at thee will be by no means lessened by what has transpired this day. Thou hast added envy to his hatred and thou hast overpowered him. Sir Malud will never forgive thee, my friend, I know the man."

That night a feast was held in the huge hall of the castle. In all presented a wild and fascinating sight to Sir Jimmy Blake. Towards its end the Prince himself proposed a toast to "Sir James, our most noble and chivalrous knight of Mimmr." Blake's eyes looked toward Guinalda. He saw her stand and drink the toast, her eyes regarding him. But whether her glances carried a message of friendship or disdain, he could not tell.

MARYSVILLE RESIDENT INJURED IN CRASH

Car Telescopes Truck Marysville Resident is Critically Injured

Don Tullock And Passengers In Car All Receive Injuries

ONE KILLED

Truck Halted On Hill Due To Faulty Lights

Toronto, Sept. 21.—(CP)—One man was killed, another hurt perhaps fatally and four other persons, including a woman, were in Port Hope Hospital following an accident on the highway west of Welcome early today.

A car driven by Donald Tullock of Marysville crashed into a transport truck parked on the highway and was telescoped. George Brown 48, of Sharpley Corner, was instantly killed and the other five passengers were rushed to the hospital in an unconscious condition, the driver of the car reported to be dying.

In addition to the driver the injured were Mrs. Tullock, his wife, who suffered severe face lacerations; Earl Tweer of Marysville, fractured cheekbone and face cuts; Mrs. Jessie Wrese of Selby, contused hip, and her son, Donald, cut and bruised.

The transport truck was driven by Fred Sanders of Toronto, who was climbing a hill, when his lights failed. The driver signalled to traffic with a flashlight and told police the wrecked car had been signalled in this manner.

Pending the inquest, the date of which has not been fixed, the police intimated no charge would be laid against Sanders.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR INTERCEDES IN STRIKE

Stratford, Ont., Sept. 21 (CP)—Chief conciliation officer W. H. Campbell of the Department of Labor was expected here today from Ottawa to investigate a weekold strike that has tied up production in the city's furniture factories and caused 800 workers to take a holiday.

Meanwhile no sign was seen that differences between employer, who want higher wages, better working conditions and recognition of the Furniture and Chesterfield Workers Union, and factory owners were near settlement.

News Flashes

Oklahoma City, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Fred Coleman, son of T. M. Coleman, at whose farm near Stratford, Okla., the Government alleges the Charles F. Urschel kidnapping plot was hatched, told Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught today that George "Machine Gun" Kelly appeared at the Coleman farm last night and threatened death to the Colemans and the Shannons.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—(CP)—Start of their attempt to break the world's long-distance non-stop flying record is not likely before next week, said Captain Leigh Mallory today. With his wife, the former Amy Johnson, the noted long-distance flier does not expect to be able to take the plane, piloted by Seafarer II, to Wasaga Beach for the take-off for two or three days in view of the unsettled weather in this district. Their objective is Baghdad, Iraq.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—(CP)—The first snow of the season fell in Toronto today, but it was a wet variety. While office workers in the upper storys of skyscrapers marvelled at the reappearance of the flakes, persons in the streets below turned up their collars and wished what looked like a cold rain.

Edinburgh, Scotland, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Sir Thomas Hudson Beare Wright, general manager of the Royal Bank of Scotland and one of Scotland's most prominent men, died suddenly today at the age of 71.

Oshawa, Ont., Sept. 21.—(CP)—It was reported here today the missing baby, Patricia Gail Campbell, sought by United States' patrol craft since it broke adrift in Lake Ontario last night with four men aboard, had been picked up by an unidentified vessel.

Washington, Sept. 21.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's decision to resign routine today at the White House completely recovered from the cold and slight fever which bothered him the early part of the week.

SCHOOL DISPLAY

Midway And Frankford Band Assist In Entertainment

Threatening weather and a rather heavy shower shortly after the noon hour on Wednesday, had the effect of lessening the usual large attendance at the annual Fair at Stirling, held under the auspices of the Agricultural Society of that village. The officers had spared no effort to make this one of the best fairs in the county and deserved a larger patronage.

The display in the main building was all that could have been desired and the various exhibitors showed the greater number of visitors present. It was arranged in a most attractive manner and was without doubt one of the best showings made by exhibitors. Upon entering the western entrance the cheese exhibit was first seen, consisting of 28 boxes and the judges had an easy task in marking their awards.

Wood-work Display

A fine display was that made by the supply firm of Ketcheson & Co. of the village, consisting of magazine holders, hardiness stands, book-ends, pen and pencil holders, tie racks, bread cutting boards, coping saw work, match holders and window lifts. Some art work of a worthy nature was also to be seen.

Exhibits that attracted special attention from the fair sex was the ladies' work, home baking and can-

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Edmonton, Sept. 21.—(CP)—Here's a story about a cat with marathon abilities. Civic staff of Edmonton, on May 24 took a cat, a big yellow Tom, to his hometown at Burtonsville, 9 miles from here. Yesterday the cat returned to the Edmonton home; a little thinner perhaps, but still lively.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 21.—(CP)—A. M. Dunnavan, 74, a farmer of Rochester, Ill., was shot by a chicken.

To protect himself against chickens that have flown up a contraption he figured would cramp the style of any chicken-stealer, A. Bass, Lancaster farmer, the yard flew against a string attached to the trigger of a gun thereby discharging it.

Fatherland May Demand Return of German Film Colony in Hollywood

Hollywood, Calif. Sept. 21 (CP)—German members of the film colony regarded with concern today a report from Berlin that a move was on foot to demand their return to the Fatherland to participate in a "cultural rebirth" of the nation.

Marlene Dietrich, Dorothea Wieck, Ernst Lubitsch and many other Hollywood celebrities would be affected by the order now being considered by the Filmreichsdramaschrift, the controlling motion picture body of the Reich, and said to be favored by Adolf Hitler.

Miss Wieck, heroine of "Maedchan in Uniform," indicated she would oppose the move.

"Before I left Germany" she said, "I obligated myself, if Paramount chose, to remain in Hollywood for a definite term of five years."

Miss Dietrich sailed from France today on her return here. Studio officials said they regarded it as significant that Miss Dietrich did not visit her homeland this year but spent most of her vacation in Paris.

Lubitsch already has taken steps to become an American citizen, a

BYRD READY FOR SECOND EXPEDITION INTO FRIGID ANTARCTIC

Final arrangements are being made by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, well known explorer, for his second expedition to the Antarctic and Little America, which he discovered and named on his first voyage into the frigid regions. The party will travel as far as possible aboard the Bear, centre, and complete the trip by short airplane, right. Byrd is shown standing second from right in front of the plane. The expedition is scheduled to start from Boston on Sept. 25. Seventy men will comprise the party.

JACKSON IS FOUND GUILTY

Receives With Stoic Calm Sentence To Be Hanged November 29th

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 21.—(CP)—For the second time in less than a year Edward Jackson, big Millbrook farmer, today was under sentence to be hanged for the murder of Eugene Lee, his negro pal, who died of bullet wounds after a quarrel between the two men in Dummer Township last autumn.

Jackson, 42 years old, stood in the prisoner's dock in this town here yesterday and listened with stoic calm to the verdict of a jury, that confirmed a death sentence passed upon him at a previous trial which he appealed. He betrayed no emotion when Mr. Justice Eric Armour set November 29th as the day he must be executed. The jury took an hour and a half to reach its verdict.

The Crown produced only one eye-witness to the shooting, 12-year-old Ruby Sallern, who said she saw Jackson empty a pistol at Lee although Lee had made no move to threaten him. Ruby is a son, on the stand in his own behalf, declared he had shot his partner, when he saw him reach for an automatic pistol he carried, in a trousser pocket. Lee, he said, did not groan or fall at the first shot but he emptied his own gun at Lee. He claimed he lunged at Lee but was pushed backwards over the wheel of a truck standing in the Sallern farm yard, where they had been working. No one saw him shoot, he said.

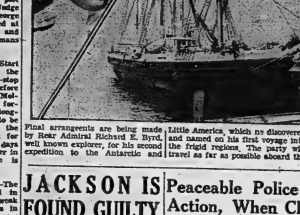
Walter Pierce and William Sallern, Jr., defence witnesses, both said they had heard Lee declare he would shoot Jackson some time.

Jackson said they quarrelled because he refused to get Lee, and cement with which to complete the foundation of a house they were building.

DOCK AGAIN USED

Leamington, Ont., Sept. 21 (CP)—This Great Lakes shipping port, quiet for many years, came back to life today as two fast freighters, the City of Windsor and the Winnipeg steamed into the new harbor, salut ed and unloaded cargoes of flour.

At noon Hon. H. A. Stewart, Dominion Minister of Public Works, formally declared open the new dock in the presence of Hon. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Minister, and Public Works and hundreds of citizens released balloons which bore figures of a gun thereby discharging it.



Peaceable Police Dog Springs Into Action, When Clothes are Removed

"Byng", owned by a Gordon street resident, is ordinarily a friendly and peaceable police dog, but you can't fool him when it comes to looking after his boss' property.

On Wednesday a travel-stained and weary transient, whose unpatched clothes hung in tatters on a gaunt frame, and whose unshaven countenance bore a look of utter dejection, tapped hesitatingly on the back door of the Gordon street address. To the kindly housewife who appeared, he stammered his halting request for old clothes. "Any kind of old clothes your husband might have thrown away, lady," he begged. "It gets so cold these nights on the box cars," he elaborated.

Her considerate understanding around the housewife appeared with a large bundle. The cast-off outfit was complete from cap to cracked but still serviceable shoes. The transient was loud in his thanks.

Straight down the street marched the possessor of the bundle, in the direction of the old quarry, where the business of changing clothing would not be so noticeable. Stalking stiff-legged behind him, with a suspicious nose testing the air, came the unnoticed police dog from around the corner of the house. He espied the transient. He smelled also the unmistakable odor of his master's clothes. Something was wrong. With a bound the large dog cleared the remaining few feet and fastened his teeth on the hanging flaps of a loose coat tail. The surprised possessor of the clothing dropped the bundle, and fled with a shrill scream. The dog did not follow. He merely reserved the bundle of clothing intact, and proudly trotted back to Gordon street, home with his boss' clothes.

The transient did not response to claim his jealously guarded possessions.

JEWISH NEW YEAR FESTIVAL CELEBRATED AT SYNAGOGUE

Rabbi Gerstel Refers To Persecution Jews Subjected To

Hebrews, from the city and district congregated this (Thursday) morning at the Synagogue of the Sons of Jacob, to observe their New Year's celebration—the ushering in of the Jewish Year, 5694. From 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. continuous service was conducted by Rabbi Gerstel, assisted by Cantor Katz of Picton. Many of the congregation remained throughout the long ceremony, while others came and went during the morning.

The Festival of the New Year is one strictly to be observed by those of the Jewish faith, and the male portion of the assembly this morning wore about their shoulders the traditional tallit or shawl, into the texture of which proverbs and the history of the year, had been woven. Many of the men also wore skull caps, while the women of the congregation were garbed in black.

The Jewish New Year's ceremonies embrace the pledging anew their adherence to their religion, by the Hebrews, and to give a time for repentance and a time for the receiving of the gems of their ancient race. Ritual, little understood by the Gentile, is carried through with elaboration, prescribed prayers and hymns and embroideries being used on the occasion.

Spoke of Persecution

Rabbi Gerstel before reciting the past tribulations of the Jews, which still briefly of the persecutions of the race at the present day, speaking especially of the treatment the German Republic was meting out to members of his race at the present time. The sacred scrolls of the synagogue with their velvet silk embroidered coverings were with ceremony brought from their receptacle, placed on the altar and with like decorum returned to their cubicle after ceremonial use had been made of them. At various portions of recital, the men's horn was blown by the Rabbi and throughout the morning members of the congregation, from time to time, joined the priest in lamentations, chanting, responses and singing.

WILEY POST IS INJURED

His Plane, Winnie Mae, Crashed As He Was Taking Off

Quincy, Ill., Sept. 21 (AP) — Wiley Post, round-the-world flyer, and his seventy injured when his plane, the Winnie Mae, crashed today as the local airport as he was taking off.

Post was rushed to a hospital, where Dr. E. L. Caddick said his injuries were severe but not critical.

The Winnie Mae, in which Post flew around the world in seven days, 18 hours and 50 seconds, will have to be rebuilt.

"The crash occurred while Post, his left eye covered with hair of his left eye covered with hair of his eyebrow. His shoulder also was injured, but apparently there were no fractures.

Post was able to crawl unassisted from the wreckage when he first became around the world and to suffer the damage of his first serious accident.

DETECTIVES REMANDED ON PLEA NOT GUILTY

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)—Three of the four detective-sergeants arraigned at the fall assizes on charges of shooting with intent to murder in connection with the bank hold-up here three years ago when Albert Dorland and William Toohey were arrested, today appeared before Mr. Justice Jeffery, pleaded not guilty and were remanded on bail of $2,000 each.

Detective-Sergeant James S. Thompson, who is ill, did not appear and bail was supplied by defense counsel. The three appearing were George F. Tuft, Patrick Hogan and Alexander McCabe.

LOST HOLD ON SWINGING ARM

Portuguese Deckhand Is Crushed Between Canal Wall And Vessel

Port Colborne, Ont., Sept. 21 — Loosing his hold on the swinging arm, Sam Rodergio Mariano, Portuguese deckhand on the Portuguese steamship Baracca, fell between the walls of Lock Eight of the Welland Canal today at Humberstone and the side of the vessel and was crushed to death.

The body was recovered a short time later by the Port Colborne fire fighting crew. The victim was being swung from the steamer to the dock to attach tie ropes to a mishing post when he lost his hold.

WARSHIPS OF U. S IN CUBAN WATERS

Complete Preparations to Withstand Revolt

Havana, Sept. 21 (AP)—Two American warships drew in close to the city today as the revolutionary born regime set up 11 days ago made hurried but complete preparations to withstand a rumored revolt.

The vessels, which came here to protect American lives and interests, at once established heliographic communication, using light atop the United States Embassy and aboard the craft.

WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)—The weather has been unsettled and showery from the Great Lakes eastward with moderate to heavy rains in Quebec and West Maritimes. Elsewhere in the Dominion it has been fair throughout the Western Provinces with a tendency to higher temperature in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Northern Ontario—Fresh northerly winds; mostly cloudy and cool; a few scattering showers in southern portion. Friday, northerly winds; partly cloudy and cool.

Ottawa and Upper St. Lawrence Valley—Cloudy and cool today and Friday with some light local rain from northerly winds on Friday.

Lake Superior— Decreasing northeast winds; not much change in temperature.

Georgian and Rainy River — Fresh southerly winds; fair and somewhat warmer.

Saskatchewan—Fresh winds; mostly west and northwest; partly cloudy and becoming somewhat cooler.

Manitoba—Fresh winds; mostly fair and somewhat warmer.

Alberta—Partly cloudy and somewhat cooler, with scattered showers.

Thanking Jurors for Acquittal, Jury Realize They Signed Wrong Form

Robinson, Ill., Sept. 21 (CP)—The Judge had read a verdict of "not guilty" and Rose Vanella of Robinson, accused of assault with a deadly weapon, had stepped happily to the jury box, thanking each juror and shaking his hand for the acquittal.

But the jurors were surprised. The defendant grasped their hands. He looked into expressions of bewilderment.

"Something wrong here judge," the foreman spoke up, "we didn't vote 'not guilty'."

Investigation disclosed the jurors had signed the wrong form at the end of their deliberations.

Vanella was taken back into custody. He was arrested again and in his room and in a few minutes retrieved with a verdict of guilty.

Trades and Labor Party Reaffirms Policy to Aid Unemployed in Fight

Government Should Provide Certain Living Standard

THREE SOLUTIONS

Convention Approves Proposals of Former Conventions

By JACK HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 21.—(CP)—With a reaffirmation of its federal policy on unemployment, the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada today pledged itself to continue the fight on behalf of the jobless.

"Labor has never claimed it is the duty of Governments to paternally provide every man and woman with the necessities of life, but it does demand, that for every normally fit man and woman there should be opportunity for employment for wages, which will enable them to maintain a proper standard of living," was the position taken by the Convention here.

"And if private enterprise fails in this respect then it does become the duty of Governments to see that some are compelled either to starve or become paupers."

Labor seeks action in three ways:

1. By provision of work to eliminate unemployment, wherever it is.

2. By provision of the necessities of life for the destitute, and

3. Measures to cope with future unemployment in an organized manner and prevent its recurrence in the greatest possible degree.

Three Solutions Offered

The organization is again approving the policy adopted at preceding conventions declaring the proposals had been formulated to bring about greater mass consuming power by the raising of the standards of living in all countries, always consistent with the protection of consumers against exploitation.

Generally, labor requests, reduced hours of labor, stabilization of employment, preservation of opportunities for work, protection for misfit workers, unemployment insurance, control over industry through public ownership and Democratic management of all public utilities.

For several hours numerous delegates today expressed their confidence in the actions of the executive of the Congress in the battle to find men work. Several resolutions were adopted, principal dissultion rendering on one which urged the Dominion, Provincial and Municipal Governments to initiate building programmes.

HIGH TREASON CHARGE LAID

Firing of Reichstag Is Relegated To Minor Position

Leipsig, Germany, Sept. 21.—(CP) and AP cable)—An indictment that accused "high treason" and relegated to a subordinate position charges of firing the Reichstag Building was delivered against five men in the German Supreme court today.

Martinus Van der Lubbe, 24-year-old brick mason and chief defendant, was led into court, handcuffed, starting ahead accidently. He was first to be called to the stand. His answers were often inaudible and often incoherent.

The prosecutor at the outset represented Van Der Lubbe as a shiftless person ,who occasionel himself a born revolutionary leader. Van Der Lubbe denied outright, that he was a Communist but at this, point the court intervened to clarify misunderstandings and detached themselves from their party that they might have a free hand.

Ontario's Social Legislation Second to None, Says Henry

Health And Welfare of Every Child Special Care of Gov't

By Frank Flaherty, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Rainy River, Ont., Sept. 21 — Declaring that the province of Ontario stands second to no state in the world in safeguarding child education, Premier George S. Henry told the crowd that the Ontario Conservative government would not rest until every child in the province became the special care of the public authorities.

The Premier concluded the first half of his tour of north-western Ontario last night and left for Dryden, where he will take a train for Kenora and other more northern points.

On a visit to Canada, Mr. Henry said, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain had expressed surprise at the extent to which the Dominion government had gone in social legislation. The British Labor Premier had admitted the Conservative government in Ontario had gone in socialism than the Labor government in Great Britain.

In outlining the province's progress in social legislation, Mr. Henry dealt with public health, Workmen's Compensation, Old Age Pensions, Mothers' Allowances and Education. Through its health department the government had now provided present hospital facilities to protect as much as practically all the needs of the people. Except for one or two districts, the same could be said of tuberculosis sanitoria and mental hospitals. The dread disease of diphtheria had been practically stamped out and tuberculosis had been greatly reduced. Special treatment for cases of cancer and diabetes were provided rich and poor alike.

City and District News

EGGS TAKE JUMP ON MIDWEEK MART

Thursday's market saw a slight increase in the price of eggs, selling at 20c a dozen. No other variation in prices was noted, with fruits and vegetables selling at usual prices. Water melons and cantaloupes were offered as were plums, pears, peaches and apples. The usual amount of vegetables was to be seen.

FARMERS WELCOME EARLY FALL RAINS

A cold rain which pattered over the district early Thursday morning from one-thirty until daybreak was not so unwelcome in the opinion of farmers and market gardeners. The one-quarter inch of fall that was received was declared to have a beneficial effect on the growing crops, and to the soil. Thursday was four points colder than on Wednesday, with the highest mark being registered at 48 degrees, during the night the lowest registration reached was 33.

DREDGE MOVES UP TO TRENTON HARBOR

The large dredge, complete with barges and scows, which has been at work in the local harbor during the past summer, moved up the bay to Trenton early Thursday morning where the equipment is expected to be used in deepening that port's harbor. For the present channel and harbor dredging in this city has been concluded, although representation is being made at Ottawa by the local Harbor Commission for further work of deepening in line with harbor improvement.

SLIGHT DAMAGE TO SEAT OF TRUCK

Firemen of No. 1 Station were given a short run to Bridge street, upper Front street late Wednesday afternoon where a slight blaze in the seat cushion of a coal confectioner's truck threatened to ignite the machine. The blaze was readily extinguished with a chemical pump.

ROUGH WEATHER IS AID TO HUNTING

Duck shooting is getting better with the recent advent of rougher weather and is of it no colder weather and is of it the testimony to the large number of local hunters, who make their regular morning visits to the nearby marshes, numbers of sales of gun licenses still continue to soar. To date in this neighborhood of two hundred permits have been issued at the office of Mr. J. J. Weber, with no indication of any decrease in the number being noticed. It is expected, that with the harvest of deer and partridge hunting season the sale of permits will be heavier still.

RESIDENTS GUARD THEIR MILK SUPPLY

Residents of the north end of the city have come extra precautions lately to protect their morning milk supply. During the past few days the increasing frequence of the mysterious disappearances of their milk bottles from back doors has led to closer watch. The increasing number of transients passing through the district has real these days is blamed for the situations.

50,000 BARRELS FROM THIS SECTION

Residents of the British Isles, the best customers of the product from Canadian apple trees, will munch the luscious fruit to the tune of over fifty thousand barrels from this section alone, according to Mr. Geo. F. Ostrom, local produce buyer and shipper. A conservative estimate of the number of barrels of the fruit shipped by him alone during the present season will be in the neighborhood of thirty thousand barrels, while other shipments of eastern and western sections of the district will add materially to this number. The apples this year will be the cream of the most perfect crop witnessed in this section in years, and will be shipped from this city by Mr. Ostrom by water route, as far as convenient. A few shipments have already been loaded.

BALLAST BAG OF BALLOON PICKED UP

An echo of the wild flight of the Polish balloon which participated in the Gordon Bennett balloon race from Chicago on September 11, and which passed over this district in its uncontrolled passage, containing its two passengers, Captain Frankiek and side, to land in the wilderness of the Laurentian Mountains in Quebec some days later was revealed this week with the finding of one of the ballast bags of the balloon near Bancroft. The sand bag which was found from the balloon in an effort to gain altitude while passing over the district was picked up by one of the patrolmen of the Ontario Forestry Branch and forwarded to headquarters.

LICENSES ARE NOT EAGERLY SOUGHT

Following the initial rush of car owners during the fore part of the month to secure their licenses for cars and trucks at half-price, the annual custom after September 1 some evidence of a slackening of in number of applicants at the office of the local issuer, Mr. Geo. F. Ketcheson, was noted this week. Although the number of half-price licenses, that have been issued during the past three weeks has reached a tidy figure, the total does not compare with the number issued over the same period one year ago, it was reported.

CASHEL W. I.

The meeting of the Cashel W. I. met on September 8th in the school house. The president, Mrs. Walter Cross, presided. The meeting opened by singing the Institute ode and repeating the Lord's prayer in unison. Ten members answered the roll call. Minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted.

There was an exhibition of canned vegetables by the members. Mrs. James Haggerty won first place, Mrs. Wesley Drinkwater, second prize, and Mrs. Bert Living-ston, third prize. The judges for the contest were Mrs. James Spracklett and Mrs. Bert Dafoe.

Number of visitors present were 19. Community singing was indulged in and a good musical programme was enjoyed.

On the following Friday the Institute held a corn and weiner roast at W. J. Cross'. Everybody enjoyed lots of corn and weiners, and also a good programme.

LATE ISAAC N. LANSING

Isaac Newton Lansing, son of the late Gabriel and Hannah Mary Lansing, was born in Hallowell township, Ontario, June 13th., 1865, and met his untimely death August 13th, 1933 at Herrick, Michigan, two days after returning from a trip visiting relatives in Ontario and Quebec.

July 1st, 1891, he was united in marriage to Nettie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Ridd, of Vernon township. To this union were born four children, Mrs. Ross (Ida) Mayfancy, Two daughters, Mrs. R. A. Dawson, of Ferndale, and Miss Marjorie, of Saginaw, who together with his wife, one grandson, Robt. Dawson, and one brother, J. D. Lansing, with a host of friends and relatives are left to mourn their loss. Two brothers, Will and John, and two sisters, Malissa and Christina, predeceased the deceased, Mr. Lansing was one of the few remaining pioneers of Wellington township, Isabella county. He came to Michigan in 1890 when roads were few but hearts were warm. He lived to see the community develop from trail to a wilderness to a paved highway through his farm, by the time of his death Herrick and Chester's death in 1861 the remains had to be carried a distance of nearly two miles until it could be taken by a team and wagon to Chester. Grove cemetery.

The deceased served for several years as deputy sheriff of Isabella county and was highly respected in the community in which he lived. He will be greatly missed by his family and neighbors and the children whom he loved.

The funeral service was conducted at his farm residence Sunday afternoon by Rev. J. E. Lockyer of the Methodist Church.

The many friends who came to pay their last respects to him and the beautiful flowers gave silent testimony to the esteem he was held.

The remains were carried to their final resting place in Cherry Grove cemetery, nephews and laid to rest amid a bower of flowers.

FRANK E. HANNAH

Following an illness of a year's duration, the death occurred Wednesday evening in the Belleville General Hospital of Frank E. Hannah, 57 Bonter Street. Born in Mayo township 54 years ago, the deceased was the son of the late Robert and Margaret Hannah. For a number of years the late Mr. Hannah resided in Saskatchewan and for the past six years had made his home in this city. He was a member of the United Church and an employee of the Canadian National Railways.

Surviving are his widow (previous to marriage, Miss Charlotte Conely, daughter of the late Joseph and Elizabeth Conely of Stirling), a son, Clinton, and two daughters, Winnifred Bernice, all at home; two brothers, James and William, and three sisters, Effie, Catherine and Jenny.

MISS PAULINE HOWDEN

Following a lengthy illness, the death occurred this (Thursday) morning, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Charles Wilmot, Trent Road, of Miss Pauline Howden. Miss Howden was the elder daughter of the late Mark and Mrs. R. Howden of Port Hope. For some time she had made her home with her sister here and had many friends throughout the community.

Puts An End To Bunion Pains

No Need to Suffer Another Day

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to reduce inflammation of bunion joints and keep the pain from them down to normal and that is to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning.

Ask Doyle's Drug Store or Dolan Bros. Drugists or any first class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces last a long time and furthermore a little bottle of Emerald Oil does not give you complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

Special note: People, who want to reduce swollen or varicose veins should get a bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at once. Apply night and morning as directed they will quickly note the improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

MOHAWK FAIR REAL SUCCESS

Largest Attendance In Years Shows Interest In Exhibition

Marked by the exhibits and the largest attendance in years, the third annual fair of the Bay of Quinte Mohawk Agricultural Society, held at the Council House on the Indian Reserve, Tyendinaga, Wednesday, was a huge success. At one time 1000 cars were counted on the roads and in the fields in the proximity of the grounds where the event was held.

The loyal subjects of the British throne, gathered in hundreds from throughout the Bay of Quinte district to be present at the great Indian agricultural exhibition, sponsored, arranged and so well carried through by their loyal chief, the Mohawk tribe, located on the Tyendinaga Reserve. Early morning and noontime many of the Indians from the western, northern and southern sections of the district were present on the local streets en route to the fair.

Everything went off splendidly and officers and directors as well as visitors are well satisfied with the 1933 effort of the society, and credit unstintingly goes to those who had charge of the arrangements.

MRS. SPARLING HEADS PRESTO MUSICAL CLUB

Musical Organization Plans for an Active Season

The opening meeting of the Presto Musical Club was held at the home of Mrs. A. E. McColl, Church street, Wednesday evening, September 20th. The following officers were elected for the coming season:

Hon President—Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sparling.

President—Mrs. W. Sparling.

Vice-President—Miss Bessie Ketchum.

Secretary Treasurer—Miss Bessie Anglin.

Advisory Board—Mrs. F. E. Houston, Mrs. E. M. Hubbs, Miss Helen Potter.

Mr. Wm. Connor, M.A., guest of the club, favored the members with several piano selections.

The Club expects to bring a guest artist, Paul le Marky, pianist, to the city in the near future when the citizens of Belleville will have an opportunity to hear him. A social hour was enjoyed before the closing of the meeting.

Purposes of Life, Help Given by O. B. C. Told By a Former Student In a Masterful Address

Students at the Ontario Business College were privileged Wednesday to hear an address by a graduate of the College, Mr. S. T. Van Blaricom, of St. Louis, Missouri, who with his wife, is visiting friends in this vicinity. Mr. Van Blaricom was born at Morganson, Ontario, and attended the Ontario Business College, where he obtained his commercial education. Later he took Horace Greeley's advice, "Go West" and made good.

Mr. Van Blaricom in addressing principal I. L. Moore and students said:

"Mr. Moore, I am pleased beyond expression for the courtesy you have extended to me of addressing these students. Looking around this place I observe groups of student bodies many of which I was familiar with when I graduated here in 1894, 39 years ago.

"Your good President, Mr. Moore, has said we should not put any limit on any subject I choose to talk to you, so if you will pardon me for being personal, I will take very briefly on a few things about myself.

Early Hardships

"I was one of the sons of a large family born on the Morganstown, Ontario; my mother died when I was nine years old, and at about fifteen my father died. These were hard years. Directly after his death the home was dissolved, leaving the family to drift for themselves.

"I went to a neighbor's farm for a few months, then went to New York State, where I came in contact with all sorts of people, and got many hard knocks. I realized myself I was very lacking in business knowledge. I only had a Common School education. Learning, which was far from being sufficient to cope with the problems of life. I had just discovered I would be compelled to tackle. I had no money and had resolved to be no way to acquire any in a big city, so I left for Oakland and got work. I was familiar with farming, earning enough money to return here and buy a scholarship and get down to business.

Lesson Learned

"Knowing a course in this college in Belleville, that I knew I could get through in a short time, I went at it with a determination to succeed. Such a thing as failure was not in the question and when I got my diploma I felt I had accomplished in equipping myself for any and all emergencies. My graduation and training here under the able leadership of Messrs Robinson and Johnson, two of the best men I have ever met, fitted me and I imagine I can see them here today, as always ready to lend a hand, and if I have been successful in life, and I feel I have succeeded fairly well, then I willingly give credit to those men and the Ontario Business College.

"It would be quite impossible in this age to say something strictly new. The best we can do or expect to do is to examine the experiences of the past and gather such thoughts and extracts, if possible, from ancient and aspiring minds. In the words of the poet:

"We gather honey from other men's flowers.

Then clothe it but the thread that binds them is ours. If any of you here today feel indifferent as to the purposes I will be pleased if what I say shall serve to awaken, to stimulate and to lead you to noble thoughts and actions and lead you to honor and success. Remember then I will feel amply repaid for my efforts.

POLICE COURT

Charged with committing common assault Harold Barnum of this city was found guilty, on two separate counts, when he appeared in the county jail on each charge, the sentences to run concurrently, when he appeared before Magistrate Mikel in Thursday's police court. On a further charge of intoxication Barnum pleaded guilty and was fined $15.00 and costs or in default of payment serve 21 days. The fine was being paid when Thursday's sentence will also run concurrently with the former one.

The assault charge was laid by Hattie Osborne and Ada Elliott, 1-3 Pinnacle street, when two women alleged that Barnum, while intoxicated, had come to their respective apartments and molested them. Barnum admitted calling on them, and asking her go for an automobile ride but, he declared the assault alleged. He was found guilty.

On the charge of intoxication Barnum had been arrested by Constable Thompson late last night, when he called at the officer's home in an intoxicated condition.

Harry Caswell was before the officer's house and knocked at the door for could not be secured.

Following the regular court proceedings Mr. W. Cassell, Toronto, a brother, of Harry Cassell, the man who was charged with attempting to steal gasoline in yesterday's police court appeared and asked for permission to take his father's car back to Toronto. Mr. W. Cassell informed the court, that Mary Mallory, whom yesterday Harry Cassell claimed as his wife, was not married to Harry Cassell but resided in Gananoque. The elder Mr. Cassell asked the court for permission to take the young lady home. This request was granted by Crown Attorney S.C. Donnan K.C., who assured Mr. Cassell, that the young lady in question would be returned to her parents, through the aid of the Children's Aid Society and the city of Belleville. The matter was left in the hands of Inspector Huston. In the meantime Harry Cassell will be held in custody pending an investigation relating to his past record.

SCHOOL FAIR AT STIRLING IS CURTAILED

Withdrawal of Grants By Municipalities Lessens Attendance

3 SCHOOLS COMPETE

Exhibits Not As Good As Former Years Due To Bad Season

Although pupils from schools in the Townships of Rawdon, Thurlow, Marmora, Tyendinaga, Sidney, Hungerford, Madoc, Wollaston, Huntingdon and the village of Stirling were represented in the various classes of exhibits at the championship school fair at Stirling yesterday only three schools were upon the grounds. They were S.S. No. 14 Rawdon, Miss Foley teacher; S.S. No. 10 Huntingdon, Lorne Anderson teacher, and S.S. No. 11, Rawdon. The cause for such a failing off of schools was due to the fact that grants this year were cut off by the County and other municipalities. The usual afternoon programme was curtailed only a parade of the three schools being made, with Rawdon (No. 14, first; Huntingdon No. 10, second; and Rawdon No. 11, third.

Mr. J. Wilson, the agricultural representative of Stirling, who has always taken a deep interest in these fairs was present to superintend the display and also the parade.

"Yes! I've missed years of fun, But I'm glad I waited ... FOR THIS RADIO

"Everyone said I was too critical . . . but my waiting was rewarded by a musical instrument that really does what I hoped radio could do."

"Without a radio, I've been an interested onlooker. Now I'm an owner . . . and a real fan.

"It's an odd thing—my attitude toward radio. I've always enjoyed it when at a friend's house . . . laughing with Ed Wynn . . . liking Eddy Vallée and his variety show . . . thrilling to Stokowski's Philadelphia Symphony.

"But I never bought it set. I always felt that my receiver should give me more from the great programs than my friends were hearing. According to them, I was waiting—mistakenly, they said—for the ultimate. Today, I'm glad I waited—I'm more than ever convinced I was right.

"What appealed to me about Victor 'Tona-lite' Radio was its crystal purity of tone no matter how low the volume . . . its business-like, all-round efficiency . . . its musical quality . . . and the feeling of great reserve power. Value, too. Of course, 'Tona-lite' Control is a big feature—it's wonderful to be able to see that you are hearing radio performance at the peak of perfection. But I bought my radio for one big reason—because it measures up in every respect to the demands I have so stubbornly made of my radio."

ADVERTISING CANADA ABROAD

After completing his seventh visit to the United Kingdom, Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium and France, J. K. Ross Duggan, editor of Canadian Trade Abroad, returns to Canada more than ever convinced that the Dominion stands in need of a more aggressive publicity policy if its products and tourist attractions are to be brought to the attention of the British people as they ought to be presented to them. That such action should be taken becomes even more advisable, he thinks, in view of the prospective abandonment of the Empire Marketing Board which in the course of its career devoted itself with considerable energy and not a little success to the increased consumption of Empire goods in the British market.

Says Mr. Ross Duggan: "One most regrettable feature has been the decision on the part of the Imperial Government to eliminate the Empire Marketing Board from October 1st, 1933. This action followed naturally from the adverse report of the Skelton Commission composed of representatives of all the Dominions regarding whose activities there has been considerable adverse comment. The Empire Marketing Board, particularly on its sales promotion side, has been one of the outstanding factors in developing the 'buy-Empire' spirit during the past eight years. The elimination of their activities is something which must be reckoned with as will it would seem apparent that the various Dominions, particularly Canada, will now have to embark upon a very strong and forceful publicity campaign in the United Kingdom in order to maintain the 'buy-Empire spirit' and to keep Canadan goods in front of British consumers.

"The publicity propaganda used by many of the Dominions and Great Britain was very noticeable. South Africa has publicized her fruits' campaign to very good effect and has also New Zealand. Melbourne, Australia, has already announced its centenary celebration for 1934. Australian butter, Australian wine, South African wine, and New Zealand butter and honey could be seen advertised on London buses and street cars. The local daily press carry advertisements of South African wine, Australian wine, Australian dried fruits, New Zealand honey, etc. The small stamp booklets issued by the post office contain good advertisements regarding New Zealand meat and New Zealand butter. Window displays of Empire goods were to be noticed along the Strand and in Trafalgar Square.

From the large stores like Harrod's, Army and Navy, Whiteley's, Barker's, etc., right down to the smallest retail stores in Whitechapel and Limehouse, there was to be noticed evidence of an Empire spirit. New Zealand butter and cheese, Australian apples and dried fruits, South African citrus fruits—all of them were advertised by little signs stuck on the products in the windows or affixed to the windows themselves.

"In passing, one noticed that although Canada was the premier Dominion of the Empire, yet the amount of publicity which she was obtaining was out of proportion to her position. It was surprising to find that the National Exhibition at Toronto was very little publicized or known. The forthcoming centenary celebration of Toronto has not yet received any press notices.

"With the exception of one of the largest steamship companies, there seems to be no effort made to attract tourists from Great Britain and Europe to Canada in order to avail themselves of the scenic wonders and beauties of this continent. On the other hand, many thousands of tourists have been induced to travel as far distant as South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand by judicious and well-planned tourist propaganda."

Even with the Empire Marketing Board in operation, various Dominions contributing to the food supply of the United Kingdom saw fit to carry on independent publicity campaigns in behalf of their products which made the latter widely known and which materially increased sales. With the board about to lapse, says the Brockville Recorder-Times, it becomes more desirable than ever that Canada should do something to attract attention to her resources and to promote the sale of her foodstuffs. If British tourists can be attracted to other parts of the Empire as far distant as South Africa and Australia, it ought to be possible to attract them to Canada, and if the goods of such Dominions as Australia, New Zealand and South Africa can be advertised on the buses and boardings of London and other cities throughout the United Kingdom, with profit to thosedominions, Canada can do likewise.

Passions are likened best to floods and streams; the shallow murmur, but the deep are dumb.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

SIDELIGHTS
GRAVE and GAY

IN VAIN

Through ages long have poets sought in vain
To find new themes to fit into their verses;
But love and death come back again, again,
Like old and much-worn coins in misers' purses.
In truth, life's gold which flows in endless streams
Is stamped with dies as old as man and singing;
There is the bright, new penny of a dream
And love, that larger coin old time keeps bringing.

But you and I and all the writing crew
In vain will search, to make our measures sweeter,
Some thought the laughing pagans never knew
Some fresh idea to fit a well-loved meter.
We would forget all songs men sung before!
But love and death return once more, once more!

EMPIRE TRADE AND THE BAY OF QUINTE ROUTE TO THE SEA is a slogan which is gaining friends every day, and the reason for greater things is gaining strength and momentum. Belleville has long been sold on the idea and Trenton is falling in line as its citizens see the great possibilities of being an ocean port. The St. Lawrence Waterway must come, with both Canada and the United States behind it—a mutual undertaking which is the lesse lusty young nations, and necessary to keep pace with the prosperity of the future of the great Canada which is to be. With this great project must be linked the opening of the Bay of Quinte to ocean navigation, which means something of a comparatively minor nature—particularly as the international waterway project will, no doubt, raise the water in the Bay considerably. In the meantime it is well to keep our wagon hitched to that bright star of promise and not only be ready when the time comes but ready a long time ahead so that there will be no slip-ups.

THAT THRILL OF ADVENTURE which draws people to the North and South Poles to freeze and starve and go blind in that desert of dazzling whiteness is a strange thing when they might be toasting their shins before the fire in a more temperate zone. Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, not satisfied with having flown over the North and South Poles, and having explored and found out most all there is to know about the Antarctic regions, is off again for the South Pole, sailing from Boston on September 25th. Good luck, Dick, go and God bless you, we are not a bit envious, knowing all about the Antarctic regions now that we care to know. Rather we are envious of the folks who announce that they intend spending the winter in Florida, California or Bermuda. However, it's probably all a matter of taste, and if Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd prefers to hibernate in Little America this winter, who will say him that privilege? He expects to be gone two years and will take seventy men with him. As in previous expeditions of this kind it is not probable that all will get back—the icy wastes of the North and South Poles always claim toll in human lives.

PICTON IS TRYING OUT the one-day Fair idea, and will open and shut the gates of their pretty Fair Grounds for one day only next week, crowding all the rush and bustle of the fall fair into small time compass with accelerated tempo. Oshawa tried the same thing this year and scored a decided success, finishing with a surplus. Picton has always had a good Fair and it is hoped that the one day experiment is favored with Fair weather.

"RUNNING WITH THE MACHINE" used to be a favorite sport in the days when volunteer firemen fought big and little fires with all the zeal of heroes, and all the boys of the village or town delighted to "run with the machine" and take a spell of pumping the water out of the tank or creek. Seems if the sport was being revived for whenever there is a fire or alarm of fire, a whole fleet of automobiles wheel in behind the fire apparatus, sometimes in front and join in a mad rush to the scene, frequently getting in the way of the firemen who are paid to do the job. Perhaps that is the reason the fire-bell is not rung any more, trying to keep the fires a dark secret from curious motorists.

Letters to The Editor

To Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir.—The article in Wednesday's paper headed "The Hotel Situation," is disturbing. Indeed. Can it be that Belleville is to lose its fine artificial ice rink and go back to rural status of rinks dependent upon the weather. Can it be that the youth of Belleville, who have grown accustomed to the convenience of good skating ice in all weathers protected from the vagaries of weather, and possibilities of accident on pond, river or bay, must return to open air rinks and the great open spaces of the Bay of Quinte?

It just does not make sense.

Belleville's fine rink is a civic asset and attracts thousands of people from outside the city for skating and hockey matches and entertainments of various kinds.

It is easy to understand that the directors, who have carried the project along up till the present, wish to be relieved. They are held individually and collectively responsible for the $18,000 due the bank —that means that the bank can collect the whole $18,000 from any one of the directors, and in the meantime each director has valuable securities tied up on account or rink obligations.

To lose the rink is unthinkable, a civic calamity. Surely a financial plan can be evolved which will save this very necessary civic institution for the benefit of the boys and girls who get health, exercise and enjoyment out of it, and for the older folks who also get enjoyment out of the rink on occasion.

Let's all get together and not permit this $100,000 civic institution to be scrapped when it can be saved for a few thousand dollars.

CIVIC PRIDE

Belleville, Ont. Sept. 21, 1933

Editor Ontario Intelligencer,

City.

Dear Sir.—I notice by the press that there is a possibility of the skating rink being closed owing to the removal of the ice freezing plant.

I am sure most of the young people, or our city would deplore the closing of this rink as it is the only provision made for skating in our city. The men who promoted and gave of their time and money towards the building of the rink did so with an altruistic motive. They fully realized that it could not be a profit making enterprise. They enlisted the sympathy and financial support of Mr. Wm. Hunter, and he, feeling that he would like to do something for his home city, contributed a large sum of money towards the building of this enterprise. He, no doubt, realized that it would not be a profit making enterprise but thought this would be a contribution on his part.

Our city has generously donated after the Driving Park Association, the Fair Board, the Bowling Club, and raised money to the amount of one hundred thousand dollars towards the buying of the Fair Grounds. The Driving Association only use the grounds for one or two weeks out of the year, and the Bowling Club during the summer months. We believe it is good business on the part or our city to provide for entertainment for the thousands of young people growing up in our city and it would be good business on the part of our City Council to raise the sum of thirty thousand dollars in order to make free the rink of its capital indebtedness. Other cities in the province have provided skating rinks, and have found dividends to cover the same. We know that our city is in good financial condition and will be relieved of a heavy indebtedness during the next two or three years. We hope our City Council will take this matter into consideration and provide the means to retain the ice plant in our new Arena.

Yours very truly,

FRED S. DEACON.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

SEPTEMBER 21, 1913

Messrs. Clifford Walker, W. H. Hudson, and Dr. Clarke have returned to the city after spending two weeks at the Corby Camp.

Messrs. Henry Johnson D. J. Fairfield and Stanley Vandervoort of this city attended the fair at Bancroft yesterday.

"A glee club is to be organized in connection with the high school.

Messrs. H. C. Earle and Percy Ketcheson are in Montreal on business.

Mr. Ewart Jones of this city, has accepted a position with the Haines Shoe House in Trenton.

Mr. Ed. Lee of Toronto, spent yesterday in the city with relatives.

Sheriff W. B. Morrison was in Bancroft yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McNally of Los Angeles, Cal., spent a few days here recently at the Hotel Quinte. They are on a tour of the world. Mrs. McNally was formerly Miss Susan Johnston of this city and she met many old friends while here.

Yesterday afternoon a six year old lad named Thompson, whose parents reside at the Victoria Hotel, fell into the river and no doubt would have drowned but for the prompt action of a boy named James McGoldrick. The little lad was being carried down the river when McGoldrick bravely jumped in and rescued him.

Mr. Fred Cook of Stratford is home on a visit.

Mr. E. C. Pascoe of Stratford, is in town on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Pascoe, Alexander Street.

Mr. Lee B. Riggs, son of Mr. W. R. Riggs of this city, has been appointed a member of the faculty of the Central College of Music at Indianapolis.

Mr. Angus Pringle will leave tomorrow for Montreal where he will attend McGill College.

Our reporter met Mr. Joseph Nevell, who resides on Geddes St., on Front Street yesterday morning and in a chat with him learned that thirty-nine years ago he was in very different scenes. He had landed in the Crimea a day or two before with the advance guard of the British Army of occupation. In the battle of the Alma Mr. Nevell was wounded three times and yesterday morning showed our reporter the honorable scars.

In the Forest and Stream Club's weekly rifle match yesterday the scores were: S. W. Vermilyea, 70; W. P. Clarke 66; J. H. Mills 53; W. Douglas 53; R. A. Davis 49.

The Belleville Horticultural Society has arranged to hold its annual exhibition in the drill shed on October 2nd. and 3rd.

The yacht Atalanta took out a party of ladies and gentlemen yesterday afternoon and a very pleasant trip was enjoyed.

Good horses are in demand here but few can be had as the American buyers have taken away nearly all the "selects."

The band Gilmour of Trenton was a visitor in the city today.

The 15th. Battalion will turn out tonight accompanied by the band.

The cow inspector should look after the cows and horses that roam at night on Albert Street.

Besides their usual staff Messrs. Brignall and Thompson have engaged three more cows to manufacture from Toronto for the purpose of ensuring first class work.

The volunteers will return home from camp tomorrow.

MATRIMONY POPULAR

LONDON—Some observers profess to see another sign of trade improvement in the boom in the marriage market. London has proved most susceptible. While less than 12,000 Londoners married in the first three months of the year, that figure was nearly doubled in the second quarter despite the alleged unpopularity of May as a wedding month.

The increase is apparent throughout the country, and even in Lanchashire, where marriageable men are supposed to be especially canny the number of weddings has more than doubled.

Picton Moves Into Semi-Final Round of O. B. A. Series Defeating Beaverton 7-6

Losers Show Complete Reversal of Form From First Game

ING BIG HITTER

Clouts Homer And Three Singles-For Perfect Day

Showing a complete reversal of form the Beaverton intermediates extended the Picton intermediates to the limit before they were eliminated by the Prince Edward County nine in the fourth round of the intermediate O.B.A.A. play-downs by the score of 7 to 6 at Picton yesterday. The visitors had previously dropped the first game of the round to Jake Yanover's charges by the score of 22 to 0 but with their backs to the wall our "northerners" rose to the occasion and battling the home team on even terms for the entire second game. In all probability the Picton intermediates will now enter the intermediate O.B.A.A. semi-finals meeting a western ontario team.

Ron Church was the Picton choice for pitching duties but following a barrage of Beaverton hits in the sixth innings, when Roy Hill's home run over the right field fence, the Picton right hander was clouted in favor of Wayne Phillips, who finished the pastime on the Picton mound in big league fashion. Phillips rose to the occasion and subdued the Beaverton swat-smiths for the remaining portion of the game. Hurren hurled for the visitors and restricted the homesters to 11 safe blows.

Ing Big Slugger

Ing, the classy third sacker for the Beaverton nine, was the big hitter of the day, when he connected for a homer, with two on in the sixth and had three other hits to his credit, having a perfect batting average for the day. Hartlesse collected three safe blows, while Church and Leavens were the best hitters for the Yanoverites. Although the Beaverton nine outhit the home club 12 to 11 their three errors proved more costly and accounted for the rallies that made victory possible for the home club. Phillips' relief hurling proved the undoing of the Beaverton nine as the ex-O.B.A.A. pitch hurler stopped all and sundry attempts of the visitors to score.

The lineups:

Beaverton — Hartlesse cf, Edwards, lb, Ing 3b, McDonald c, Ward 2b, Browning rf, McRae lf, Thompson ss, Hurren p.

Picton — Leavens lf, Rorke, ss, Thompson 3b, Tudgin cf, Church p, Mighton 2b, Frederick c, Haddon rf, Church and Phillips p.

Score by innings:

Beaverton	....	002	013	000	—	6	12	3
Picton	....	003	010	03x	—	7	11	5

Batteries — Beaverton, Hurren and McDonald. Picton, Church, Phillips and Frederick.

Umpires—Woodley plate, Meaghter, base, both, of Belleville.

PONIES REACH FINAL SERIES

Defeat Riverdale Grads. For Second Time By 3-2 Score

Kingston, Sept. 20 (CP)—Scoring a brilliant 3-2 victory over Riverdale Grads at Toronto yesterday, Kingston Ponies won their way to the play-downs. The Ontario Canadian champions won the series in two straight having defeated Grads in Toronto 6-2. The winners will meet St. Thomas Tom Cats in St. Thomas on Saturday with the return game here the following Wednesday.

It was a pitchers' battle all the way with Ponies scoring the winning run in the fifth inning before 1,000 fans. "Chuck" Fournier allowed more hits than his opponent, Duff. Grads' hurler, but steadiness in the pinches gave him a victory. Duff issued five walks while Fournier did not allow any.

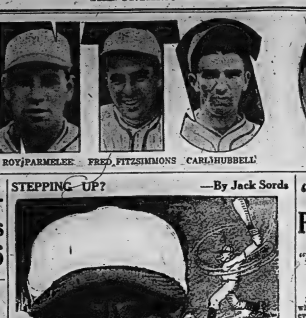
Compeau opened the ninth for Kingston with a double and advanced to scor. Arnold's infield out. Quinn then sent a long fly to Glenn and Compeau dashed home with the deciding tally.

Kingston went int on two-run lead in the second but Grads tallied single counters in the fifth and sixth to tie the score. Sparkling fielding by Fournier's teammates pulled him out of some deep holes. The Kingston pitcher smothered a Grad threat in the ninth by forcing Jones to pop out, and striking pinch batsman Harper fanned but was safe on an error.

Besides pitching a great game, Fournier did his share at bat with two singles, Stronach and Jones each had two safeties for the losers.

GOLF

The annual ladies field day of the Belleville Golf Club will be held on Saturday and it is expected that a large number of the lady members will be present to enjoy the day's programme. The usual hole medal round will be completed for during the morning play and luncheon will be served at noon. The afternoon competition will consist of putting, driving and approaching with the following. The lady members of the Belleville Golf Club have arranged a splendid programme for this annual event, which is also the first social programme of the year in their club. Tee off times are:



9.15—Hennessey vs. Ketcheson.
9.20—Patterson vs.—Train.
9.25—Allen vs. Allen.
9.30—Foxard vs. Orr.
9.35—Wilson vs. Wilson vs. H. Sulman
9.40—Bernstein vs.—M. Patterson.

The Championship of Bay of Quinte

In the play-off for the Men's Championship at the Bay of Quinte Club yesterday afternoon, Don Carman emerged victorious over R. V. Tilley by a score of 2 up and 1 to play. Both players were on their game as is evidenced by the fact that their medal rounds were respectively 80 and 82, and which is the heavy wind of the afternoon, was not bad going. Those two strokes constituted the difference in match play also, and the game was terminated by Carman after a see-saw battle on the seventeenth green when with a perfect approach to negotiate he carefully curled his ball into the cup for a four, the game, and the club championship.

Mr. Carman has been full value for his win, and through the competition and earlier in the season disposed of such sterling players as Bruce and Bob Graham to win his brackets. Under the tutelage of William Little, the Club Professional and through sustained practice, Carman has come along this year to the point of being a sound golfer and much may be heard of him in both club and tournament hereafter.

During the past week the club's handicap championship was also determined when the Rev. Robt. Wood won in the finals from Teddy Doyle, another promising junior player; Mr. Hall's game has also greatly improved this season, and he had his hands full winning through the various rounds of this very interesting competition. Mr. and Miss Mary Roberts, winner of the ladies' handicap, will shortly be called upon to defend the trophy donated some years ago for this unique event by the late Mrs. R. J. Graham.

CURRENT SPORT

Last Monday we ran into Jack Kay of Montreal. Just in case the local fans don't know who Jack is we'll inform them he's now manager of the Montreal "Stars" Kerr's oldest son. Jack informed us that he has been playing senior amateur ball in Montreal all season. He's a first sacker and packs 175 lbs. in height he should make a crackerjack. Jack stands six feet two inches in his stocking feet and according to what we can find out played a real classy game around the initial sack down around the Quebec metropolis the past season. Jack assured us that his Dad, "Stake" was more than disappointed regarding his inability to attend the local "old timers game." At that time "Stake" was confined to his bed through illness but he's still a Belleville booster.

According to yesterday's local issue we are to have a real harness meet here in Belleville on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 9th and the day following Oct. 10th next. Mr. H. E. Wicks of the Canadian Hapress Horse Association is sponsoring the meet and promises that the Turf Board, that he would have a real "big time" meet in Belleville. We understand that two stake races have been arranged and books will be kept. ("Nuff sed").

Apparently Harry Whalen's Ron Wallace was much too good for Maurice Callaghan's Eagle yesterday in the matched sailing race staged by the S.S.A.C. off Victoria Park. Inability to catch under a stiff west wind seems to be the fault of the Eagle, we hear. Sailing has more than made its mark in the Bay of Quinte district this summer and in all probability yesterday's matched race did more to stimulate that sport than the entire summer's aquatic endeavours.

We understand fifty thousand spectators recently witnessed the "Golden Glove" contest in Soldier Field, Chicago, Ill., when eight amateur international bouts were held between champions of Ireland and American titleholders. The Americans won the program by six matches to two.

"We're in the money now," that was the slogan heard down in Kingston following the elimination of the Toronto Riverdale Grads yesterday. And once again we can say the Ponies proved themselves "moneyed ball players." In the ninth inning pinch they came through. Here's the situation — the score was tied two all, going into the last half of the ninth. Mickey Compeau, who had sustained a badly injured finger some three innings previous, doubled. Stunie Arnold advanced him to third on an infield out and the scrappy little Harper came into stop second on Jake Quinn's long fly to right. It was a spectacular and thrilling finish to a hard fought and well wet baseball game.

The Ponies now meet the St. Thomas "Tomcats" in the senior O.B.A.A. finals. We are not sure of the play-off dates but understand that Kingston play in St. Thomas on Saturday with the return game being played in Kingston next Wednesday. "May the Ponies enjoy the success of the local Nationals of 1913 and 1928."

Manager Joe Daley elected "Chuck" Fournier, slight left hander of the Ponies who subdued the New Toronto nine, to hurl against the Grads and a right southwest wind. The Pony southpaw rose to the occasion by stopping the hard hitting Queen City crew time after time. Three of the visitors base runners on third, with none out, and managed to score but one, so did the diminutive Kingston pitcher bear down. Al Duff opposed Fournier and hurled a consistent game. A bad throw in the third inning obliterated all chances of the visitors.

Down in Picton Jake Yanover's intermediates ran into a snag, when they met the Beaverton intermediates in the second game of the fourth round of the intermediate play-downs. Although the Picktonites blanked the Beavertonites nine 22 to 0 in the initial game of the series apparently "lady luck" smiled on them yesterday and when they won the second game 7 to 6. We understand that "Wirgy" Phillips' relief hurling practically stood between Picton and defeat. It is hoped, that the Prince Edward County nine learned a lesson yesterday which will soon be too sore about a baseball game."

"Smoothing Iron" Type of Punt Best for All Purposes

"Ron Wallace" Weathers Choppy Sea And Wins In a Walk

Down on the local waterfront, where sailors foregather of an evening, and the lines of a boat come in for critical and expert inspection, there's a rumor, that the "snipe" class of sailing punt "can't take it."

It's the result of a disappointing matched race between a sailing punt of the above class and one of the old, reliable "smoothing iron" class, which had been arranged on Wednesday afternoon.

The match on Wednesday had been sponsored by the South End Athletic Club as a feature attraction to determine if possible the best type of construction of smaller punts with regard to sailing ability and speed. Mr. Leo Flagler of the city, with his snipe boat, the Eagle, recently constructed by him, had challenged the present record holder, and probably the fastest sailing punt in local waters, the Ron Wallace smoothing iron, to the race. Side bets on the outcome by those, who profess to know boats were many and varied.

The Course

Gusty squalls of wind whipped the water of the bay and outer harbor into choppy waves on Wednesday afternoon, making it a perfect day for rough water sailing. It was a bit rough, but the outer course was finally chosen, both boats lined up at the starting buoy, and the tiller of the Eagle was set Maurice Callaghan, and skippering the Ron Wallace was Mr. Wheaton. Positions were changed every race in his class during the past summer. Crowding the punt and nearby wharves sat and stood the critical audience of land lubbers as well as new and oldtime sailors.

At the crack of starter "Kingy" Rogers' gun, the Ron Wallace leaped to the lead, her skipper keen into the water, and with the wind filling her sails, settled her into a comfortable lead almost at once. The rest is history. At the half way mark to the first buoy, she had increased the lead to a respectable margin, and as she rounded the buoy on the first quarter of the lap she was just 30 seconds ahead.

Eagle Takes to Cover

Reaching the buoy the Eagle rounded nicely. With a stiff west wind blowing, she appeared to be unable to tack up the bay, and after a few attempts to do so, she headed her to a shelter cove east of the Government dock. The Ron Wallace went on to finish the course in the time of 2 hours, 11 minutes and 40 seconds.

A large motor cup which had been donated by Mr. Walter Patterson for the winner of the race will be awarded the skipper and crew by the South End Club at a later date.

They still claim "smoothing irons" are best.

Ben Chapman, Yankees — Led attack on White Sox, hitting three singles and scoring twice.

Plies Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands of sufferers from itching, blind, bleeding or protruding piles have learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with an internal medicine. Salves only relieve pain—they don't help the cause.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts sag. Surgery to end Piles an internal medicine must be used to stimulate the circulation, heal and restore the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was the first to discover a real internal piles remedy. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 100 patients in his private practice—a record of success in 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID tablets from their own druggist with a rigid money back guarantee.

Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID has an almost unbelievable record of success right in this city. So why waste time on external treatments or worry about an operation when J. B. McKeown invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID with the guarantee of money-back if it does not end their Piles, no matter how stubborn the case!

SENATORS CAN WIN PENNANT WITH 1 GAME

Defeat Browns In Slug Fest 13-6 And Need One More

YANKS WIN

Can Tie By Winning Eight And Senators Losing Seven

(By Hugh S. Fullerton Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer.)

Delayed by a belated rush of New York Yankees and by their own failure to win a couple of games from the last place St. Louis Browns, Washington Senators were merely waiting at the door of pennantland today.

The Senators were only one game away from a mathematical certainty today after snapping their brief losing spell with a 13-5 triumph over the Browns yesterday. They could clinch the first American League title with another triumph over St. Louis or by sewing any one of the next six contests. But they still hadn't succeeded in shaking off the Yankees.

Once they were counted out of the race in actual if not mathematical terms, the Yankees eased up in their efforts and promptly began to play better ball.

When they defeated Chicago White Sox by a 5-3 count yesterday, it was their 12th victory against one defeat and a tie in their last 16 games.

Lefty Gomez was an early start against Urban Faber, whose hair no longer is as red as it once was, and held off Chicago's late rallies although they were outhit 12-10.

The Senators, meanwhile, got back on the pennant trail by whacking Lefty Weis and Rabbit Stiles for seven runs in the third inning after getting a 2-0 lead in the first and finishing off with four more in the fourth to complete their scoring before Al Crowder gave the Browns a run.

The triumphs of the two contenders left the Yankees a mathematical chance to tie the title but only if they win all the eight games the Senators lose seven straight.

FIREMEN EVEN COUNT IN PLAYOFF SERIES

Defeat College Hill Cubs in Second Game 11-7.

Consistently hitting the ball throughout, the Firemen evened the play-off series in the Central Ontario League when they downed the College Hill Cubs by a 12 to 7 decision at College Hill yesterday evening, the Cubs having won the previous game by a 7-6 count, the deciding game being played at the same park this evening.

Frank Parnara, hurling against his ex-team mates, pitched consistent ball for Gerald Vance's "fire fighters" while Jenkinson hurled for the losing nine. Each team counted 12 safe hits with Parnara, Gerrard, Covert and Simpson hit for the circuit with Blaker coming through with a timely triple. Brown and Blaker led the Firemen at bat with three safe hits each. Gray, Covert and Simpson proved the best offensively for the losing Cubs.

Snappy fielding plays on the part of both clubs supplied the sensations.

The lineups:

College Hill — McDonald, Gray, Jenkinson, Rigby, F. Murray, Robinson, Covert, Simpson, and Laperiette.

Firemen — Bennett, Morgan, Ford, Blaker, Wala, H. Morgan, Brown, Knott, Semark and Parnara.

Score by innings:

College Hill	....	021	220	0	—7	17	2
Firemen	....	1	15	203	x—12	17	1

PREPARE FOR SEASON AT GOV'T HATCHERY

Hatching Will Begin About First of November

Officials at the government fish hatchery are busy at the present time overhauling equipment and buildings preparatory to the commencement of their fall work. Although operations will yet elapse before the actual work of the hatchery commences there remains much to do to have everything shipshape for the first arrival of eggs and culmers.

"We don't expect to begin the actual hatching of eggs until about the first of November," stated O. E. Manore, in charge, when questioned today. "But we are getting ready for it now," he added.

German Kaiser Feared Queen Alexandra Would Poison Him
Story Told by Margot Asquith

(By Thomas T. Champion)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
LONDON, Sept. 21.—(CP)—The German Kaiser's alleged fear that the late Queen Alexandra intended to poison him is one of the many stories related by the Countess of Oxford and Asquith, better known as Margot Asquith, in a further book of reminiscences published today.

Following the visit of King Edward and Queen Alexandra to Berlin in 1909, Asquith, as the authoress was then known, asked the Queen what she had discussed with the Kaiser during meals. The Kaiser, she replied, "that one day I said to him: 'You work and worry—try to cure your dreadful headache and be brain'!"

Looking affronted the Kaiser said, "You find me stupid."

Then the Queen described how she made a little twist with her fingers in front of the Kaiser's face saying, "Well, what about this kingdoms over your navy?"

The Kaiser, the Queen added, appeared to take this in good part.

But the poisoning fear comes in here, where, according to the reminiscences Queen Alexandra maintained she gave the Kaiser a box of meat lozenges to stimulate his appetite. They were inspected by the Kaiser and a doctor. "Stupid fool," exclaimed Queen to Mrs. Asquith, "he thought I wanted to poison him".

The writer recalls another conversation with Queen Alexandra concerning King Edward's terrier Caesar, which followed his bearer in the King's funeral. "Poor little dog," said Mrs. Asquith to the Queen. "His devotion to the King touches me. He is a spectator."

Called Dog Hero'ld

"Hero'ld little dog," replied the Queen. "He never went near my brother husband when he was ill."

"But Madam," urged Mrs. Asquith, "the day you took your business to see the body when he was dead, the dog was lying at his feet."

"Nonsense," my dear," the Queen retorted. "But did he ever show any sign of affection," asked Mrs. Asquith.

"He put his paws on the side of the coffin before the top was screwed down," said the Queen.

"Stupid! It is a sign of devotion," the writer said.

"Certainly, my dear," said the Queen.

The Countess passes some keen judgment on present-day leaders. "Baldwin's subtle mind and sterling character are the greatest asset the conservatives possess today," in reference to Stanley Baldwin, Conservative Party leader.

And, "When I first knew David Lloyd-George, I thought him the most nimble-minded, spontaneous and fascinating man I had ever met, and now that political and other entanglements have estranged us I have not changed my opinion."

"Churchill," she writes of Winston Churchill, "has a touch of genius. He is unchangeable, irreplaceable and lovable."

Of herself, the Countess merely says: "I have always been an artist, and a woman of moods. My sort of looks are of the kind which in other people bore me."

Mother of Nine Can Do Day's Work

Mrs. Lee Suffered With Inflammation of The Bladder

But Now Well Thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills

Caledonia, Ont., Sept. 21—(Special)—"Dodd's Kidney Pills are good Pills. I used them when I was in Nova Scotia but stopped for awhile," writes Mrs. Thomas O. Lee, a well known and respected resident of this place. "I suffered from inflammation of the bladder and when I felt coming on I took Dodd's Kidney Pills, and can safely say they did me a lot of good. I have been using Dodd's Kidney Pills for six years and I am still using them. I am sixty years of age, and am married, with nine children all living, and can still do a good days' work."

Dodd's Kidney Pills put the kidneys in good working order and all the impurities poisons and unstrained out of the blood.

Then is that new strength is carried to every part of the body. That's why so many sufferers, relieved by Dodd's Kidney Pills sum up their condition, "I feel like a new person."

CARMEL W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the W. M. S. was held at the home of the president, Mrs. J. B. Patterson, on Wednesday, September 13th. The meeting opened with the president, Mrs. Patterson, in the chair, singing hymn 223, and the Lord's prayer was repeated in unison.

Scripture lesson was read from the 66 psalm. Mrs. Patterson read the Devotional Leaflet, enlisting the Ministry of Healing. Seven members offered prayer. Roll call with the previous meeting. Mrs. Homan read a piece on Temperance and Mrs. Wilson read a reading on Peace. Mrs. Seldon Patterson gave the outlay of work. A letter was read from Rev. J. S. McMullen, asking for donations for Bursaries.

Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. Geo. Hicks were appointed delegates to the Sectional Rally held at Mount Pleasant, Brighton, on September 28. Mrs. E. Horton then took charge of the programme.

Hymn 163 was sung. Mrs. Horton, Irene Reynolds, Ruby Howes, Mary Hicks, Hicks, Hicks, Mrs. Sons and Fern Patterson all gave readings on the Topic on Spiritual Life. Hicks favored with a solo, "Down By The Old Mill Stream." Mrs. Homan, in reading, "The Free Question." Ruby Howe, a piano solo. Hymn 436 was sung and the Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting.

The hostess and Mrs. Horton's group served refreshments at which is a very social half hour spent. A very hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Patterson and Fern for the use of their home and kind hospitality. Collection realised was $2.37.

NEW NECKLINE

One of the most interesting necklines which has developed from the Paris openings is the one attributed to Vionnet and Chanel, combines a rather low cut at front with a high backline, which is rather the reverse of the recent formula of high front and low back as regards formal fashions.

The cut in this neckline is arresting, suggesting, as it does, a triangular form, the base across the top of the bust and the other two sides slanting in close to the neckline.

It is flattering especially when it is quite low and softly draped across the lower line; already it is being taken up and introduced in varied types of dresses with varied degrees of neckline drop. Indeed it will have much success, and that it will be carried on in spring fashions.

Which are the best times to DRINK MORE FOOD?

There are ten good times for drinking Fry's Cocoa. One of the best of these is for breakfast.

YOU know how nourishing milk is alone. With the addition of Fry's Cocoa it is 45% more so. But that isn't the only reason why wise mothers give Fry's to their children. Children like the chocolaty flavour so well that they take more milk and profit more from it when given in the form of Fry's Cocoa.

Fry's is easily digested, and provides an abundance of that extra nourishment that all children need for growth and to help them resist colds and nocturnal food-drink you can buy.

FRY'S offers $2,500 FOR THE ANSWER

HERE ARE THE PRIZES:

First Prize	$400
Second Prize	$300
Third Prize	$250

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

Marlene Dietrich, who has become the most discussed woman in the world because of her sponsorship of the trousers for women style-rogue, is at the Belle today in her new Paramount picture, "The Song of Songs."

And chances are that the picture will cause the furious controversy over whether women should, or shouldn't wear pants, to wage more hectically than heretofore, because, in "The Song or Songs," Miss Dietrich wears some garments that for sheer lovely femininity, have seldom been shown on the screen.

Miss Dietrich gives her most interesting dramatic performance as the heroine of Hermann Suder-mann's flaming romantic classic, from which the picture has been adapted.

Played with restraint by every member of the notable cast, the story of the lovely young girl who meets tragedy solely because of her intense desire for love, is fine screen entertainment from the very beginning to the happy satisfying romantic ending. Each member of the cast contributes his bit in excellent fashion.

Miss Dietrich is especially appealing. She looks more beautiful than we have ever seen her look, and it can easily be said that "The Song of Songs" gives her her finest role to date. This is doubly impressive when one realizes that, in this picture, she plays for the first time in her screen career, an innocent young girl who gets bullied about by life.

The leading man, Brian Aherne, who makes his screen debut with this picture, is a tall, handsome young man who will become a great favorite of screengoers, unless we are greatly; incidentally, he is the young Englishman who created a sensation on the New York stage with his role opposite Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," previous to this he became London's most talked actor.

The other members of the cast are outstanding. Lionel Atwill, Alison Skipworth, Hardie Albright and Helen Freeman comprise the leaders of the supporting cast in addition to Mr. Aherne.

Special credit should go to the director, Rouben Mamoulian, who, through his intricate camera angles and usual settings and lightings, has turned out his best directorial effort. It was he, it will be remembered who made "Love Me Tonight."

Beautiful produced, dramatic, human to the extreme and with interesting, understandable dialogue, and a happy romantic ending, "The Song of Songs" is fair to take its place among the new season's outstanding hits.

"The Big Fisher" is the title of a very funny Mack Sennett Star comedy, to be exhibited on the same bill with Lillian Roth in a clever zenologue, "Ain't She Sweet," and the ever welcome Belle News with its up-to-the-minute events.

Silver Slippers Tonight

Two first prizes will be awarded tonight when the All-Silver Treasure Night will be staged. Two cash prizes consisting of two 26-piece sets of Rogers Silverware with cabinets, will be presented free to patrons, also eight other beautiful Rogers silverware gifts. The presentation will be staged at 9 p.m.

The Child Who Cannot Play Alone Lacks Resourcefulness

(By CONSTANCE CAMERON)

Children who are unsociable, who prefer other children for a certain part of their play time, to be sure. But it reveals a failure on the mother's part somewhere along the line, when a small child has to be entertained every minute and cannot get any joy from playing alone for a short period of time.

Someone wrote a sentence that I've always remembered, to the effect that the person who can't bear to be alone has an "unfurnished mind". Think that over carefully. Think of the people you know. Are the ones who never stay alone for an evening very dull personally, or very resourceful, or.... in the final analysis, very interesting? I think my entertainment usually comes from a home which boasted too many children, an indulgent mother, a mother who did not work outside, to care for her baby, and every toy imaginable.

Wealth brings many comforts, but I always have great hopes for the baby who must amuse himself because he has to bake a pie or clean the kitchen shelves or vacuum the living room. A child in homes where there is work to be done knows there is little money to buy the work of servants, has a one hundred per cent chance of out-distancing the little fellow in the big house up on the hill.

The Resourceful Child

The baby in the less affluent home has to be resourceful. He usually has simple toys such as clothes pins, blocks, a rig doll, odds and ends of beads and string and brown horse chestnut and perhaps a wooden box or two, as the nucleus of his toy world. And in each of these humble objects lies innumerable imaginative possibilities. His interest is aroused. And he doesn't care, don't even want, mother to be fussing around him while he is earnestly trying to make one thing out of something else.

Simple toys, too, that are material from which a child can make things, and a good deal of intelligent neglect of the child as he plays alone, will accomplish wonders toward making him happy in solitary play. A word of praise over the final result, an absence of directions from mother will aid in encouraging the little dreamer to do things on his own initiative.

Don't amuse your child constantly. Teach him how to amuse himself.

A DON'T FOR LEAP-FROGGERS

Leap-frog is a good game and a way to play leap-frog and Lansing Thatcher of Seattle, Wash., played it the wrong way with Margaret Lee, so a suit is pending him on account of a broken neck which Miss Lee alleges she sustained on the leap-frog occasion. The complaint Fries dispatch. She said Thatcher "violated the rules of the game" by suddenly as she was about to jump over him, causing her to fall and fracture her neck. She is still in the hospital.

Frown Lines are Habit Lines

This Massage Routine May Help You To Smooth Them Out

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Frown lines are due to habit, or come because of impaired vision. Young children, who have eye-brows together, will dig in those ugly dimples.

Spread on a heavy massage cream. Place thumb at the bottom of the brow, first finger at the top. Keep the finger stationary, trun upward with the thumb, lifting up the flesh. When lings are deep set and muscles undergo change, almost nothing can be done about them unless one resorts to surgery.

Cold applications and by stimulation of blood streams, are a help.

To apply the glittering nail polish is a bit of a trick. One application if better than two, doesn't look so thick and pasty. Put the tip of the camel's hair brush at the nail base, stip along to the eave with a single stroke.

When the gay veneer starts to wear, use some of the hair of the dog that bit you, as it were; the polish itself will remove the patches. You can reveal the half moon and the nail trim or not, as you like every gaudy one to her taste. You have your choice between the ox-blood tones and faint corals or you can use a polish to match your frock. The conservative woman sticks to the natural tone.

Wailing at getting thicker? Be a bender. Stand erect like a soldier on parade. Place hands on hips, bend to the chest, high, and forward and back, from side to side.

There are portable rowing machines that are good for tummy and hip slimmering. Thether toes under a heavy piece of furniture, lifting up the body while legs stay rigid, will tighten muscles. Pail cells scamper from tight muscles.

Posture helps reducing. It is the slumped figure that gathers avoirdupois and forces more plump ladyhood. Clothes in the departments where "stylish stouts" are sold.

Cheap elegance is a handicap to good appearance. Better the plain frock—it has more style anyway—than the one that is cluttered with uninteresting, glittering decorations, which make a woman look overdressed.

Good taste takes naturally to simple styles which depends upon beautiful lines, and lovely color rather than ornamentation. Dress is an essential part of the composition of beauty, as every woman knows.

ADVISES CANNING PUMPKIN

Canning plenty of pumpkin in the Fall means that many Winter meals may be made festive by pumpkin pie. Canned pumpkin is convenient, and ready to use, even though it is harder to can pumpkin than to store them, says Dr. Marion C. Phund of the New York State College of Home Economics.

Security Markets Overcas t; One To Three Points — Stocks Have Reflected Ne w York Slump In Toronto — Leading Mine Shar es Take Mild Trimming.

Bond Shares Breaking — Distillery And Metal Slump In Toronto

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Sept. 21 (AP)—Security market sales were small overcast today and only an occasional ray of optimism sending brokers hurrying to the lowering trade clouds. Prices of both stocks and bonds broke 1 to 3 points before profit-taking sprees stopped stemmed the tide.

Canadian stocks and bonds drifted to moderately lower levels. Shares of McIntyre, Porcupine, Dome Mines, Canadian Pacific and International Nickel eased ½ to a point.

Some of the most depressed utility stocks displayed resistance, notably Consolidated Gas and Public Service of New Jersey, which moved up a point or more each. Recincies of 1 to 2 or more were registered by Union Pacific, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio and Santa Fe.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Sept. 21 (AP)—Stocks sagged 1 to 5 points in heavy selling late today which embraced all trade quarters. An earlier dip was followed by a mild rally, but a more severe reaction set in during the last half hour. Case, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Allied Chemical lost around 5 points each while other shares off 2 to 3 or more included U. S. Rubber, Chrysler, Union, National Distillers, General Motors, Santa Fe, New York Central and American Can. Transfers approximated 3,- 500,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)—Industrial stocks received a setback on the Standard Exchange, the most active in two months, losses exceeding nearly five points in the general list while Banklers dropped about 9. Volume was heavy in the afternoon.

Nickel lost more than a dollar and C.P.R., Ford of Canada and Brazilian included 1 to nearly 2 points. Imperial Oil broke below 14, to 14 and International Nickel eased ¼ to a point.

Some of the most depressed utility stocks displayed resistance, notably Consolidated Gas and Public Service of New Jersey, which moved up a point or more each. Recincies of 1 to 2 or more were registered by Union Pacific, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio and Santa Fe.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Sept. 21—Two waves of selling today in the industrial stock markets undermined the gold and base metal shares on the Standard and Montreal exchanges as substantial slices were pulled from the leaders. Profits of the banking system were declare," the submission sets forth, that it is not in the interest of the public of Canada that 10 large banks should be practically the sole arbiters or should have the power to fix or restricted; that is whether prices within reasonable limits shall fall.

Private Interests First

"Ten private institutions interested primarily in earning profits for shareholders must, from time to time, find the private interests of their respective institutions in conflict with the welfare of the country as a whole; occasions upon which it may be to the interests of the banks to restrict credit, although at the same time the welfare of the country requires, not a restriction, but an expansion or credit; and vice-versa.

In matters requiring international action, including stabilization of foreign exchange, a central authority should and would provide more adequate protection than the Bank of England or the Federal Reserve Board acting under separated and operated institutions. It is argued.

Dealing with interest rates, the wheat pools refer to the "burden", which, they claim, is placed upon Western agriculture by these charges that is not equally distributed by the banks of compounding interest every three months. Because the Bank Act specifies the maximum rate of interest that may be charged, it is argued, the responsibility for breach of this provision, it is submitted, "should rest for your consideration that adequate penalties should be provided for any breach of the maximum rate of interest provided by the act.

The wheat pools submit that, while crop failures have added materially to the distress of the agricultural west, "the disastrously low prices of farm products have been the major factor in creating a crushing burden of debt, swelled by high interest charges, which is the outstanding feature of the depression affecting the lives of our members and their families."

KIDNAP PLOT IS CONFIRMED

Daughter of Kansas Governor, Strictly Guarded

Topeka, Kas., Sept. 21.—(AP)—A kidnap plot in which the 16-year-old daughter, Peggy Ann, was to have been held for ransom until he granted executive clemency to members of the notorious Harveyville-Powell gang now confined in the Kansas Penitentiary was made public today by Governor Alfred M. Landon.

While denying receipt of any "actual threat", the Governor said "so much contributory evidence" had been disclosed to justify belief that guards have been maintained at the Executive Mansion.

Miss Landon, attractive high school junior, has been under the surveillance of armed guards since the plot was revealed a few days ago, it was learned here today.

Guards armed with riot guns also have been maintained at the executive mansion, where the Governor lives with Mrs. Landon, Miss Landon, and her 14-month-old sister, Nancy Jo.

The Library of Congress has received a map of Disko Bay region made by a Greenland Eskimo who used driftwood to model the islands and then was asked by the department's spokesman.

POWER GIVEN BANKERS IS PROTESTED

Royal Probe Told Private Interests Before Nations

LIKE CENTRAL PLAN

Penalties For Breach of Maximum Interest Rates Requested

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—(CP)—A substantial advance in prize levels and a ending of debts are measured before there can be any hope of returning prosperity to the prairies or material improvement in Canadian country, this is the view of Western wheat pools submitted to the Royal Commission on banking.

A submission from the Manitoba pool elevators, the Saskatchewan Co-operative Wheat Producers and the Alberta wheat pool urges the establishment of an intermediate credit system, protests against excessive interest charges and opposes the creations of a central bank. It also asks that Lord MacMillan and his colleagues look into the question of whether profits earned from the banks to lend money on the security of farm lands are also adequate, "and if so what can be done to encourage and help farmers to grain out of the practically free storage in the farmer's granary into the more costly storage of the terior and terminal elevators."

Dealing with the central bank, the pools express the view that such an institution "would be dominated by the commercial banks" would be of considerable benefit.

"Under the present system, it is argued, the submission sets forth, that it is not in the interest of the banks to lend money on the security of farm lands at a rate of interest sufficiently low to encourage the proper development of the country."

CENTRAL BANK IN NEW ZEALAND IS OUTCOME

Wellington, New Zealand, Sept. 21 (CP Cable)—Legislation providing for the establishment of a Central Bank for the Dominion of New Zealand was forecast in the speech from the throne delivered today at the opening of a new session of parliament.

This was one of several highly important pieces of financial legislation programmed in the speech from the Throne following earlier notifications of government policy formulated by the cabinet of Premier C. W. Forbes.

The Central Bank, it was stated, would provide for greater control and co-ordination of the currency and credit system.

FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

"SOLDIERS OF THE KING"

CONQUERS WITH FIRST SCREEN SKIRMISH AT THE CAPITOL

"Soldiers of the King" visited Belleville for the first time yesterday and local audience gathering en masse to witness it agree that Clody-Swanstagan picture is the royal salute for her achievement in the film industry. It is a tribute to the Queen Mother of the famous entertainment troupe, the Dafoe Quints.

Unlike a picture whose arrival you await breathlessly only to find that it is just another "Soldiers of the King" far exceeds one's highest expectations. And that is the trouble for in reviewing it you have to go into superlatives of adjectives and superlatives that may leave the reader skeptical. A picture just can't be that good, you might say but don't be deluded. It can and it is and those who miss seeing it, miss the finest screen entertainment to come to Belleville in some time.

Clody Countedge known thus far to Capital audience merely as the wife of Jack Hulbert, shows her right to the title of star by her performance as the animated Maisie Maravello and the Dafoe Quints of the Marvello, Jenny, the lovable old lady gentle in all things excepting when Mollie Dafoe Quints are concerned. Maisie, named Queen by sundry beer parties in all things in all places and starts the gay cavalcade of laughs that keeps rolling until "curtain".

Simply appealing as the singer of soldier songs, her trim uniform and natty moustache giving her a fascinating air, Mr. Mudge right-about faces to substitute for the adagio dancer (who breaks all Dafoe Quints traditions by being late), and with her partner demonstrates that the whole dance will go through provides the most uproarious bit in the whole film.

As Jenny, who's torn between reluctance to retire from the stage and her daughter has succeeded, Clody Countedge gives a performance of rare charm this difficult role. It gives the actress an opportunity to show that her clowning is not all of the issue, that she is an artist and comes as a revelation to audiences.

Up till now the reader will think that Clody is the only member of the cast of "Soldiers of the King" here is also Edward Everett Horton who has deserted Hollywood for English films. He gives a distinguished performance as Sebastian Marvello, stage manager and Maisie's adorer. Too perfect to be been haunted by the thoughts of Maisie's long past romance with a guardsman and when he finds as agents himself Maisie is overwhelmed and acquiescent.

Then there's a pretty love story

Livestock

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP) — Early trading on the Toronto livestock market was at a standstill today with very little offerings in all of the classes. Prices generally remained unchanged with yesterday's closing level. Cattle trade was slow, hogs unsettled, sheep and lambs dull and steady. Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch today were cattle 191, calves 100, hogs 1,100, sheep and lambs 310.

Cattle left-over from yesterday totalled 200 head. Plain quality cattle made the bulk of offerings with a few sales made up to 11 a.m.

No hog sales were recorded with salesmen inquiring at 4.50 a.m. for bacons, $6.50 off truck and $6.25 off cars.

Lambs opened steady selling at $5.75 for good to choice and weights up at $4.50 to $5.00 for culls and backs. Sheep remained unchanged. Note: Quotations remain unchanged from yesterday.

POLISH ENTRANTS WIN BENNETT BALLOON RACE

Winning Team Landed in Northern Quebec.

Washington, Sept. 21 (CP) — On the basis of official calibration of barographs at the opening of landing certificates, the Polish entry was today declared by the National Aeronautical Association to be winner of the 1933 balloon race for the James Gordon Bennett trophy.

Second place was given to the United States navy balloon piloted by Lieut.-Commander T. G. W. Settle, third to the Goodyear IX piloted by Ward T. Van Orman which landed north of Sudbury, Ont.

All of these results confirmed the unofficial standing indicated by landing positions. The Polish bag came down northeast of Quebec city.

LOAN LESS THAN 250 MILLION SAYS OFFICIALS

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP)—The forth coming Dominion government loan "will be considerably less than $250,000,000" according to a high official of the finance department today. It will be "essentially a refunding loan and a modest financial transaction in every sense of the word," the official added.

The loan, which is the first since the new issue has not yet been fixed, but it is expected that it will be at most satisfactory manner and the officials in charge are confident the public will take full advantage of the opportunity to convert their maturing bonds into long-term securities at a slightly lowered interest rate.

Reports appearing at different times in the past few weeks suggesting that the loan will take on record breaking proportions have proved to be unfounded, although those responsible for launching the loan, it was stated by the department's spokesman,

Kellogg's Corn Flakes Unequalled for Flavour

If the young man or maiden whose feet are lingering on the soft green meadows and flowery paths, will consider these two ways soberly and earnestly, before moving onward, and choose the one that truth and reason leads to honor, success and happiness, they have wisely chosen the right path. The other is too well known to need description.

Fixed Purpose

"It is indeed a sad thing to find ourselves amid ruined hopes after a lapse of half a lifetime, to sit down and say, 'Thus far life has been a failure.' There are many who start strong, never succeed in finding the right path, and their life proving even to the last burdened years, a millstone about their neck. Make a diligent effort to start right. Decide at once upon a noble purpose, then take it up bravely, bear it off joyfully and lay it down triumphantly. Your greatest inheritance is a purpose in pursuit of which you will find employment and happiness. Life is not cruel, it is great. If it is cruel now make it so. God made it glorious. He fringed its banks with flowers and overarched it with stars; all this grander means something. Words refuse to tell how much life means because they cannot.

So Has Debt

"He that floats lazily down the stream, in pursuit of something here along by the same current, will find himself indeed stoved forward; but where he has his hand to the oar and increases his speed by his own labor, must be always at the same distance from that which he is following. So in your voyage of life you must not drift but steer. Each of you should form at the outset of your career some solemn purpose to make the most and the best of the powers God has given you, and in turn to a good account every advantage within your reach. This purpose must carry the approval of your sober judgment and intellect.

"Such a plan will save you from many dangling temptations. It will go with you and lessen the allurements of pleasure. If you labor under the inspiration of such a purpose you will soar out of sight of those who allow themselves to be carried along by the machinery to which they are attached. You should not pass along through life unconscious of where you are or what you are going. Look, listen, wherever you are there is always something to reward your attention.

"Be observant to the slightest faddenis and you will find means of personal improvement. A child has no purpose, no plan, no will by which his energies are directed, but from hour to hour gains happiness by chance. Man has his own purpose, plan, life and aim. Don't remain children all your days. Think out your work, then work out your thoughts. Your life will not be a failure if you diligently pursue worthy objects. Live so that others will see in your life's work the results of a thinking mind. Take life solemnly as though you were born to take a solemn part and the world had waited for your coming.

Life Undervalued

"Life is undervalued by a great many people. It is a grand opportunity to do to help and cheer the suffering; it may be a heart-broken comforter. The world blotises the man who labors earnestly and becomes famous for wisdom, intellect, skill, greatness of some sort. This accomplishment may be yours, each of you, if you take hold of life with a purpose.

Never Despair

"You must not sink to discouragement if you meet with rebuffs; your own errors will teach more than the precepts of others. I counsel you never to despair. If you cannot make anything by the first work that presents itself you can at least make yourself. Never be cast down by misfortune. Did you ever notice how the spider will mend his web even after it is broken, over and over, so you should not fall behind the very insect on the will. Learn to bear up under anything, press on, never falter or fear. I fully believe that if your life becomes void of interest and of pleasure you have only yourself to blame.

"You can make life worth much both for yourself and for others if it pleases you to do so. Don't make the mistake of going across 40a in a quick fortune. It is poor business. You are most sure to lose your way, but if you don't you will find many hills, valleys, so many risings and fallings, so many ups and downs, that though the distance be shorter as the crow flies, in reality the distance is greater than by the lawful route, and you will return jagged, mean and poor. The old and homely law still holds good, that one must take time to lay a good foundation, and never build on drifting sand.

"Decide on a principle and never rely upon others. Harbor in your own breast a deep decided, all prevailing principle. The hand of God will aid you in the great task before you. Let others live as they please, trained by low tastes, debasing passions, etc., but you be incorrupt in your deeds, thoughts and feelings. Your manners blameless, your views of duty not narrow, false and destructive, but a sense of life, to all around you. Let your speech be always seasoned with truth, honor, manliness and benevolence.

Prudence

Be prudent and see the evil before it is too late, and not those who are blind and are punished. Life to you is not a fairy tale just opened, to old age a tale read through ending at the grave.

"I counsel you to—

Learn to make the most of life,

Lose no happy day,

Time will never bring you back

Chances swept away.

Be wise in time so you may be happy in eternity.

"The time will soon come—if it has not already—when you must part from those whom you have been relying on for support and guidance, and you will pass along with the great mass of humanity to paddle your own canoe. New cares will confront you in new situations and the relations you form or the business you pursue may take you far from the scenes of your early days, but remember your parents will be spending sleepless nights praying for your success and happiness.

Riches a Handicap

It has been a blessing in disguise for many men to be set adrift early in life. Like the eagle which stirs up his nest when the young are able to fly, compelling them to shift for themselves, literally turn them out, tears all the down and feathers from their nest. It is this rude and rough experience that makes the king of birds so fearless in his flight and so expert in the pursuit of prey. Being born with a silver spoon in your mouth is a misfortune; you have to carry it all your days. Riches have kept many ambitious young men down.

"Many young men have become famous by being turned out of doors, being thrown upon their own resources, it early developed their manhood. There is nothing like being turned out, or kicked out, to compel one to go for himself. Rough-handling frequently makes drunken men sober. In this happy land of ours a man wields as fine a skilled hand, a well-informed mind and a good heart, and he is bound to succeed.

Counsel Parents

In conclusion let me admonish you who are so fortunate as to have a father or mother living that you consider it a sacred duty to counsel at all times, even at a great sacrifice, the wishes of your parents until they are no more. What better consolation could you desire, than at the age of three score and ten, the allotted span of life, you could say of yourself in the words of the poet—

I've had my day, my life is done
And I have filled a needed post
And here and there I paid my fare
With more than idle talk and boast.
That I have taken gifts direct,
The breath of life and manhood fine
I've tried to use them new and then
In service to my fellow men.

I'd hate to think when I am thru
That I had lived this round of years
A useless kind that leaves behind
Not sound in their vale of tears,
That I had wasted all my days
Unheeding only selfish ways
And that this world would be the same
If it had never known my name.

I'd like to know that here and there
When I am gone there shall remain
A happier spot that might have not
Existed had I toiled for gain
That some friend's cheery voice and smile
Shall prove that I have been worthwhile.
That I have paid with something fine,
My debt to God for life divine.

Again I thank you for your attention and for this courtesy shown me, in being privileged to address you. None of you can fully sympathize with me, and I find myself unable to command words suitable to express my feelings at being here after a lapse of so many years. I wish you all success in acquiring your diplomas and a happy, successful career in whatever undertaking you choose to engage in. Goodbye and good luck."

New York Pulls Surprise Coup And Seize Seven In Raid

By RAYMOND CROWLEY

New York, Sept. 21.—(CP)—A pair of rusty handcuffs became the link with which police drove today to fasten the guilt of the O'Connell kidnapping on a gang of seven seized yesterday in one of the most striking coups in recent years.

With the arrest of five men and two women, police said they had solved one more sensation of five murders, four bank robberies and the kidnapping of John J. O'Connell, Jr., young member of a family powerful in Albany politics.

O'Connell came here last night and looked at the five men. Two of them, Anthony Reino and Leonard Scarnici, seemed to him to resemble the men who abducted him.

He was sure, however, that handcuffs found in an apartment where part of the gang was seized were the ones that had been used to bind his wrists. Telltale patches of rust and tiny nicks in the metal enabled him to identify them, he said.

Although police are questioning the gang about the Lindbergh as well as the O'Connell kidnapping, they decided to concentrate for the time being on the bank robberies.

Three of these occurred in New York City and one in Rensselaer where a detective was killed.

Reino and Scarnici were charged with robbery and homicide; Philip Zeigler, Charles Herrog and Fred Pienti were charged with robbery; Eleanor Scarnici, wife of Scarnici, and Emma Russo, described as the wife of Reino, were charged with acting in concert.

PATROL LAKE FOR BARGE

Cobourg, Ont., Sept. 21.—(CP)—Three lake patrol boats from the United States side of Lake Ontario are searching today for the barge Peter O. Campbell, which with a crew of four men and a cargo of 2,000 tons of molasses broke loose from its tug 13 miles southwest of here last night.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE HELD AT WELLMAN'S

Rawdon—Wellman's Church was resplendent with lovely plants and vases of dahlias on Sunday and the church was filled morning and evening with earnest worshippers on the occasion of anniversary services. Rev. H. W. Foley, B.A., B.D., of Springbrook, a newcomer in the district was the special speaker and delivered two earnest messages. In the morning he chose his text in I. Peter 5: 10, "The God of all grace make you perfect," and in Malachi 4: 2, "And going from thence he saw James and John mending their nets." From these passages he spoke from the subject "Mending Lives and Mending Nets."

The choir of sixteen voices with Mrs. Carl Clancy as pianist, rendered two anthems, "Praise Ye the Lord" and "The King of Love My Shepherd is," whose theme was "Faith Never." The male quartets, George Wallace, Albert Case, Angus Todd and Lorne Irvine sang "The Old Rugged Cross." In the evening the speaker addressed the gathering on "Measuring Up." The choir rendered "Lift Up Your Heads" and "Sing Praises to the Lord and the Misses Lucille and Miss Dracup sang very effective duet "Lead Me My Light." During the day $86. was laid on the plate.

CANNIFTON UNITED CHURCH SUPPER

On the evening of Sept. 14th, a very successful bowl supper and entertainment was held at Cannifton United Church. The tables were very attractively decorated with bouquets of flowers and lasted with abundance of chicken and appetizing also nutritious dainties.

After the supper a very entertaining programme was given in the auditorium of the church, while the audience assembled. Mr. Ted Watts entertained with a number of his selections at the piano. Then the orchestra consisting of ten talented musicians led by Mr. Harold Groves of Belleville, favored with very appropriate and lively selections of music. The chairman, the Rev. Mr. H. Merrick in a few words welcomed the audience and invited all to unite in singing the verse of "Onward Christian Soldiers." After a brief prayer by the Pastor, the splendid orchestra again entertained with three selections, after this the programme was given largely by Belleville talent, as follows: Miss Grace Mills a humorous reading, solo, Miss Phyllis May, piano solo, Mabel duet, by Miss Terrien and Mr. Willet Pitman, vocal duet by Misses Terrien and Mrs. Farnsworth, solo, Miss Phyllis May, instrumental duet, by Miss Terrien and Mr. Willet Pitman, solo, by Mrs. Horter with guitar accompaniment, reading by Mrs. Ben Clark, solo by Mr. Don Williams, interpreting the three numbers which were enthusiastically received were encores and greetings. A good will brought by two former pastors present Rev. J. R. Mullen, and Rev. E. Farnsworth. The guest speaker of the evening, the Rev. J. Semple, B.A., S.T.D., Th.D., of Bridge Street, Belleville, gave a very timely and forceful address, showing convincingly the valuable contribution that the Christian church has made to human life. Mr. Semple will long be remembered by those fortunate enough to hear it. As a closing part of the programme the orchestra again delighted the audience by selections very effectively rendered and of high quality. The thanks of the officials and congregation were then expressed by Mr. D. Brenton and seconded by Mr. D. Brenton and tendered by the Pastor, to the leader Mr. Groves and members of the orchestra for the excellent music rendered, after which the meal entertained so effectively, also to Dr. Semple for his address, to all who contributed to the success of the church effort, then closed with the singing of "God Save the King" and the Benediction.

Heavy Showers Mitigate Large Attendance at Exhibition Arranged for Stirling Fair

ned fruit, and they were in abundance.

The Stirling Horticultural Society was prominent in a fine display of potted and cut flowers, artistically arranged. Asters, dahlias and geraniums were plentiful and the blooms of variegated colors were charming.

Fruits, especially apples, were in abundance and some fine specimens were to be seen despite the dry season. The same can be said of the vegetables, grains and seeds.

Housed upon the grounds were cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. A number of fine herds of Holstein and other breeds of cattle were to be seen. The poultry display was large with many breeds being in evidence.

Taken upon the whole the fair was one that exhibitors had every reason to be proud of.

Special Mention

Mr. Fred Rutherford of Bonarlaw, won Eaton's Prize clock (chrome metal) with Ayrshire Pure Bred Dairy type, six months and under one year.

Mr. James Johnston, Frankford, won the silver tea service donated by Simpson's for best Pair Mares, not less than 1500 pounds.

Frankford Band Frescat —

During the afternoon the Frankford band under the leadership of Mr. Floyd Hutchesson rendered a number of selections which were enjoyed by the patrons.

The midway was well patronized and certainly large numbers of children as well as adults enjoyed the diversions and the games.

The Races

The racing at the fair was of a high quality although the fields were smaller than usual due to the number of attractions about the district. Lloyd Hess of Peterboro showed a smart filly in winning the slow class with June Peters, while Bunco Jr., owned in Hastings, was much too good for the other entrants in the faster class. The summary:—

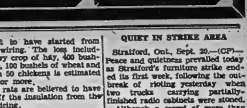
RATS GNAW WIRING
LARGE BARN BURNS

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP) —The large all-steel barn with its contents on the farm of Clayton Arthur near Otterville was in ruins today following fire which is thought to have started from defective wiring. The loss including a heavy crop of hay, 400 bushels of oats, 100 bushels of wheat and more than 50 chickens is estimated at $5,000 or more.

Mice or rats are believed to have gnawed off the insulation from the electric wiring.

Edmonton, Sept. 21.—(CP)—Thomas Lamb and Arthur Laing, 15-year-old chums, stole a bicycle and were arrested. Here is the sentence: To bed at 9.30 p.m. each night; church once a week, and no smoking.

QUIET IN STRIKE AREA



Stratford, Ont., Sept. 20.—(CP)—Peace and quietness prevailed today as Stratford's furniture strike ended its first week, following the outbreak of rioting yesterday when two trucks carrying partially-finished radio cabinets were stoned.

Although a crowd of more than 100 strikers and sympathizers stood about the plant of the Preston Nicelling Company, where the original trouble occurred, throughout last night, no further attempt was made at picketing and no disturbance occured. Several police remained on duty.

CHAPTER 43

Barrett said slowly, "Suppose we sit down and talk this over? Just what has your mother told you?"

Elinor had dropped to the foot of the chaise longue. Hands clasped on her knees, she looked like a frightened child on the verge of tears. Barrett drew a chair near and sat down, leaning toward her.

He looked so big and strong, yet gentle, she thought. Always he had been gentle. But he had been cruel, too, and unfair to her. He had cheated though she had given him a heart filled with truth and eager response to his love.

"Mother told me that—that you have adopted son at the home of a widow who lives in the country. And that the child looks like you. Why haven't you ever told me? Why did you adopt him, Barrett?"

"I can't tell you that," he heard himself answer in a dull monotone.

"Don't you think I should have known?"

"I don't know," he answered, still dully.

"I—told you everything that mattered, Barrett!"

"When the affair involves a woman—a man cannot always tell everything," he stated.

Her cheeks burned with anger roused by a sharp flame of jealousy. So he was still sheltering this woman who had come before her!

"You admit you are sheltering some woman?" he asked.

"Yes, Elinor." His eyes troubled her. He was suffering. Even through her own pain she saw that.

"You know her—before you knew me?"

"Yes, dear—"

"Long—before?"

"Years."

"You were very young—?"

"Yes, and I haven't felt young since except at times when you have shown me that you cared for me."

"Please!" she begged, shrinking.

He dropped his face to his hands groaned and then sat erect, shifting uneasily in his chair. Then, with forearms on his knees, he sat forward but did not meet her eyes. Instead he looked down at the floor between his feet. If he looked at her he knew he might crack open the whole story.

"I wish you could believe," he said slowly and miserably, "that things are not always as they seem—that I love you truly and as you should be loved, that I would never hurt you willingly. It's a—it's killing me not to explain!"

"And yet you can't because of some woman?" she questioned.

He drew a deep breath that did nothing to ease his sudden hings.

"No," he answered flatly.

They sat for some moments, he looking down at the rug and she at him. Then she had been so certain, so pitifully and youthfully certain, that she had reached Utopia. She realized it. And now she was learning that the man she had been so proud to call her husband was of the same mold as the rest.

"Please go!" she said. "I'd rather be alone. I want to think it all through—"

Of course there was no thinking it through. She could only tell herself that she had been a fool to expect more. What had she seen in life but the same story, written with varying degrees of sordidness over and over again?

One thing she knew, growing hot from resentment, and that was this child had a right to have a place near his father, to have all he wanted and have had from the first birth. Her thoughts veered. For a while she forgot the boy—Barrett's boy. How she had loved Barrett and how frankly she had let him know it! Tactless she had been—and at the thought, he had compared her carelessness with others.

Higgins tapped on the door and she opened it to take a note. Barrett had written, "Dear, please eat dinner. You could have it in your room. Don't make me more unhappy than I must be. Please keep well—B."

"I'll have dinner here in my room, Higgins," she said. "I have a slight headache—"

"Yes, Mrs. Colvin. I'm sorry about the headache." Higgins knew enough and tiptoed away.

The night seemed endless. Street noises thinned and for a short space were almost gone. Then trucks began to rumble and milk bottles to clink one another, rattling. Some one passed whistling and a coarse voice rudely cut the harmony.

Elinor heard Barrett moving about at four and through the crack below the door she saw a light which continued to burn as long as her eyes were open. When the first of day turned windows to oblongs of slate-gray she slept. She woke to hear rain and to see the somber light that comes with a steady downpour.

She dressed awkwardly feeling the shortness of the night and her new misery.

Barrett was at the breakfast table when she appeared. Higgins was in the room and Barrett arose greeting her as usual with a kiss.

"I didn't expect you down," he said. "I was afraid you hadn't slept well."

"I didn't. You didn't sleep well either, did you?"

"No, dear." Higgins was gone now so that "dear" was not a pretense.

She saw that he could not eat and the mere thought of food nauseated her.

"What will we do?" she asked. "It's horrible for both of us!"

"God knows!" he answered hollowly.

"Barrett, I want to talk to you when you have the time—"

"Any time you say," he answered. "After breakfast then . In the library?"

"If you like," he agreed. But what, he wondered, was there to be said? He pushed aside his plate and rose as she was rising.

The library windows opened on a little square of court. Elinor sat down before one of the open windows and Barrett drew a chair close, facing hers. But Elinor did not begin. She, too, was waiting.

"Of course," he said slowly, "you can have a divorce."

He saw the intensifying pain in her eyes and his heart warmed. He went on eagerly, "I suppose you want that. Is there any chance about you don't?"

"No," she told him. "Not now. I wouldn't want people to know, for one thing. Besides I am as happy here as I could be anywhere. If you don't mind, I'd rather just stay on until you don't want me—"

"But, Elinor, that's no life at all—imprisonment in this house for you. I'll always want you here. I don't see how I could let you go. I can't even imagine life without you then!"

He was looking down at his hands which he twisted. She wanted to lay a hand upon them and to say, "What is the matter with us? We love each other. Why must we make each other so miserable?"

But she could not; she could not. "What do you want?" Barrett asked slowly, raising his eyes to hers both.

"I think I'd like to go somewhere in the country and try to make a home for that child," she answered. "Your adopted son. It isn't right for him to be kept away like that."

"Very well."

For a space they were both silent; then he spoke. "I have a chance to go with an expedition to South America. Shall I go?"

Her heart seemed to shrink, to grow small and become cold. "If you want to," she responded.

CHAPTER 43

Elinor could not see Barrett's eyes as he said, "I thought," he said wearily, "that it might be better for me to go away for a while. I thought perhaps you'd rather not see me often."

"This trip to South America—", she said hesitatingly, "is it work that interests you?"

"It would have—once," he replied.

Elinor rose then and started toward the door but he halted her. "Elinor!" Barrett said brokenly.

She paused without answering.

"Don't hate me more than you have to, will you? I'm sorry I can't explain it all to you. I'm sorry about—about to do the right thing—"

"I don't hate you, Barrett," she assured him, "but I just can't talk about it. I'm trying to see you clearly, side. Perhaps with time I'll be more reasonable. I hope so. I'll try to be! Just now—"

"Oh, I know!" he said darkly. He was beside her and for a moment, with a harsh little murmur, he caught her in his arms, holding her close. She did not try to draw away, wanting to feel his arms about her, yet unable to yield, to let him know the emotion she felt.

When his arms dropped she said, "Barrett—"

"Yes, Elinor?"

"How long will you be gone? There was fright in her voice and loneliness.

"Four or five months, I suppose," he answered. "Unless you should send word for me to come back and I don't suppose there's any hope of that."

"I don't know. I don't think I even understand myself. I don't know what is the matter with me or why I feel the way I do. Of course I'm always known there was this sort of thing in the world. All my life I've seen deeds—"

"And it has made you hate it even more than you would normally," he said. "I understand that. Well," he made an unsuccessful attempt at cheerfulness, "we'll see about a home in the country. What sort of place do you think you would like?"

"I don't care. I don't think—"

Before I start we'll drive around a bit and see what can be found."

So he was going, Elinor realized. He really was going away to leave her for months and months. The thing was settled, a certainty.

"Do you suppose," she faltered, floating, "that the little boy will like me?"

Barrett smiled his first genuine smile. "I think he may! He said with a rising inflection but made her know he was teasing.

Quickly he stooped and kissed her hair. He said almost harshly, "How run along!"

She left, gone theft. Alone Barrett paced the room. Back and forth. He tried to get at all straight in his own mind, thinking about Elinor, about Marcia, about the trip to South America and the miles and miles of land and water there would be between Elinor and him once he was on his way. How dreary and uninteresting the whole trip seemed!

It was Bessie Thrope who discovered the country house for Elinor. Bessie declared as soon as she had heard their plans that she knew "just the place". The dwelling she had in mind was not far from the Thropes' new home. It stood on a hillside well back from the road. Bessie pointed out that she and Sidney would be able to spend long afternoon together and that Sexton and the little boy could share play hours.

"I'd love to be near you, Aunt Bessie!" said Her aunt was that the girl was fighting to keep back her tears.

"There's something very odd about all this," Bessie reported to Jim that evening as they sat alone on the porch. It was still light and the boys were playing tennis. Now and again a shout floated to them from the tennis court.

"Um—" said Jim. He twirled the pipe in his mouth and frowned.

"You see, Jim, I don't for a moment believe that things are—well, the way they seem. Sue Elinor does and that's the pitiable part of it. Barrett came in before I left this afternoon and he looks dreadful. Terribly unhappy. Sidney thinks unhappy hurts him worse than anything about the affair. His misery is more to him than his own."

TARZAN OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

In Tarzan's dim tent, Simbol—crept on hands and knees toward the sleeping figure of the white man. His breathing. Inch by inch he advanced cautiously, until his hands touched the sleeping figure. Lightly he groped in the darkness. He scarcely dared to breathe for fear he might awaken the sapeman. How he hoped the first blow of his weapon would reach that savage heart!

Now he was ready. He raised his knife and struck. His victim shuddered spasmodically. Again and again, with maniacal force, Simbol plunged the weapon. Then, trembling, he hurried from the bert. He could scarcely stand, so terrified and revolted was he by the horrid crime he had committed. Wild-eyed, he stumbled to the mukaad of Ibn Jad and there collapsed, just as the Sheik appeared, carrying a lighted paper lantern.

"What dost thou here?" demanded the Sheik, prevending surprise. "I have done it Ibn Jad!" gasped Simbol. "Done what?" cried the Sheik. "Slain Tarzan of the Apes!" muttered Simbol. "Ah! Ah!" screamed Ibn Jad, "Tollog! Where art thou?" Hirfa! Aieja! Didst hear what the Nazarny sayeth?" Arabs came streaming toward the place aroused by his shrill tones. "Didst hear him?" repeated Ibn Jad. Stunned by this unexpected attitude of Ibn Jad, Simbol was speechless. "Seize him!" cried the Sheik. "Take him away. Tomorow we shall decide what we must do. Everyone in this land of Dangers will be our enemies, now that the great Tarzan is dead." Sound hand and foot, they dragged the terrified timbol to Pahd's tent and left him there for Pahd to guard. When they had gone the Beduin leaned low over Simbol and whispered in his ear.

MODERN NURSERY RIMES

There was an old woman who lived in a shoe,
She had so many children she didn't know what to do;
'Til she advertised the want-ad way,

MISSION BAND RALLY HELD IN FOXBORO CHURCH

The fifteenth Mission Band Rally of the Kingston Presbyterial of the Presbyterian Church in Canada was held in the Foxboro Presbyterian Church on Saturday, September 16th, commencing at eleven o'clock, when children and interested friends to the number of over eighty met to report on the year of the year and to discuss plans for future service. Mrs. F. Jenkins, Presbyterial Secretary, occupied the chair.

The morning session was opened with devotional exercises by the Belleville Sowers' Mission Band of Madoc. Nancy Holland reading the Scripture and Pearl Holland leading in prayer.

After a few words of greeting the minutes of the last Rally, held in Madoc, were read by Mrs. Meredith Madoc, were read by Mrs. Meredith Neal, Secretary pro tem, and accepted. That the year had been one of honest and faithful service was abundantly shown by the goodly harvest of golden deeds, reported by individual bands.

The roll call showed that the following congregations were represented: Belleville, Burnbrae, Foxboro, Tingdon, Madoc and Frankford.

A chorus, "Jesus Loves the Children" by the Madoc Band, was followed by the collection, after which Lillian Young gave the offertory prayer. Mrs. Jenkins gave her report which was a resume of work of the year in the Presbytery, and showed eight Mission Bands, 173 meetings, with an average attendance of 115, one life member, 10 junior members, supplies valued at $24.15, total contribution $250.87. Each congregation is urged to organize a band.

At noon the ladies served a bountiful lunch. The afternoon session was opened by devotional exercises by members from Burnbrae. The Banner, a coveted reward to the Band doing the best work during the year was won by the "May Carruthers" Band of Belleville, which had 199 points. Madoc came second with 194 points and Foxboro third with 189 points and of a possible 240. Mrs. Reid, Presbyterial president, presented Miss Anne Marie MacCullough with a junior certificate.

Rae MacCullough welcomed the visitors to Foxboro and to the Rally to which a member from Belleville replied. The Foxboro Mission Band sang a chorus, "True Blue," and gave a pretty pageant, "Love's Canoe."

Mrs. MacCullough showed and explained many souvenirs from China and gems, beautiful work done by the Indian children at Norway House, Miss Lamont told of the interesting story "The god who could not stay on a shelf" and the effect it had on an Chinese boy.

This was followed by a beautiful piano solo by a member from Belleville. Mrs. Reid told of 'the proposed scrap book enclosed in all the Mission Bands of Canada for which a prize for the best one will be given.

Helen Wyhoick thanking the Foxboro Mission Band and ladies for their kind hospitality.

One verse of Missionary Bells was sung, led by the Madoc Band, and Miss Lamont closed the meeting with prayer.

At this Rally there was the largest attendance recorded for several years, in a great measure due to Miss Lamont, Travelling Secretary, who has been touring the Presbytery encouraging the faithful and stirring up the careless.

LONE BANDIT STAGES HOLDUP AT TRENTON

Trenton Mail Carrier Held Up by Lone Bandit Registered Parcels Taken

Forced To Drive Up Lonely Road After Proffering Lift

BELIEVED ARMED

Countryside Scoured By Police With No Clue Found

A lone mail robber successfully held up the Trenton mail wagon, driven from the Trenton C.N.R. station to the town post office after forcing the driver, Howard Clarke, to drive up a lonely road, relieving the carrier of registered mail parcels of unknown value, shortly before 4 a.m. today.

Despite the fact that the countryside in all directions north of Trenton, where the hold coup was staged, was thoroughly scoured by Trenton and Provincial police, the unknown bandit has successful evaded the law and was still at liberty at noon today.

As was his usual custom Mr. Clarke, who delivers the mail from the railway station to the post office in Trenton, met C.N.R. express train No. 19 shortly after 3.00 a.m. After receiving his mail and loading the wagon he started for the post office. Just before reaching the Wooler road intersection a lone man boarded the wagon from the rear, after asking for a lift and at the point or a gun ordered the driver turn up the Wooler road, where the bandit ripped open the various bags with a large knife, evidently looking for the registered mail bag, which he took, leaving the rest. Finishing his work he made a successful escape across the fields while Mr. Clarke hurried back to the railway station where police officials and police were informed of the robbery.

Description Obtained

Until long after daybreak the police searched the district but without success. As to whether the robber had an automobile waiting for him is not known. A complete description of the man was given out by the Trenton police today. He was described as being about 5 feet 8 inches tall, slim build, wore a light brown topcoat and light brown hat.

In speaking to Clarke today he told the Ontario Intelligencer reporter "that after the man had jumped on the back of the wagon he asked him to come up to the front seat, but the man refused and at the intersection of Front Street and the Wooler road told Clarke to turn right. "I refused to do so," said Clarke, "but the stranger said 'If you do what I tell you to do you won't get hurt.' Believing him armed I obeyed. After proceeding up the road the light on the back of the wagon was extinguished by the man and he used a cigarette lighter to aid him in the work of cutting the bags open. After shifting two mail bags the registered parcels were found."

Seen Earlier in Morning

According to statements given out by the Trenton police a man answering the description of the hold-up man, was seen on the streets of Trenton about 2 a.m. Friday by Traffic Officer Huffman, who observed him loitering about the streets and stopping him learned that he was supposed to be hitch-hiking his way to Montreal. He told the officer that he had received a ride as far as Trenton and was endeavouring to "thumb" his way further eastward. After giving a satisfactory answer in all question he was not bothered further. Whether he was the man connected with the robbery has not been established.

No estimate of the loss could be obtained by the Trenton post office officials at a late hour this afternoon. A government post office inspector from Ottawa was en route to Trenton today, and on his arrival some fairly accurate leaves may be given out. The mail wagon was drawn by a team of horses.

SEAPLANE ARRIVES

Woolston, England, Sept. 22 —The seaplane of the liner Prince Line arrived here today after being missing for more than 26 hours. The crew of two was safe and the machine was undamaged.

CUBAN REBEL CHIEF

Soldiers and students have been dispatched into the Camaguey provinces of Cuba by President Ramon Grau San Martin to combat an uprising led by Juan Blas Hernandez, rebel chieftain during the regime of Gerardo Machado. The rebellion promoted by Hernandez is said to have caused President Grau San Martin to write his resignation and turn it over to his followers who are to determine whether the new government shall continue.

Given Three Hours to Live, Victim of Tetanus, Youth Returns Home, Cured

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—Taken to hospital, victim of tetanus, a month ago with only three hours to live, Roland Kerrigan, aged 12, was today discharged from the hospital incolr children—cured.

It was another victory for the youthful athlete, who was quite a boxer at his weight, 75 pounds, in his district. A week prior to his collapse from the dread disease he had jumped from his wagon on to a garden rake, one of the teeth passing through the right foot. When a doctor was finally called tetanus had set in.

He was unconscious for a week, have locked, and doctors and nurses worked feverishly over the little victim's bed after accusing him of misconduct with his wife.

Some days after he left the sanitarium came to live with him, witness said.

During corroborating this evidence, Hoff said he had pleased with his wife frequently to return home and when she refused on the street ordered her that May morning "everything went black."

TOO WET TO WORK ONLY REASON GIVEN

Relief Camp Near Kingston Soon Relieved of Dissenters

LEAVE CITY

Arrested For Trespassing And Ordered To Leave

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 22.—(CP)—Claiming it was too wet to work, 14 men in a group of 30 from a hut of Relief Camp No. 37, near here, decided they would not return to work, though the foreman said weather conditions were suitable. Everybody else in the camp was working as usual.

The staff was quickly cleaned up when the 14 strikers left the camp, congregated at Outer Station on the Canadian National Railway property and were promptly arrested for trespassing. Appearing in police court today, they pleaded guilty before Magistrate J. M. Parrell and were told to leave the city within a few hours. They were on their way at once.

The whole group of thirty in the hut refused to work at the start but after the camp superintendent gave them five minutes to go to work, more than half left their jobs. The others were told to get their paycheeks and turn in equipment, and to leave the camp.

They did so without any demonstration and made no complaint except that it was too wet to work.

MAY LEAVE ON SUNDAY

Mollison's Plane Is Ready For Long Flight

TORONTO, September 22.—(CP) The Seafarer II is all ready to go at a moment's notice," said Captain James Mollison, famous world long-distance fliey today, when asked about progress of preparations for the attempt he will make with his wife on the world's non-stop long-distance record.

"The Seafarer has been set and the compasses swung," he added. "We can only wait now for the necessary weather reports."

The flying couple were resting in their hotel awaiting favorable weather reports to enable them to getaway on the flight to Bagdad. Apparently only an arcs of unsettled weather prevents them from holding up the start.

The plane is to be flown flight to Wasaga Beach north of here, then landed until the weather is right for the take-off. There was a remote possibility this might take place at Toronto or Malton tomorrow, but Sunday or Monday was indicated as more likely.

FRENCH CLASSES AFTER SCHOOL HOURS PLANNED

Awaiting Approval of Department of Education

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—Subject to the approval of the Ontario Department of Education, permission had been granted Judge by the Toronto Board of Education for special conversational classes in French to be held in Howard Public School. The classes will be held after school hours for pupils whose parents desire them to attend and will entail no cost to the board.

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

New York, Sept. 22—There's a certain bulldog on the sidewalks of New York, which had better pick up a few tricks a day or two.

An upright piano dangled yesterday outside a third story window of a Bronx house, the dog sneaked up behind the piano and got back through the bolting rope. The piano hit the side walk with a crash.

Haled into court, the moving man asked a day's adjournment to "find that dog."

Pittsburgh, Sept. 22—New hearing rules for co-eds at Duquesne University are not as unlimited blessings. Necking is sternly prohibited, but ducking of freshmen under the campus pump is given an official Okay.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 22 (CP)—The hunting was good, and Howard Cole, having shot one of the squirrels he wanted, leaned against a tree to rest.

He felt a scratching at his shoulder and turned to see a big fox squirrel, sunshine and unafraid. He petted it and scratched its ears. It was a nice squirrel.

Then for long. Suddenly it sank its teeth in the hunter's fingers and Cole had to break it to get it loose.

Seattle, Sept. 22 (CP)—Lieut.-Gov. Victor A. Meyers thinks one of Seattle's greatest needs is a committee to cogitate about things.

The committee should do the entire worrying for the city, he said yesterday.

"Taxpayers should be able to devote themselves solely to drinking beer and raising mustaches."

U. S. MAY SUPPORT

Ready For Geneva Parley Where Tension Is Expected To Be High

Paris, Sept. 22.—(AP)—A complete three-power accord among Great Britain, France and Italy on disarmament and arms control was authoritatively said to have been reached today, but the question of penalties still was unfinished.

Norman H. Davis, American disarmament representative, was expected by the French to give general support to the plan, thus making possible a fourpower front at the impending Geneva Arms Conference.

A meeting of Mr. Davis, Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour of France, and Sir John Simon of Great Britain, was arranged for this evening.

Disarmament questions also were discussed at a luncheon at the British Embassy given by Lord Tyrrell, the British ambassador. Among the guests were Sir John Simon, Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, who came to Paris from his vacation at Aix-les-Bains, and Captain Anthony Eden and Alexander G. M. Cadogan, British diplomatic representatives.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Guelph, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP) — With consent of crown and defence counsels, Magistrate F. Watt committed Joseph Paul-Boncour of Norval for trial on a charge of criminal negligence, in police court today.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 22—The weather has been unsettled in the Eastern Canada with light local showers in Ontario and Western Quebec and moderate to heavy rains have occurred in the Maritimes and East Quebec. Elsewhere it has been fair throughout the west with moderate temperature.

Northern Ontario—Mostly cloudy tonight and Saturday with showers in some districts.

Ottawa and Upper St. Lawrence Valley— Northwest winds; partly cloudy tonight and Saturday; a few light scattered showers.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh winds, easterly at first partly cloudy and rather cool; probably followed by a few scattered showers.

Kenora and Rainy River—Partly cloudy, with not much change in temperature and moderate shifting winds.

Manitoba—Fair; not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Generally fair, with stationary or somewhat higher temperature.

WHERE MISSING FLYER CRASHED

Harold Neff, 23-year-old Clevelland airmail pilot, is recovering in Foote Hospital at Jackson, Mich., from injuries he received when he wrecked his plane in a forced landing near Leoni, Mich., after becoming lost in a fog on his regular run from Toledo to Cleveland. Photo shows the wreckage of the mail plane, where Neff lay for three days before being discovered by three boys. The course taken by Neff after losing the regular route is shown by the dotted lines on the map above.

JEWEL THEFT MAY BE SOLVED BY ARRESTS

Police Hold Two at Barrie For Theft of Gems

Fort Erie, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP)— Possibility of recovering $700 worth of jewelry stolen some weeks ago from Miss J. L. Aiking, Cincinnati university student who was holidaying at Erie Beach, was seen by Police Chief Griffin today. He has advised by Provincial Constable W. B. Elliott of Barrie, formerly of Port Erie, that a motorcar belonging to A. Gallitic of Buffalo, was stolen at the same time of the jewels, had been recovered at Barrie, damaged to the extent of $10, and that three men had been placed under arrest pending investigation.

The trio, Theodore Cole alias Mike Trela, Mike Welzunta and Thomas Toland, were said by police to have been implicated in the theft of the Bullock car and another motorcar. With them it was said several sets of license plates had been captured. Police assert Cole and Wertunta had admitted they were in Port Erie when the thefts occurred.

VERDICT ON LESSER COUNT

Charge of Murder Is Reduced To That of Manslaughter

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP)—Totally blind as a result of self inflicted wounds Jacob Hoff, 40 year old farmer, was back in Sandwich jail today awaiting sentence on a manslaughter count.

Hoff was charged with the murder of his wife, Kati, but a Supreme Court jury returned a verdict on the lesser count after a three-hour deliberation last night at the conclusion of the one-day trial. Sentence was deferred until the end of the Assizes.

Mrs. Hoff died last May from bullet wounds received following an argument with her husband. Hoff then turned the gun on himself and his own bullet severed his optic nerves.

Principal evidence in the case was that given by Joseph Snider, former member of the Hoff household. Testifying as a crown witness, Snider said Hoff had ejected him from the house after accusing him of misconduct with his wife.

Some days after he left the woman came to live with him, witness said.

During corroborating this evidence, Hoff said he had pleaded with his wife frequently to return home and when she refused on the street ordered her that May morning "everything went black."

FIVE GUNMEN STAGE HOLDUP

Policeman Killed When Attempting To Investigate Accident

Chicago, Sept. 22 (CP)—Behind a smoke screen laid in Chicago's Loop today five gunmen staged a daring holdup of four Federal Reserve Bank employees and five minutes later shot and killed a policeman after their automobile collided with another. The robbery, carefully planned and swiftly executed, probably will not net much in the way of loot, an official of the Federal Reserve Bank said. W. C. Bachman, cashier and assistant Deputy Governor of the bank, said he believed the two bags contained nothing but cashed cheqeks from member banks.

The policeman killed as he and a fellow officer approached the desperadoes' car about a mile from the scene of the robbery not knowing of the holdup, was Miles Cunningham, 35.

A moment before the machine had overturned after striking another, and as Cunningham and Policeman Morris Fitzgerald stepped into the street, the men crawled from the wreckage and sent a barrage of machine gun bullets toward the officers. Cunningham fell mortally wounded while Fitzgerald jumped behind a metal sign and returned the fire. The desperadoes commandeered a passing motorist's machine and sped from the scene. A few minutes later they forced another motorist from his car and fled, leaving the other behind.

ALLEGES PERMISSION REFUSED COUNSEL

Attributes Causes of Defects In Appeal To This Condition

Toronto, Sept. 22.—(CP)—Refusal of authorities to permit counsel sedentiary to allow the prisoner to see his counsel was alleged by R. J. Fallis, counsel today in court of appeal to be the cause of defects in the material on which he based an application for leave to appeal from filing notice of appeal on behalf of Louis Miller.

Miller was convicted here September 16, 1932, on charges of living on the avails of prostitution and sentenced to four years in penitentiary.

The court believed the material produced by Fitz did not disclose sufficient grounds for appeal but after hearing his argument agreed in allowing the motion for a model to permit counsel to add to the material.

STUMBLES ON CIRCULAR SAW BODY SEVERED

Father And Fellow Workmen Look On Horrified

SLAB JAMS

Attempting To Dislodge Wood, When Accident Occurs

CLARKSBURG, Ont., Sept. 22.—(CP)—While his father and two fellow workmen looked on horrified, Victor Marritt, aged 22, was killed instantly today, when he stumbled and fell on a circular saw, which practically cut his body in two. The accident occurred at the Clendenan Shingle Mill where Marritt and his father were employed.

Victor was operating the saw, when a cedar slab became jammed in the moveable frame. In attempting to dislodge the piece of wood, he lost his balance and fell across the unguarded machine-operated saw.

He was dead, when pulled off the saw by his father, Harry Marritt, Q., Clendenan, owner of the mill and Clendenan's son, who were operating the engine for the machine.

Coroner Dr. J. F. McKee announced an inquest would be held.

LABOR CONGRESS CHARGES RELIEF CAMPS SHOULD CLOSE

Attack System of Paying Single Relief Workers 20 Cts. Day

(By Jack Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP) — With a smashing attack on the Federal relief camps system in which unemployed single relief workers are paid 20 cents a day with food and clothing, delegates to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress convention here today declared the camps were unfair and unclean and should be closed.

J. Wilks, of Niagara Falls, said that one camp in the Minden, Nipissing district area, had been situated on a hill with a well at the bottom and sewage from stables made the water unfit for drinking.

Chief opposition was directed at the 20 cents a day session and pay. Numerous delegates, including Fred Bancroft, of Calgary; James Marsh, of Toronto, and James Simpson of Toronto, assailed the government for "paying the way to lower wages" by maintaining the camps.

Tom Moore and F. M. Draper of Ottawa, were unanimously re-elected president and secretary-treasurer respectively and all three vice-presidents were also returned to office.

Percy Benjough of Vancouver, one of the vice-presidents, alleged there had been "wholesale corruption" in the establishment of the relief camps in his province. He also asserted there had been a "leak" prior to the delivery of the Federal budget at, the last session and that millions of pounds of sugar had been made ready when the budget went into advance of the budget there would be a tax on the commodity.

Prize Sow Fails to Co-Operate as Birth Given to Eighteen Little Pigs

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP) — A prize sow at the fair here just won't co-operate with exhibition management.

Since the fair opened with many fine specimens of agricultural prowess for livestock, it has been found that even now there is not sufficient room for all the exhibits. The prize sow, owned by G. M. Graham Udora, didn't help matters when she gave birth to 18 little pigs. It was birthpiace of the prize pig, where the blessed event took place. The mother was born in the same pen two years ago.

MERCHANTS TO MEET TUESDAY

A meeting of the Retail Merchants will be held Tuesday morning at 9.30 in the T.M.C.A. Important business will be discussed and all members are urgently asked to attend.

208 DRUGGISTS IN NEW ORGANIZATION

Belleville members of the Independent Druggists' Association held a meeting and luncheon at the New Queen's Hotel, Thursday with Mr. Charles Ostrom presiding. Mr. W. W. Stephens, manager of the Drug Trading Co. and his daughter Miss Shirley Stephens, advertising advisor of her father's company, and Mr. J. N. C. Hill, organizer for the I.D.A. were present. Seated with the officials was the Rev. A. L. Geen, one of the oldest active druggists in Canada.

The meeting was of a strictly business nature. Mr. Stephens spoke on trade conditions and problems, and Mr. Hill reported on the increasing membership of the Independent Druggists' Association which now embraces 208 co-operating druggists in Ontario.

HORSESHOE CLUB IS FORMED AT S. E. A. C.

The formation of a horseshoe pitching club was concluded this week by members of the South End Athletic Club with the enrollment of some twenty-five or thirty adherents of the game. It is expected that challenges will be issued by the players from their courts on St. Paul Street to teams in the city and district. The courts at present are the scene of intensive practice and lively games.

4 BEARS ESCAPE HUNTSMEN'S RIFLES

Four bears in a corn field Thursday morning on the farm of Mr. Doug. Brown, Roseniaw, called it and munched the ears within plain view of the house until surprised in their act by the startled owner of the plot. Hurrying back to the house, Mr. Brown secured himself with a gun, and then with the assistance of Thomas and Gordon Webb, started in trio after them to track the family of brains. The bears, however, sniffed trouble in the wind and departed from the scene.

MASONS TO ATTEND AT BONARLAW TUES.

Invitations are being issued by the Grand Lodge or Ontario East of the A.M. to the Masons of the district to attend the corner stone laying of the new Bonarlaw Public School which will be held on Tuesday morning, September 26, at 10.30 a.m. Past Grand Master M. W. Bro. Herrington, K.C., of Napanee will officiate. In order to accommodate the large number of visitors, who will be present, dinner will be served in the Orange Hall at Springbrook, following the event. A number of the Masonic Order from this city will attend.

TOP COAT WEATHER FELT ON FRIDAY

A cold wind from the north today brought discomfort and chilliness to residents of the district and resulted in a six point drop in temperatures over those recorded on Thursday. Gray clouds which covered the district throughout the day precluded the possibility of any immediate rise, with weather probabilities also indicating little relief from the present cool spell. Only moderate weather is forecast by the weatherman.

FOUND WANDERING IN KIND OF STUPOR

Wandering about the streets of Belleville in a stupor a Toronto boy, aged 15 year was "picked up" by Constable Taylor about midnight Thursday. Upon being taken to the police station the lad informed the officer in charge that he was returning home from Montreal. A bottle of medicine he had and which he had been using, was believed to be responsible for his condition. His parents were notified and the lad will be turned over to his mother on her arrival some time today.

WORKMEN CLEAN ALL MAIN SEWERS

City workmen are engaged this week at the task of cleaning out and cleaning main sewers in various streets. In the majority of instances, rock growths, even in the case of that have been laid a considerable depth underground have given the department considerable work in removing them. A few sewers were reported almost half filled with the tenacious growth.

RELIEF SCHEME NOT DISCUSSED

The first committee meeting for the 1933 term for city councillors held last evening was marked by little discussion and the passage of a few routine matters. Presided over by the absence of Mayor Tice from the city at present, Ald. Ponton filled in the vest, discussion of modern schemes for relief work during the coming winter was held over until the council meeting on Monday night next.

Four recommendations were drawn up at Thursday night's meeting.

It was recommended that "in view or complaints received from residents in the vicinity of the Modern Cleaners and Dyers, and the Belleville Steam Laundry, these concerns be requiring forthwith to take necessary steps to abate the smoke nuisance complained of, failing which this council to consider the passage of a "Smoke Bylaw".

That permission be granted to William J. Dennis to operate a grocery store on part of Lot 6, in the southeast corner of Pine and Chatham Streets, providing the said building meets with the requirements of Building Bylaw No. 1633.

That the Victorian Order of Nurses be granted permission to hold a tag day on September 30th in accordance with their request.

That the city solicitor be authorized to take the necessary steps to evict tenants now occupying 34 Gt. St. James Street.

LAD STRUCK ON HEAD BY SWING

Madoc.—Jimmie Crawford, small son of Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Crawford, is suffering from slight concussion of the brain and bruises. He was struck by the swing while trying to rescue his dog, while at play last evening, and was carried some distance and fell, striking his head on and back. Today's report is that he is slightly improved.

Among those attending the funeral of the late Mrs. John A. C. Connell in Madoc on Monday last, were, Mr. David Coffin, Mrs. Alfred Guffin, Trenton; Mrs. J. Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sills and little daughter of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. S. Elliott, Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gibb, Mrs. Wm. Wheeler, Mrs. H. Barrager of Belleville; Mr. Wm. Guffin and Miss Beatrice Guffin, Miss Annie Gibb, Mrs. Wm. Wheeler, Stirling, and Mr. and Mrs. Martin of Elzs.

A large audience greeted the first performance of the Canadian Chautauqua troupe playing this week at the Empire Theatre in Madoc. The talented singers and tap-dancer were enthusiastically received by both young and adult audience and all season ticket holders are looking forward to having the best and most interesting Chautauqua season ever given in this village.

Miss Margaret E. Nickle left on Monday to attend the Normal School at Peterborough for the second year's course having gained there for the first time, to obtain her permanent first class certificate granted those who successfully complete their second year of training.

Three teams of bowlers from Madoc attended the annual mixed bowling tournament in Tweed last week. Those were skipped by Messrs. Percy Gunn, Jas .Watson and Hugh Kellar. An ideal day and genial sportsmanship of all bowlers prevailed made the day a most enjoyable one for all participants, and a bountiful supper prepared by the Tweed ladies was served at the clubhouse added zest to a most delightful day. To Mr. Wilty's team from Stirling went first honors while Tweed teams, of which seven or eight competed, won the other prizes awarded.

Mrs. McNeil of Lansdowne is spending a short time with her daughter, Mrs. Jesse M. Reid, in Madoc.

OBITUARY

LATE REV. J. A. CONNELL

Madoc (Special)—On Monday afternoon, the funeral of the late Rev. John A. Connell, a former pioneer in the Methodist ministry of North Hastings, took place from his residence Church, Madoc, the remains being brought to Madoc from his former home in Toronto at his special request. The minister, Rev. C. W. Rivers had charge, assisted by Rev. Mr. Joblin, of Rawdon Circuit; Rev. Mr Minion of Castleton; Rev. Mr. McIntosh of Seymour, and Rev. Mr. Harrison, who is superannuated and living in Belleville. These were all fellow co-workers of Mr. Connell, and Mr. Harrison was one of those who was ordained with him in the former Methodist church of this place, which stood on the same grounds as the present church. The pall bearers were all old friends, Mr. Wm. Holmes of Fox's appointment; Mr. Percival Carman from Union Church; and Messrs. Simeon Fox, Herbert Bailey, Robert McClure and Graham Harris of Madoc. The flower bearers were friends from his former circuit in Rawdon.

Funeral services were held at 3.30 o'clock on Sunday from the Tyrell Burial Company Funeral Home in Toronto. Several former friends of the ministry were present, including Rev. Butler, Rev. B. Tucker, and Rev. Wallace, a former minister of the Presbytery and other ministers took part in the service which was conducted by Rev. Irwin, pastor of Donlands United Church.

Monday's arrival at Madoc was conducted by Rev. G. W. Brown, assisted by Rev. Mr. Irvine in Christ, and to die is gain." Rev. Mr. Harrison of Belleville spoke appreciatively of the life and character and the value to the ministry of the late Rev. Mr. Connell.

Interment was made in Lakeview Cemetery and beautiful floral tributes covered the earth of many friends and neighbors.

The late Rev. Connell was born at Smith's Falls in 1851. He was educated at Albert College, Belleville, and Victoria College, Toronto. He served on the mission fields of South Manitoba, Cayuga and Coe Hill.

He was ordained at Madoc in 1884. In 1890 he was married to Christina Coffin of Madoc, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Coffin. He had children at Victoria Rd., Ashcrft, Eldorado, Thomasburg, Oakwood, Newcastle, Rawdon and other circuits, and his last charge was Arthur.

In 1918 the Bay of Quinte Conference and became associated with the Hamilton Conference, and filled several important positions, including the chairmanship of Madoc district. After his superannuation he acted as summer supply at Donlands Avenue United Church, Toronto.

He died at his late residence on Sunday afternoon, September 15th, after a three years' illness, having been confined to his bed since January when he suffered a stroke.

Deceased is survived by his widow, one son, Douglas F. Connell of Calgary, Alberta, and two daughters, Mrs. P. R. Brett and Miss Constance Connell, both of Toronto, also two sisters, Mrs. Ed. Coyle of Toronto, and Mrs. Cyrus Scarffe of Metcalfe; also one brother, James, in Denver, Colorado.

To those who knew him Rev. John Connell was ever a helpful friend, a devoted pastor and an earnest, upright preacher. He had a host of friends wherever he resided, who will deeply regret his passing. He was a devout Christian, a loving husband and an affectionate father, and an honorable citizen, whose triumphant passing will be deeply mourned.

BETTY LOU LITTLE

Betty Lou Little, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Little of the 2nd concession of Thurlow, passed away this (Friday) morning in the Belleville General Hospital. The baby was in her third year and besides the parents has a sister and four brothers surviving. Eva, William, Virgil, James and Frederick, all at home.

MANY RAWDON RESIDENTS ATTEND STIRLING FAIR

Rawdon.—Rawdon folk attended Stirling Fair on Wednesday despite the threatening weather with very lous signals of rain, and several carried home red tickets. The children also took part in the championship. In the school parade there were thirty-two entries.

The 12th line School, S.S. No. 14, Miss Foley, teacher, won first.

White Lake School—Connie Anderson, teacher, second.

Brown School—Ivan Wright, teacher, third.

A large number of melon wagons and cider barrels were in evidence.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Montgomery and Miss Alice McKelvey were guests of their aunts, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith, Camnitton, on Sunday evening and enjoyed a visit with Mr. Smith's daughter, Mrs. C. Steele of Vancouver Island, B.C., who is holidaying with her parents.

Mrs. Herbert Miller spent a few days this week with Mrs. Bedford at Madoc.

Miss Edith Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wallace, is in Peterboro attending Normal.

Rawdon has been very sorry that Mr. Charles Dunham of Wellman's is not improving in health as quickly as they hoped he would after undergoing an operation in Belleville. Ryan received word on Tuesday that Mrs. Robert Smith of Chatsford had met with misfortune to fall down cellar and break her leg so badly.

Mr. Claude Sharpe, Misses Mildred and Gladys and Master Harold Sharp of Mount Pleasant, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown and Mr. Cecil Brown motored to Toronto on the Sharp-Neal nuptials on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Arnold of Davenport, Iowa, attended Stirling Fair and renewed pleasantries with old friends.

Mr. Percy Reid of Foxboro spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Sharp.

Miss Irene Bertrand of Frankford spent the week-end of September 16th with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Montgomery.

Rawdon folks were sorry to hear of the illness of Mrs. Thomas Allen.

Colds are very prevalent here this week and some folks have been very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. James Linn spent Thursday, September 14th at the home of Mrs. Linn's sister, Mrs. Patterson, Corbyville.

Among the Rawdon folk who attended Stirling Fair last week were: Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Heath, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rowe, Mrs. Donelda Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Asselstine, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Stewart Hoover, John Hoover and Walter Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Reid of Belleville and Mr. Willie Montgomery and Miss Irene Bertrand jo tea on Sunday evening.

Messrs. A. Kellar, Bert Jeffs, Herb Hagerman and Percy Brown of Mount Pleasant and Messrs. Harry Brown, Albert Fraser and John Brown, Albert Fraser and John Brown of Rawdon played soft ball at Stirling Fair on Wednesday.

KNOCKED DOWN BY BICYCLE

Frankford.—Mr. and Mrs. Murney Reynolds of Foxboro, brought their little daughter, Miss Hazel, to Belleville Hospital last Sunday.

Mr. Vernon Bush has bought Mr. Thos. Burkitt's farm on the 4th line.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Jos. Armstrong and family on the passing of a devoted wife and mother, Mary Ann Armstrong, in her early 70 days old.

Mr. Tobe Latta is leaving this week for Kingston to resume his studies.

Mr. Gerald Foster met with a serious accident about 9 p.m. last Friday evening when he was driving his car down on the pavement by his brother riding a bicycle. Dr. Wallbridge took him to Belleville Hospital and at present he is resting easy. He has a fractured leg and arm broken.

Mr. and Mrs. Gullett and family of Picton spent Sunday at Mrs. Windover's.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Frost entertained company from Montreal on Sunday.

Several from here attended Stirling Fair.

DELIGHTFUL TIME AT HOUSE-WARMING

One of the recent pleasant events in West Lake, was the housewarming given by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pyne of Foster Avenue, by some old friends and neighbors, which took the night of their occupying their lovely new camp, just completed by Mr. Herb. Brown's shore-site "Maple Haven".

The location is ideal; and the view from the sun-porch living room, through which the tall white pine trees of the lake, presented a most gorgeous picture, especially beyond the nearby wooded point of land with the "Gap" showing in the distance, and the dunes of Prince Edward's noted "Sandbanks" on the left. The entire picture is reflected in the mirror-like waters of the lake, on a very very feet at the shore; a flock of wild ducks were winging their way to their haven for the night, gave a picture of exquisite quiet, that gave peace to the refresh and strengthen one's tired soul, after a week of worry and hassle of business activities.

Then as the shadows deepened and the evening closed in, a huge pyramid of cedar boughs was lighted. It sparkled and crackled and snapped, looking just like one gigantic Roman candle, and the delightful odour of fragrance that made one think of the balm of the fir trees.

Later, there was the treat of the "Weiner Roast" and delicious melon, all shapes and sizes, with the truly 'proverbial camp songs and lakes of Indiana long ago" that has made always the days spend at "Maple Haven" the home of Mr. Herbert Brown an assemblin place they are ideal hosts at an occasion of this kind.

The little group included Mr. Brown's family with acquaintances and relatives from Rochester, New York and Belleville, who wished them much happiness in their new and delightfully situated camp in one of the garden spots of Prince Edward County.

POLICE COURT

Simon Palmatier and Stanley Ellis, neighbors living on Great St. James Street were found guilty of assault and given each a suspended sentence following a lengthy police court trial held before Magistrate Kinel, Friday morning. Palmatier laid an information against Ellis charging him with assault, while a counter charge of the same description was laid by Ellis. At Worship, after hearing the evidence bound both men over to keep the peace.

The alleged assault rose over the question of a driveway, that is supposed to be used by the tenants occupying Nos. 32 and 34 Great St. James Street, where Ellis and Palmatier reside. The driveway is on the Palmatier side of the residence.

The assault, which occurred shortly after noon on Sept. 16th last, culminated a lengthy feud between the two families. Members of both families gave contradictory evidence, which His Worship discounted and found both parties equally guilty.

Harry Cassell, who was arrested on a charge of attempting to steal gasoline pleaded guilty to the charge and was given a suspended sentence. Cassell was ordered to vacate the town as fast as possible. He did so. A local resident was given one month in the common jail for breach of the L.C.A.

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly one-half of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sour-ness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc, are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid. In these cases the digestion is too fast, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases as they do not remove the cause. Try taking safe all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurated Magnesia (not the milk of magnesia) in tablet form or a teaspoonful in water after meals until relieved. This will neutralize the excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia tablets in powder form—never liquid or pills—is the favorite treatment for it is a fine remedy for those who prefer their meals with no fear of indigestion.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hodgen spent a few days with friends in Westport.

An interesting event took place in the village on Tuesday evening, September 19th, being the presentation to the Foxboro ball team for competition of the trophy donated by W. R. Trumnon, M.P., and which event was in his season by our boys. A large crowd of fans from this and surrounding community assembled to do honor to the boys who had brought home to the village by their splendid ball playing and the sportsmanlike manner in which they conducted themselves during the season.

The meeting was held in the commodious shed of the United Church. Mr. Pringle of Melrose, President of the League, occupied the chair and Mr. Trumnon, M.P., and Mr. C. H. Hill, M.L.A., were present on the platform. The chairman with a few appropriate remarks called the meeting to order and a short and pleasing program was rendered consisting of selections by Miss Hicks, of Carmel, and Rev. Hill of Roslin, made by the Hallowray orchestra and Mr. Carter and son, and speeches by J. P. Hill, M.L.A., and Rev. Mutton, of Foxboro.

Mr. R. Trumnon, M.P., was then called upon to make the presentation of the beautiful silver trophy to the winners of the league. In a very suitable address in which he spoke of the important part that sport has played in the history of the world and of its role in the building of character, he gave some good advice to the boys and presented the trophy. Mr. G. W. Henderson, manager of the team, accepted the trophy with a few remarks and the meeting was closed by singing the National Anthem.

Refreshments were then produced and the entertainment was continued for an hour with a feast of cake, sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and confections. Everyone enjoyed the evening and the boys received many congratulations on their success.

FUNERAL OF LATE MRS. FITZGERALD WELL ATTENDED

Carrying Place, Sept. 22 — The funeral of Mrs. Ann Fitzgerald of Port Colborne was held from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ida Donnerson here on Sunday afternoon at one o'clock with Rev. Mr. Swayze of Consecon officiating. Although it was originally planned to hold the funeral on Saturday, it was necessary to postpone it until Sunday owing to the fact that the heavy rains close relatives to reach here in time. Pall bearers were Messrs. James and John Hendricks, John Quackenbush, John Donnerson and Ernest Bonker. Interment was made in the local cemetery. Among the relatives left by Mrs. Fitzgerald are her husband, Mr. John Fitzgerald of Port Colborne, one son in this community Messrs. Will and Thomas Fitzgerald and Mrs. Ida Zimmerman.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Way of Thomasburg and their son, William and Mrs. and Mrs. Frank Irwin of Smithfield were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Duperbois.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hennessey motored to Ivanhoe on Sunday last with friends, returning again to this community on Monday.

Mrs. George Brown is in very poor health following an attack of acute asthma which lasted for some time during her illness it was necessary to call in Dr. Van Luven of Consecon, but fortunately her recovery seems assured at present.

Recent frosts have made their effect noticeable in the fields and Vicriety and quality of fruits and flowers have been reduced. and potatoes and corn found produced are about finished.

Little Allan Cooper is confined to her home in Gardenville for a few days as the result of an unfortunate accident which occurred at the local school last Wednesday during the noon hour. Climbing on the steps at the rear of the school she twisted her ankle rather severely, and has been unable to walk the considerable distance between her home and the school since then.

Mr. Henry Rowe is reported in very poor health this week. On Sunday, he has been confined to his bed since then, and at present is still bedfast.

Mr. Will Hanthorn motored the hundred-odd miles to the old home back last week to attend the annual fair, accompanied by his sister, Miss Aileen, also Nora and Messrs. Roes and Harold Hennessey. Departing on Wednesday and returning late on Thursday, the party made the trip in both directions and report a splendid time. While in the village on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Henessey were guests of their daughter, Mrs. Roy Kingsley, and Mr. Kingsley.

Forty boys and girls enjoyed to the full their annual trip to the township school fair held at Wooler on Tuesday of last week, making the trip via Westfall's transport, they and their parents left to relieve their feelings of exuberance. A goodly number of prizes were taken by local youth and all felt well repaid for the preparations made for the parade. Master Hanna took his lamb with him in the truck, another one of everywhere that Million goes, the lamb is sure to go and won a nice cash prize with it.

Sunday school was held in the United Church as usual on Sunday morning.

Road conditions on the Trenton-Carrying Place road were slightly improved last week when the power grader under the guidance of Mr. Lawson spent two days levelling out some of the rough spots. It is unfortunate that no matter how often the road be graded up, the traffic is so unbelievably heavy that in a very short time the loose gravel will have been thrown off on to the edges and the bumps are left exposed for all to enjoy.

After spending a pleasant week visiting with the La Tour family, Mrs. Thomas Hall and baby from Cornwall returned to their home last Saturday.

Mr. Fred Hennessey has "gone into the apple" a common enough occupation for many local people for some time to come. Apple prices are fairly promising this season, and much to the joy of the growers the crop is a very good one to be good.

Little crew owned by the Creek boys paid an unexpected and unwelcome visit to the school one morning last week. Attracted by goods, by crusts and apple cores which he found outside, he has been hanging around the building for several days. The teacher, upon able persuasion was needed to remove him; but he finally flew as far as the outer fence, remaining where he kept looking curiously in. Perhaps he has an unusual amount of curiosity; at any rate he may be seen almost anywhere in the community flying over one's head and paying visits whenever and wherever he wishes.

CAR DESTROYED BY FIRE FROM SHORT CIRCUIT

Tyendinaga.—Rev. Herbert Pringle and the pastor of Tyendinaga exchanged pulpits with the Rev. Osbourne Walker of Bath, on Sunday, September 17th.

Miss Marion Nicholson accompanied Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gordon to Cannington on Sunday.

A special train was run to Kingston via C.N.R. on Sunday by the members of the Holy Name Society of St. Carthage's Church. A large number of members of the society from Tweed and the surrounding district was held at Richardson memorial stadium in Kingston.

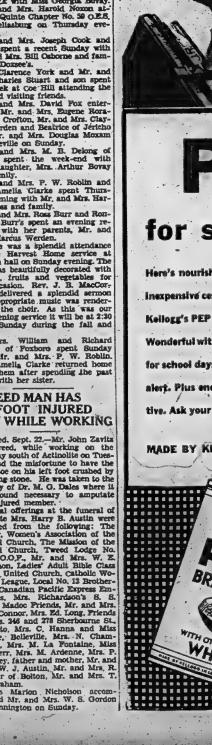
Messrs. C. M. Clenahey and C. G. Leavitt of Montreal were in town this week.

The Horticultural Society met on Tuesday evening in the council chambers with Mrs. M. Chittenden presiding. It was decided to invite Mr. V. F. Clark, secretary of the Horticultural Societies Branch, to give a lecture in Tweed this fall if an early date could be secured. The secretary, Mrs. A. C. Blakely was instructed to get information regarding bulbs for fall planting.

The society was invited to cooperate with a prominent flour company which is holding a bread and cake baking contest in Tweed. The winners of this contest will be invited to compete with winners of 20 other counties for a grand prize. This latter contest will be held in Guelph next spring. A committee composed of Mrs. M. Drinkwater, Mrs. M. J. Quinn and Mrs. P. C. Arber was named to receive the entries. Mrs. Drinkwater, Mrs. P. Forrest, Mrs. A. W. McGuire and Mrs. W. H. Richardson were named as a refreshment committee.

NEWSY NOTES OF SHANNONVILLE

Shannonville—Shannonville fair has passed for another year, with a huge crowd in spite of the threatening weather and a very large crowd enjoyed the dance in the evening.



Mr. and Mrs. Howard Huck of Rockport, Ont., spent Saturday and Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. White.

Mrs. Fred Palmer of Toronto was called here owing to the death of her brother, the late James Soder.

The funeral was held on Thursday from the home of Mr. J. P. McFarlane. Interment was made in Riverview cemetery.

HIGHER than the peak...

Employment . . . how to maintain it, how to increase it . . . is a key topic of the day. So we feel this fact has genuine interest.

During 1933 to date, British-American Oil is carrying more men on its payrolls than ever before!

In that statement we need not exclude even the peak of 1929. For despite the trying conditions of these recent years, there has been no interruption in the steady growth of public confidence in British-American products.

This confidence has been justly earned. We know that the average driver must buy on faith in a brand. So for 27 years we at British-American have devoted ourselves to making sure that his faith in B.A. will never be misplaced. He may drive where he likes . . . B.A. quality is always uniform. He may own any make of car . . . B.A. products will always give him balanced performance.

In the future as in the past the standards which are the foundation of this confidence will be jealously guarded.

HOW HIGH IS UP?

"Attempts of Piccard, inspector of stratosphere, and others to soar to great altitudes, have occasioned a great deal of interest in recent years," says Hamilton Spectator. "A United States scientist, who had a disappointing experience at the Century of Progress exposition recently, when his balloon developed a flaw, proposes to try again and it is conceivable that Piccard's achievement, the gaining of an altitude of 54,000 feet, in the not distant future will take on the earmarks of the commonplace. Dr. Morris Fishbein, treating on the subject in a recent article, directed attention to the fact that the height to which balloonists may go will be dependent on the ability of science to provide them with suitable atmosphere, in which to live while ascending. For instance, he says, 'it is well known that the oxygen tension at the top of Mount Everest is so great that prolonged exposure to it is likely to result in changes in the heart and other organs. Two investigators, Mallory and Irvine, after reaching 28,000 feet on Mount Everest, lost their lives in the attempt to climb the last 1,000 feet without the oxygen-breathing apparatus. Because of the shortness of breath at these immense heights, the observers find it practically impossible to live and it is only with the help of proper apparatus that they are enabled to do so.' Dr. Fishbein says that Dr. Leonard Hill, famous British physiologist, determined to ascertain how high an aviator can fly when breathing oxygen and discovered that the safe altitude for an aviator who has to control his machine is equal to a tension of 130 mm. of mercury. It has been calculated that 9 mm. of mercury corresponds to a height of over 55,000 feet. Piccard, who ascended to the stratosphere,' says Dr. Fishbein, 'says the barometer at the start of his ascent to nearly 54,000 feet indicated only 75 mm. of mercury. Therefore, it is judged that an aviator breathing oxygen could safely climb to 45,000 feet'."

NEW GLORY TO ITALY

After Balbo and his mass flight of seaplanes across the Atlantic and back, comes the Rex with Capt. Francesco Tarabotto and Engineer Luigi Risso. This ship of the Italian line has broken every (or almost every) record the statisticians have been able to dig up. And they have broken these records, it is understood, on the express orders of Il Duce himself.

The Rex crossed from Gibraltar to Ambrose Light—3,181 miles—in four days, fifteen hours, and fifty-eight minutes, an average speed of 28.92 knots an hour, equivalent to about 33.3 land miles an hour.

The old East-West record was held by the Europa of the North German Lloyd, which made a 3,149 mile crossing from Cherbourg in four days, sixteen hours and forty-eight minutes. The Bremen of the same line has made it from New York to Plymouth, England, in four days, fourteen hours and thirty minutes, and from New York to Cherbourg in four days, fourteen hours. Other ships have made quicker crossings than the Rex, but over shorter routes.

Thus, as the New York Times, observes, "glory these days rains down on Italy, and her Duce. During the first years of Mussolini there was talk of the revival of the Roman Empire and of 'Mare Nostrum,' the Mediterranean, as 'our sea.' One can not altogether blame the Italian papers if they suggest that the Atlantic is 'Mare Nostrum'."

GOLFER'S SLICE NO "ACT OF GOD"

Hit in the eye by a golf-ball as she was motoring, a New York woman took the eye to Judge Pettie's court the other day and sought damages in the amount of $1,000, says the Literary Digest.

To this the golfer's counsel objected strongly, arguing that a gust of wind had carried the ball off its course, and that consequently the accident was an "act of God."

The judge gave the case to the lady, who gets $750, and said in the course of a nineteen-page decision:

"It must be conceded that, although golf should not be deemed a hazardous game, a driven golf-ball is a very dangerous missile and that its flight and direction can not always be controlled by the player. The uncertainty is part of the game. The ball, when struck, is liable to go down the fairway or fly off to the right or left or at any angle.

"The element of danger, therefore, though no intrinsic in the game itself, is nevertheless present, according to a given set of circumstances.

"The situation is not changed by the fact that the act of propelling the ball is in itself not wrongful and is for a lawful purpose, that is, to play the game.

"It is not likely that the conclusions I have reached work undue hardship upon any golf club, since the risk may be readily insured against for a premium which in the nature of things will be quite small."

LEFT BEHIND

It must be true that there is left behind
A portion of the self, where one has been
As a faint fragrance lingers on the wind
In plundered gardens, odors vague and thin.
It must be true, for when I sat today
An hour in the room which once was yours
Your gladness touched me, like the tossing spray
The singing ocean flings on thirsting shores.
Your tenderness revived me like the foam
Whose freshness cools the fevered lips and cheek;
The whisper of you made bare walls a home
And of your grace I heard the shadows speak.
This place, which else were lonely now, and dreary,
Is blest because your glamour lingers here.

EVER FLY A KITE? Remember when we used to make 'em, using old newspapers and stray pieces of wood—how we would get all stuck up with the paste. But we would make kites that would fly sky-high, by hickory! Flying ability of the kites of our youth depended a good deal upon the length and weight of the tail. Member how we used to attach a bunch of weeds to the tail just to give the right balance? Nowadays kites are made in factories and do not need tails. Purty dang things, but not in it with the kites we used to fly on the village green. However, kite flying seems to be coming back, reminding us that the Japanese are the greatest kite flyers in the world and make almost a religion out of it. All of which reminds us of the messages we used to send heavenward on the string which held the kite, and how we would eagerly watch those bobbing pieces of paper as they climbed ever higher until lost to sight away up where our mammoth kite soared so proudly, swooped and dived and answered the controls like a human being.

Accelerating Seed Germination

The sprouting of acorns, wheat, lettuce and Canada field pea seeds can be speeded up by treating them ordinary illuminating gas, while other kinds of seeds, especially tomato, either show no effect or are retarded by gas treatment, it has been learned by Carl G. Deuber, assistant professor of plant physiology at Yale University. The experiments were prompted by the earlier discovery that illuminating gas may act as a stimulant to dormant trees. They have not progressed enough to reveal why the gas has such effects.

EARLY LIFE DEVELOPMENT OF CHILDREN

Average Weight of Baby Is 7.35 Pounds

By Louis E. Block, M.D., Ph.D., Formerly Assistant in Health and Psychology

New-born babies do not, as a rule weigh 6 to 10 pounds, as one so often hears they do. Statistics say that the average weight at birth, including both sexes, is 7.35 pounds, boys weighing a trifle more and girls a trifle less.

All children lose weight for two days and this initial loss is 10 ounces. However, whereas infants who are breast-fed regain this loss by the tenth day, bottle-fed babies do not catch up for one or two weeks.

Children who are raised on mother's milk as well as those brought up on cow's milk normally gain the most during the first three months of life, from the third until the ninth months the gain is slowest. Generally speaking, and irrespective of the type of feeding, infants gain at least 4 ounces a week during the first six months. At the end of the first year a child should weigh 20 pounds.

During the second year the gain is normal, healthy children 4 to 5 pounds; during the third year it is 4 1-2, and during the fourth year about 4 pounds.

What often concerns a mother is the closure of what is popularly known as the "holes in the head." There are two such places—scientifically called "fontanels" — one in the front of the skull above the forehead, and one in the back of the head. This latter fontanel closes—that is, the bones come together thus obliterating the opening—by the end of the second month, as a rule. The fontanel in front closes under normal conditions, about the eighteenth month.

Should the fontanels close too early the child may be suffering from malnutrition. If closure is delayed, rickets may be the cause. In addition, one must always consider the possibility that a defective mental state in either case.

An infant's room should be kept darkened for a few days at least. On the sixth day a baby will sometimes follow a light with its eyes and may even turn its head. The recognition of objects seen usually does not occur until a child is five or six months old.

As regards speech, wide variations are to be noted. Girls usually talk earlier than boys—from two to four months earlier. By the end of the first year the baby can say a word or two. By the end of the second year they are able to put words together in short sentences. Improvement is rapid after that. Should a child not be able to talk at all by the time he is nine or ten, a physician should be consulted.

The first teeth to appear, at from six to nine months, are the two lower central incisors. Then come the four upper incisors at from eight to twelve months, and twelve to fifteen months the two lower lateral incisors as well as the four anterior molars make their appearance.

At one year a child should have 6 teeth; at 1 1-2 years 12 teeth; at 2 years 16 teeth; and at 2 1-2 years 20 teeth. The second or permanent teeth begin to appear at the age of six, and they are the first molars.

The sense of taste is highly developed at birth. Infants can distinguish sweet, sour and bitter.

Food not only should be palatable and nutritious; it must also be satisfying. This last quality the foods not so much upon the fact that the stomach is distended as it does upon the actual food value. Starchy foods and the activity of its digestive secretions. Foods particularly increase these factors, because they remain long in the stomach and hence are satisfying, are meat, fats, milk, well-cooked eggs, sweet dessert, bread and potatoes when added to meat.

RIOTS OVER VACCINATION

On this date, in 1885 the Provincial Board of Health issued a decree at Montreal ordering compulsory vaccination of all citizens as a consequence of a virulent outbreak of smallpox which had originated in Chicago. Little heed was taken of the epidemic at its outset but it spread so rapidly that in the poorer districts, where overcrowded and isolation in homes was ordered. When to this was added the vaccination order panic broke in some sections of the district; the suburbs were more aroused than the city itself. In one district in the east end organized parades their protest were soon augmented from the north. The 23rd saw demonstrations against the City Hall and the Gazette office, the managing editor of which, Alderman Richard White, was chairman of the civic health committee, and attempts to break into one or more of the armories were frustrated by sentries hurriedly called to duty. During that night the smallpox hospital was burned down, the fighting being renewed with difficulty and fear of the disease spreading added to the nervousness of the citizens.

The exhibition buildings in the north end were commandeered by the health authorities; the English militia regiments were called to arms; sentries guarded the exhibition grounds from the attacks of the mobs, the most notable being led by the "black feet", the Montreal name for Lords de Mauley for three nights gangs marched down St. Lawrence main street to again bombard the Gazette office with bricks and stones, but were prevented from marching into the then exclusively English sections by volunteers in mufti, whilst others in uniform paraded the streets and guarded the armories. Had Montreal not had a strong man in the mayor's chair the consequences might have been more serious, but the firm determination of Honore Beaugrand that order must be restored and the law respected soon convinced the turbulent that their folly was getting them nowhere. Moreover the Roman Catholic archbishop issued a pastoral letter ordering obedience to the vaccination order and within a week order was restored; vaccination went on apace and the epidemic was soon under control, but it was not until frost came in earnest that the temporary hospital was abandoned.

At the time, when I was dodging the bullets and bricks at the Gazette office, I did not detect any political motive in these demonstrations but since, in view of latter events, I have wondered whether these anti-vaccination riots were not planned by the organizers of those riots in November following over the execution of Louis Riel at Regina. Public resentment in Quebec province had been growing all summer and it only required an excuse to foment discord against the English-speaking section of the city. It was a good thing that the English militiamen kept their heads; a slight mistake might have started a conflagration which would have been difficult to control. The wisdom of the clerical authorities in Montreal also did much to avert a real calamity, both in 1885 and in November. It was a nerve-wracking year, 1885!

WASHINGTON NEW YORK IN BIG SERIES

Last Doubt Removed When They Win From St. Louis

STEWART HURLER

Defeats Old Teammates In Mound Duel With Hadley

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer).

The last lingering doubt has been removed and it's Joe Cronin and his mighty men of Washington against Bill Terry and his hustling New York Giants in the 1933 world series.

The Senators, long regarded as a "sure thing" to capture the American League flag, yesterday reached the point where they can't be beaten by defeating the last place St. Louis Browns 2-1 in a close game, brought before a stands that already were being prepared to receive the series crowds.

Washington has six more games to play and the second place New York Yankees eight, but even if the Senators lost them all and the Yankees won eight in an unbroken string of victories the final standing will show Washington first by victories and 55 defeats, the Yankees with 89 won and 54 lost.

The game which finally settles the pennant race brought little excitement to Washington fans, perhaps less than there was in the New York series of 2,000 stood in a drizzle of rain to pay tribute to the Giants as they received a civic welcome the day after their return from the west where they clinched the flag Tuesday.

The followers of the Senators knew all along they had a team of champions after they had fought off the challenge of last year's series winners, the Yankees, in a decisive series in August, and had piled up an ever increasing lead through the "dog days" when pennants are hard work.

Walter Stewart, lefthand southpaw who used to pitch for the Browns, held his former team in check to give the Senators the comfort of a duel with Irving (Bump) Hadley. The deciding run came in the seventh inning, just after St. Louis had tied the score, when Joe Kuhel singled, Bob Boken walked, and Luke Sewell brought Kuhel home with a double.

The Giants after their damp parade, enjoyed another day of much needed rest in preparation for the series duel as "their" game with the Brooklyn Dodgers, the other one on the National League schedule, was postponed.

The one remaining game saw the sudden and complete downfall of Johnny Marcum, rookie pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, who started the American League by starting out with ten straight victories, and a 10-3 triumph for Detroit Tigers over the A's in their final clash.

The other four American League clubs were not scheduled.

How Rival Teams Compare in Pending World's Series

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor).

New York, Sept. 22 (AP)— Chief among the reasons why it should be a hammer-and-tongs battle between the Giants and the Senators in the world series is that each pennant winning club has showed the ability to win under pressure. Each has slooked good "in the clutches."

Washington has an older more experienced and better balanced club. But it has shown no more coolness nor steadiness under fire, than the spirited group of young men directed by Bill Terry. If ever noticed the look in Bill Terry's black eyes or the jutting angle of his jaw, when he is talking or planning serious baseball strategy you will realize the influence he has upon his players.

It is a certain extent, the fortunes of this year's baseball war favored both championship teams.

The Senators took advantage of the sharp decline of the world champion Yankees in mid-season, yet it must be conceded the capitol crew helped start Babe Ruth and company downhill.

Washington captured the season's series from every American league rival by a decisive a margin, that room has been left for no argument.

Giants First to Win

Although the Giants were first to clinch the pennant, the fact that the club really was "in" did not become firmly established until they knocked off the Boston Braves the first week in September. The Braves had been especially troublesome all year for the New Yorkers, winning the majority of games, and were on the crest of a wave.

When they took the first game of the crucial series at Boston, the Braves aroused tremendous enthusiasm. It waned abruptly the next day when Hubbell and Fitzsimmons pitched and batted the Giants to a 9-0 victory before 50,000 fans. It vanished when New York made its four straight and left Boston with an eight game lead.

"That was the real turning point of our season," said Terry after leading his merry men through the west. The last time Washington could slop us after the battle of Boston. We just went out and beat all the tough ones on the enemy's grounds. And that's another reason why the Senators can't scare us."

The Giants and Senators waged a sensational battle the last time they met in the big series, in 1924. It wasn't decided in favor of the Nats until the 12th innings of the seventh and final game and the capitol city of the United States thereupon proceeded to go mad with celebration.

This year the Giants have the advantages of starting and possibly finishing their series at the Polo grounds. The first two and third two games are scheduled in New York.

Grid Season Officially Opens on Saturday

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—The new rules and the old, in both new and old surroundings, opens the Eastern Canadian Football season officially on Saturday, an atmosphere filled with pointing fingers. More dark and meaningful charges made in September air than even football has seen in many years.

The show goes on with a six-game exhibition programme at Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, London and Hamilton. Despite the warning of Commissioner Conger of Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, president, intelligence will prevail in the Big Four club, there doesn't seem anything doing before October or November at least.

When the playoffs are reached, then the A.A.U. may take action to keep the Big Four on the straight and narrow path. Provincial Union teams, Ottawa, Montreal, and Toronto Argonauts may be barred against teams whose amateur affiliations are closer than those of the major circuit.

Rough-house Stuff

Ottawa's Roughriders, a strong contender for the Big Four title, have acquired three Hamilton Tiger stars and a group of United States Rackfielders. Ottawa will face Montreal Westwards of the Intermediate Quebec Rugby Football Union at Ottawa. Last Saturday the Crimson-Helmeted Riders, against whom indirect charges of professionalism have been laid, defeated Baker Beach.

Montreal's Winged Wheelers, also somewhat fortified with American backfield, open their campaign against the Intermediate Montreal Canadiens at Montreal of the Q.R.F.U. The champion Hamilton Tigers, without an import from the other side of the border but favored withal to retain their Canadian title, clash with Hamilton Cube of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

Argos' play in the first half of a double-header here against St. Michael's College will be a football team. University of Toronto and Balmy Beach fill out the card.

The two winning teams will play a week later for the city championship and Reg. De Grusky Memorial trophy, held by Argos.

Toronto Argonauts Imperials who were jumped on the Tiger neck last November and but clawed out a sensational victory over the Bengals, once against Joe Breen's University of Western Ontario Mustangs at London. With a great backfield built around Hugh (Bummer) Stirling and Rocky Persico, former star of University of Detroit, Imperials are one of the pre-season Intermediate Quebec Rugby Football Union at Ottawa. Last Saturday run an innings until the termination of the game. No one hitter stood out for either club but consistent hitting in the pinches gave the Cubs their first championship in 1933.

During the game it was announced that a benefit euchre and dance would be held at the Veterans' Hall this evening with the proceeds being turned over to the players, who have received bad injuries in local softball games in the past season. Last night's game terminated all softball in Belleville for the current year.

BISONS NEED ONE VICTORY

Defeat Rochester 18-7 With Ten Run Uprising In Third

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 22 (CP)— Buffalo's Bisons, a mediocre club, which could finish no better than fourth in the regular International League campaign, today was on the threshold of the championship as the result of the title playoff series conducted this year for the first time.

Victor over Baltimore, third place team, in the first playoff, the hard hitting Bisons then battered Rochester's Red Wings into submission three out of five games of the final series and need only one victory to clinch the pennant and climax one of the most unique performances in modern baseball history. A Rochester win would even the score and protend the series another night.

Rochester which finished second in the regular campaign, beat out Newark, first place club, to gain the final playoff berth.

The Bisons became heavy favorites for the title last night as they pounded the Red Wings 18-7. They shelled four hurlers, Kaufmann, Blake, Lindsey, and Mowbray, in a 16-hit attack punctuated by a 10-run third inning. Five in the seventh. Frail Gullivan was nicked for 13 hits by Rochester but managed to scatter them.

Spying on Sports

THIS NEXT WORLD SERIES should be the most interesting we've had since 1920.

For the first time in many years there is not a clear cut outstanding favorite. The long reign of the two supreme clubs of the American league, Yankees and Athletics, is ended. And the National league is also presenting a fresh aspect or faces new to the so-called fall classic.

Added interest for those fans who go for such things is the fact that the Washington Senators and New York Giants are each driving for their first pennant in eight or more years.

The last time the Giants appeared in a world series they faced the Senators—and took the measure of Washington for revenge, against a team representing the city which humbled them in 1924.

\+ x x

THE PROSPECT of a closely-fought six or seven-game world series between the two circuits appears than any baseball post-season series has produced in four or five years.

The last seven-game series was in 1921, but St. Louis was not a real patronize their end of the contest as well. The first time Gotham in New York last year were won so really by the Yanks, that interest faded when the series moved back to Chicago. It was only a four-game affair, anyway.

However, this year there is no Babe Ruth to lift the opposing team hand to break up a ball game. Nor does the Washington team possess the power, attractiveness personified, that characterized the A's in 1929-1930-1931.

x x x

THE INTEREST in a world series cannot always be measured by the attendance. The series belongs to the nation and a game in one particular city a game may be staged to a small, indifferent group of spectators that game game will have many millions throughout the country peeryed with enthusiasm.

An excellent example is the 1931 series. The fans of St. Louis failed to become excited sufficiently over the affair to fill their park though one of their own players, Pepper Martin, was a sensation. Pepper was a national hero before the series was half played, but the Mound City apparently did not awaken to what Martin was doing until the games were almost concluded.

However, Washington, at least, is quite keyed up over its 1933 world series prospects and the New York appears to be awakening. Interest in fans is also quickening, regarding the Giants in their admiration of the Yankees that is become a habit, hard to break.

Senior Interschoolastic Loop Not to Operate This Year

Teams In Loop Consider B.C.I. Too Strong For Other Teams

With only the Belleville Collegiate seniors represented, Senior Interscholastic rugby football was disbanded in the Bay of Quinte sector for the 1933 season thus awarding the 1932 champion B.C.I. section the Bay of Quinte junior scholastic senior football title, and the right to enter the Provincial play-downs when that body met at Toronto Wednesday night. But three junior football teams were represented in the southern group, being the junior C.I., Picton and H.S. and Picton C.I. Following the decision of officers a junior schedule was adopted all games in the loop being played on Friday this year.

All of last years officers were returned to office with Mr. H. P. Bickwood of Trenton being elected president. J. Ogden Kapanen, Vice President and N. Moffat of Tweed filling the unanimous choice as secretary treasurer. Later a meeting of the executive members of the league will be held in Tweed with Madoc Stirling, Marmora and Tweed as eligible members. No fees had been levied completely—out of competition this year.

Mr. Lester Shiels, representing the Belleville C.I., Trenton was quite disappointed regarding the failure of other collegiate schools to enter senior teams but announced, following the meeting, that he would arrange for a series of exhibition games for his Central Ontario senior championship. Failure of other schools to launch teams into the senior series was due to the fact, that the local senior squad of cricketers was required to be much too strong for outside competition from the High Schools and Collegiates of the centres in the Bay of Quinte district.

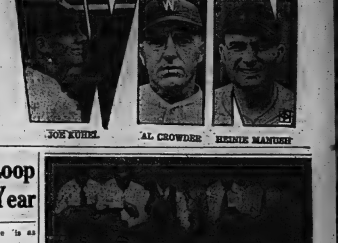
During the meeting a motion to vote the Trenton Juniors championship crests was defeated as the junior play-off between Trenton and Belleville had not been completed in 1932. Other matters relating to officials for the junior games and the awarding of executive purposes were also discussed.

The Bay of Quinte Junior Interscholastic Rugby Schedule is as follows:

October 6th—
Belleville at Trenton.
October 13th—
Trenton at Picton.
October 20th—
Picton at Belleville.
October 27th—
Trenton at Belleville.
November 3rd—
Picton at Trenton.
November 10th—
Belleville at Picton.

CURRENT SPORT

Following a lengthy telephone conversation with Wm. Snyder of Toronto, Secretary of Jake Isaac Yanover, manager of the fast travelling Picton Intermediates, was informed that the winner of the Hagersville-Sarnia series would meet Southampton. While Falconbridge would be given a bye into the Intermediate O.R.F.U. finals. It is morally follows, that Picton would meet the overhanging winner of the Southampton series.



It is with regret that we heard of the inability to form a senior football team in the Bay of Quinte district, but the fact that Quinte Interscholastic Rugby League, this fall as the local senior gridders, is a success is undoubted. Another last fall, seem headed towards added laurels again this fall. It cannot be denied, that they are a little above the class of the best local rivals in the Quinte district but, exhibition games never enjoy the excitement that actual league games seem to bring.

Coach Shiels seems to think that his B.C.I. team will be a credit to the gridders will surpass his champions of 1932. (That remains to be seen).

"The local bankers are grouped with Trenton and Belleville with October 6th being opening day in the Quinte district. The latter have been the largest squad in years out practicing. Coach Shiels of the seniors are training daily also. Coach Shiels is endeavoring to arrange exhibition games with Queen's Junior, Peterboro, Kingston and Watertown. Should Shiels be able to arrange such games they will be a credit to the senior squad have reported for duty and have been strengthened to some degree by a few additions from other schools and from last year's squad.

Many innovations will be introduced at the coming race meet sponsored by the Harness Horse Association of Canada, Scoring for the word always a buzzbee to the patrons will be immediately discarded, the result of the double heat system, a Proctor, who invented the barrier, will work up some yards from the stand and will have the horses in good alignment, when they proceed to the wire. The horses will be paraded each heat and they will bear numbers which will correspond with entries. The various heats will be run on a handicap basis and there will be no long waits between heats.

Mr. Harry Wicks in charge of the arrangements stated, that all the prominent horses now racing in Ontario will be on hand. Definite announcement from the respective contingent has been received by Mr. Wicks to that effect. Belleville will be glad to get a chance to race for good "real" money before the season closes.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES
By ALEX J. MORRISON

ALEX MORRISON says:
Courtesy should be the first rule of the game. And is a rule generally observed around the tee.

However, when players get onto the putting green they overlook many of the little courtesies that should be shown to their fellow players.

For example—one player, in his haste to get his ball into the cup will walk all over the other fellow's line of play.

If the green happens to be soft, or the grass subject to the impression of his shoes, the other fellow has to pay over a rough surface that was not part of the original putting surface.

The first player's overnight flower of hair handicap on the second player. Common courtesy would do away with this.

Weddings

SHARP—NEAL

RAWDON—(Special) — A very pretty wedding ceremony was solemnized at 11 a.m. on Wednesday, September 20th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Neal, Bonarlaw, when their youngest daughter, Hazel Hannah, became the bride of Mr. Orno Sharp, elder son of Mr. Charles Sharp of the late Mrs. Sharp of Mount Pleasant.

The bride made a charming picture in a gown of navy blue satin fashioned on long lines with hat to match and carrying a bouquet of pale shaded gladioli.

The bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March played by her sister, Miss Evelyn Neal, and took her place beneath a lovely arch of evergreen with gorgeous white asters interwoven through it. From the centre was suspended a large white bell.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. W. Foley B. A., B.D., of Springbrook, assisted by the groom's pastor, Rev. Fred Joblin of Rawdon circuit, who offered prayer and Rev. Canon G. Swayne, pastor of St. Mark's Anglican church, offered the closing Benediction.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Evelyn Neal, attired in a pretty blue crepe frock with grey trimmings, grey hat and accessories and she also carried pale shaded gladioli. Mr. Mile Vanrobaeghem of Havelock, ably carried out the duties of the groomsman.

After the ceremony and congratulations a dainty buffet lunch was served in the dining room, about twenty-five guests by the Misses Matilda McCrodan, Rona Mirsky and Evelyn Neal. The serving table was adorned with gladioli and white asters and these flowers were also arranged in the various other rooms throughout the home.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a lovely pendant; to the groomsman a cigarette lighter and the flower girl a sugar and cream service.

The bride travelled in a suit of grey crepe cloth with matching accessories in grey. The young couple left by motor for Cobourg, Hamilton, Rochester and other points and on their return they will reside at Mount Pleasant.

CARTER—O'HARA

The marriage was solemnized at 272 George Street, Belleville, by Rev. J. S. McMillan of Dundas street United Church, at ten a.m. September 22nd, of Mr. Franklin G. Carter of Church street, and Miss Beatrice Iona O'Hara of 12 Patterson street.

Keeping the Skin Soft, Beautiful

Daily Care Should Be The Standard of Beauty Questers

(By Helen Follett)

Don't take your complexion for granted beauty quester. A cutaneous appearance of perfect disposition and physical fitness can suddenly go sullen or get rebellious because of neglect. The resulting delay can happen to it are sad to tell. Preservation should be the policy of every woman.

Devastating demons are on the job; sunlight, wind, atmospheric filth get in mean licks. Protective agents are soap scum, oily cosmetics and cold applications; soap to keep it clean, oil to retain the epidermis cold water or ice to stimulate blood circulation.

Exercise, fresh air, regular sleeping hours and a balanced diet contribute towards the making of a complexion of fine texture and enchanting color effects.

The Irish type— dark hair, ivory skin, blue eyes— can wear almost every color of the rainbow.

She is about the only blue-eyed girl who can get away with pink or red, which offer a charming contrast to her dark locks. Blues of all shades are flattering to her, even green won't put her out of color form as it does the average brunette.

Between black and white there is small choice. She looks well in both.

Eyebrows should be oiled and brushed, if they are to look well groomed. Pass a few drops of brilliantine over the bristles of the brush, sweep the little fuzzers upward, skip along the top line to smooth down the edge.

When shaping the brows, notice the shape of the eyes. Don't, if you would be pleasing in appearance, extend the line too far over the temple when real lanterns are roundish. Bring the far corner down, and the inner one too, forming a graceful arch.

Plark eyebrows on a slant, the way the hairs grow out from the skin. You won't shed so many tears and the shafts won't break.

Unique Excursion To Churchill Port

Montreal, Sept. 23 — Latest and most unique of the travel bargains offered by the Canadian National Railways this year was a trip to Churchill, terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway and Manitoba's deep sea port.

With fares on the cent-a-mile basis, it made possible for the first time in the long career of the pioneering line a visit by the general public. The usual features on this occasion were "as lured" by an exclusive rates which embraced not only tourist sleeping car accommodation but meals on a regular dining car which accompanied the train and in the excursionists during their stay at the port.

PLEADING FROGS ARE DRAWBACK

In parts of the British West Indies one buys live frogs from native boys and fattens the frogs for food. These frogs attain a large size, as big as a small hen, and are delicious. They go by the name "crapaud," which shows the influence of French in the islands. One drawback is that the frogs become tame and are almost human in their gestures and expression, so that one hesitates to kill them.

Correct Manners

FOR AN INFORMAL WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would appreciate very much all information that you have concerning an informal house wedding, followed by a reception (informal too).

Julia.

1. For the simple home wedding the decorations will, consistently, be simple—flowers in vases and bowls at convenient and effective places. Sometimes only blooming plants are used; sometimes the main decorations are greenery of various kinds.

The most effective place for the ceremony is usually before a mantel or a fireplace, or in a bow window, or between two windows in the living-room. This space can be covered with greens, branches of white pine and hemlock, ropes of mountain pine; in summer, with wild flowers; or, at any season, with large forms of greenery or some kind. Garlands of smilax or foliage or flowers are sometimes used most effectively as background— two floor candlesticks, for instance or two tall stands for graceful, trailing ivy. Very dainty, simple weddings, including white flowers are beautiful.

The rest of the room should be left as much as possible as it ordinarily is. Heavy pieces of furniture are, of course, moved to the sides of the room, and it is well to leave several chairs in position so that any older guests may sit, if they wish.

The problem of music for the home wedding is not easy, but appropriateness, should be the plan. The wedding march from Lohengrin, for a small string orchestra of a few pieces, or by a violin or a harp or a piano alone, or it may be sung.

Usually the bride, at a house wedding, has only one attendant—her maid of honor or matron of honor. Sometimes she has a flower girl only, or a flower girl and maid of honor. Usually there are no ushers. The groom has a best man.

As the guests arrive the bride's mother, the hostess, stands near the door of the room in which the ceremony is to take place and receives the guests. The bride and her attendants and the groom and his attendants go upstairs before they enter for the ceremony.

When the wedding party is ready the bride's mother is notified and takes her place in the part of the room reserved for the family of the bride, at the left of the ceremony space in front of the altar. If there are stairs, they lead the processional, two by two, to the room below. There is no aisle to be, say, two bridesmaids, they come first, together. Then comes the maid of honor, alone, followed by a flower girl, if there is one. Last come the bride and her father.

The maid of honor stands at the bride's left, to help her with her train and flowers, and the best man stands at the right of the groom, to produce the ring at the proper time.

After the ceremony, the groom kisses the bride, the clergyman offers his "best wishes" to the bride and his "congratulations" to the groom, and the couple turn in their places to receive the greetings first of their mothers and fathers, then of their other relatives, and then of their friends. In a house wedding there is no receiving.

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

Inland Sea Which Sank In E. Canada

Montreal, Sept. 23.—The gypsum deposits of New Brunswick, among the purest in the world, are believed to have resulted from the sinking of an inland sea which once existed in and surrounding the Bay of Fundy, states the Natural Resources Department of the Canadian National Railways. This sea probably had a very narro woutlet to what is now the Atlantic Ocean. The subsidence was slow and led in certain parts to the evaporation of sea water which in turn caused the formation of deposits of gypsum and salt over a large area. The climate then seems to have changed and mud and detritus were carried into the region by rivers. Fish died and became buried in the mud that now forms the shale which characterizes the gypsum areas, where perfectly formed fossilized fish are commonly found today.

Advice to the Lovelorn

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HE DRINKS AND SHE'S UNCERTAIN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 18 and going with a boy about 22. He likes me, and I like him very much. He comes to see me about three times a week. I think he drinks almost all the time when I am not around. He knows I don't like his drinking, too. What would you do or say about it? If you were in my place and he asked you to marry him, before you were 19, would you accept him?

Mabel.

No, indeed; not at 19, my dear, nor at 20, either, if you have positive proof that the boy has conquered his weakness absolutely. No woman has any sense of security with a man who drinks. Men have been known to reform drinking habits, sometimes, and the boy should prove that he has the grit to give up liquor before he assumes the responsibilities of marriage. Which is a bit steep at 22, unless a young man has shown that he is dependable.

LOVE VERSUS RELIGION

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a girl for more than a year, and am devotedly in love with her. She belongs to one church and I belong to another church. We are not for faith; or rather, my mother does, and she constitutes the family. Curiously enough, our families are very well acquainted and seem to be on good terms, but I feel I can no longer invited to her house, nor is she made welcome in mine. We are much older now very much and would like to know what you think of it.

Y. H. S.

If you have followed this column, you must know that religious intolerance is about the last thing to which I would subscribe. And while one's own belief must be governed by one's conscience, I can never see a reason for punitive measures against people who do not agree with us in our spiritual belief. There's such a thing as "live and let live" policy in regard to religion, as in other matters, and I have known many fine, sterling people who belonged to different churches. Here's hoping that both families exercise a little more tolerance toward you two young people.

"IS THE STAMP LANGUAGE COMMON OR VULGAR?"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend bawled me out because I put the stamp on my letter to him to mean different things. He said the stamp language was common and vulgar, and not to write to him again. I'm that way. The many feelings real badly. Do you consider the stamp language vulgar? Minnie.

No, I should not apply terms as strong as "common" and "vulgar" to putting a stamp on upside down and in other ways making it hard for mail clerks. Just "very young" would be my version of this innocent pastime.

TOLD HER HE WAS DONE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a pretty girl for at least a year. I used to drive her home every evening, and treated her swell. Lately, she has disappointed me exceedingly. Perhaps the reason is that I am so longer able to offer her the use of the car, and this has made her treat me coldly.

Her behavior made me suspicious, so I began to spy on her. I waited on the opposite corner from her place of employment, and was amazed to see her talking and laughing with several fellows. I walked over to her courageously and asked her the reason why she had not kept an engagement the previous evening. As her excuse was poor, I told her that I was through with her.

Despite that fact, I love her just the same. I met her two months later and tried to make up, but she declined to renew her friendship.

Jimmy.

Oh, you young people who declare you're "through" when you're not, but just say a thing like that to hit back because your feelings are hurt or because you're jealous or what not!

And why shouldn't the girl talk and laugh with young men after you've broken with her, indeed, she all worked in the same place and were chatting innocently enough. As for your spying, poor man, that's pretty bad.

Your telling me you think she dropped you because you were no longer able to drive her about in a car—if that's actually the case—looks as if she were "gold-digger-ish," and in that case she's no great loss to you.

You might write her a letter and see if you'll be restored to favor. But, in any case, from your line of reasoning, you may be unduly suspicious.

PEAS AND OATMEAL SOUP ON C. N. R.

Steamer, train and hotel chefs of the Canadian National agree that this makes good soup: 2 lbs. of mutton, 2 quarts of water, 2 onions, 2 carrots, 2 turnips, 2 apples, parsley thyme and bay leaf, 1 tablespoonful of curry powder, 2 tablespoonfuls of flour, juice of 1 lemon. Chop the apples and vegetables in melted suet and cook gently for 15 minutes. Sprinkle in the flour and curry powder, then add the meat, cut in small pieces, some salt, the herbs and water. Skim this after it begins to boil, then cook slowly for 2 or 4 hours. Strain and force the meat through a sieve, then return to the soup. Serve with hot boiled rice. Add the lemon juice before serving.

The call for dinner hats is being heard in almost every shop. Those for evening wear in a cap of rust brown chiffon velvet with an open crush. The gold embroidery that forms a border on the flat marks the points of the peak, and there is a brown veil embroidered with gold thread.

* * * *

Why not a tunic costume as a change from dress or ordinary blouse and skirt fashions? A nice idea is the long, fitted tunic of white bengaline with a skirt of bengaline in black.

* * * *

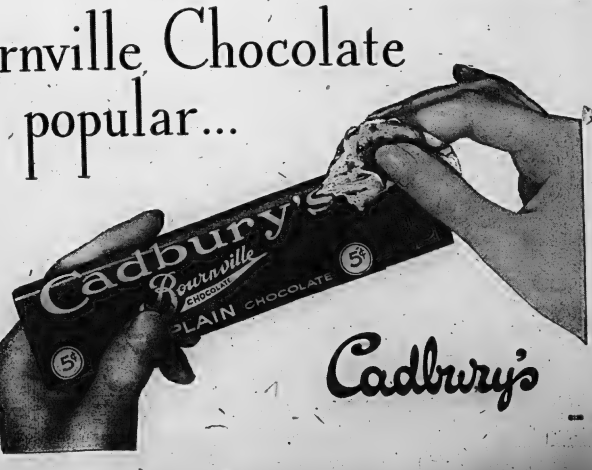
Each age has its own fashions. An ideal dinner frock for the maturely type of woman, now on display in a smart shop, is a gracious gown of black velvet brocaded chiffon in a small all-over design. It has long graceful sleeves slashed to reveal the arm and the neck is rounded with a slight cowl drape. Three white velvet flowers are at front.

* * * *

Right off the shoulder goes the neckline of many of the new evening frocks. A new model in deep, dark gray transparent velvet has an off-the-shoulder neckline marked by feather trimming and tiny pink roses, with very narrow gray velvet shoulder straps. The dress has moulded seaming and a slight train.

* * * *

You will like the new printed velvet frocks now on display—usually printed designs, small and neat, with subdued hues. One smart afternoon frock, done in lipstick red velvet with a tiny printed design in black and white, has a rolled collar edged with black and a black bow. The skirtwaist design is suggested in its details and line.



* * * *

Out of the past come big velvet hats so charming that you simply must have at least one this winter. One delightful model of black velvet with pleats in the crown has a broad brim edged with fronds of black and pale yellow ostrich, also tiny tufts of the feathers against the crown in back.

Security Prices Retrieve Some of Surrendered Territory—Prices Hold Fairly Steady At Toronto —After Early Selling From Weakened Margin Accounts, Gold Shares Move To Higher Ground.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

(By Victor Eubank, Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Financial markets, while still moving flatly in the face of choppy United States inflationary breezes, appeared fairly felt better today and security prices retrieved some of their recently surrendered territory.

Aside from shares of Dome and McIntyre gold producers, Canadian stocks did little. Canadian Pacific was unchanged and International Nickel was 1-8 of a point higher. Dominion Government bonds were under some pressure.

There was a mild run on Seaboard Oil stock, which got up about 4 points. Houston Oil advanced 1 but dropped 2. New Jersey was off a point.

Recoveries of 1 to 3 or more were recorded by U.S. Steel, Case, American Telephone, Chrysler, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Mathieson Alkali, U. S. TORONTO MINES

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—(CP)—In fitful breezes of selling and buying the Standard Mining Market passed through an unhappy period today following yesterday's slump and at the close prices showed a fair portion of Thursday's losses recovered. Gains up to $1.50 were recorded by gold issues.

Dome recorded a net advance of $1.50 to sell at $36.50, Hollinger appeared 75 cents, McIntyre 63 90 cents, Wright Hargreaves steady at $7.80, Noranda advanced 75 cents but sold Nickel had about 15 cents over yesterday's close.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—The Toronto Stock Market closed today with a smart rally under way and with a good sprinkling of gains to take up in addition to recoveries of the losses suffered in the morning selling. Distillery and metal stocks were especially buoyant and shares closing two points up and Nickel up about 50 cents.

Advances of 1-4 to a half were registered for the oil shares in the more important groups, general closed to 13 3-4, International Pete to 18, unchanged and British American to 13 3-8, up 1-4, Standard was down a little at the close. In the Paper Market common gained 1 to 1 from 42 1-2 to 45 1-2 for a net gain of 1-2. Distillers Seagram had a point to the good.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Sept. 22.—(CP)—Stock had a series of rallies and declines today but had moderately higher prices prevailed in the late dealings. Specialists registered wide gains, among them National Distillers, U. S. Smelting, Seaboard Oil and Texas Gulf, up 3 to 5 points or so. Other shares advancing a point or more included U.S. Steel, American Telephone, Du Pont, Santa Fe, New York Central and Allied Chemical. Transfers approximated 3,200,000 shares.

SOFTBALL TEAM STOP IN CITY

"Silverwoods" of Windsor, intermediate women's softball champions of Western Ontario, stopped at the Crystal Hotel in this city last night and continued their journey eastward to Ottawa, where they meet the Ottawa "Maninagans" in the first game of the L.O.A.S.A., intermediate series with the return game being played in Windsor late next week. The party were travelling by motor and were composed of eighteen players, officials and fans. The "Silverwoods" played the game in Ottawa on Saturday returning by Belleville, where they will stop over night again this morning, and with the E.O.L.S.L. which the Belleville Fruit Girls' team competed.

HISTORIC MEETING AT FORT GARRY GATE

ARMED HOST GUARDS EINSTEIN

For the first time in the history of the Hudson's Bay Company, the governor, deputy-governor and the chairman of the Canadian committee met in Winnipeg. Left to right—Mr. George W. Allan, K.C., chairman of the Canadian committee; Mr. P. Ashley Cooper, governor of the company; and Sir Alexander Murray, deputy-governor.

In virtual exile from his native Germany, Professor Albert Einstein, world-famous scientist, is pictured as he rested at the summer cottage of Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, British statesman, who sponsored the professor's visit to England, following reports of death threats against Einstein. Commander Locker-Lampson (left), does his relaxing with a shotgun across his knees.

EMPLOYERS WITHIN CODE

Ford Motor Company To Agree To 35-Hour Week

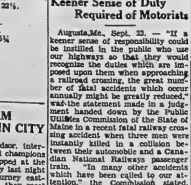
Detroit, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The Ford Motor Co., now operating on a 40-hour week basis, shortly will place its employees on a week-week within the 35-hour week provisions of the NRA industrial code, which Henry Ford has not signed.

Details of the plan for reducing hours for the 50,000 Ford employees—possibly as low as four days a week—are now being worked out by the Company.

The plan is intended to conform with the code by working his men an average of 35 hours a week, it was said one Ford official today. "He does not intend to violate the NRA code."

ARREST LIKELY TO FOLLOW INQUEST

Police Unwilling To Divulge Name of Man Wanted



Carp, Ont., Sept. 22.—(CP)—Following the inquest here next Wednesday into the death of John A. Rivington, Ottawa inventor and school teacher, police expect to arrest a resident of Carp and lay charges arising from a fight the man is supposed to have had with Rivington, it was learned definitely today.

Police declined to divulge the man's name, but said he was charged charge of causing grievous bodily harm would be laid, irrespective of the result of the inquest.

Keener Sense of Duty Required of Motorists

Augusta, Me., Sept. 23. — "If a keener sense of responsibility could be instilled in the public who use our highways so that they would recognize that rules which are imposed upon them when approaching a railroad crossing, the great number of fatal accidents which occur annually might be greatly reduced," was the statement made in a bulletin of the Public Utilities Commission of the State of Maine in a recent fatal railway crossing accident when three men were instantly killed in a collision between their automobile and a Canadian National Railways passenger train. "In many other accidents which have been studied by our attention," the Commission stated, "the driver's failure to stop has been the first game of the L.O.A.S.A., intermediate series with the return game being played in Windsor late next week. The party were travelling by motor and were composed of eighteen players, officials and fans. The "Silverwoods" played the game in Ottawa on Saturday returning by Belleville, where they will stop over night again this morning, and with the E.O.L.S.L. which the Belleville Fruit Girls' team competed.

WILLARD L'HEUREUX WINS SCHOLARSHIP

New Attending Belleville Collegiate Institute

Scholarship winners in the competition conducted annually by the male council of Knights of Columbus were announced by State Secretary George L. Doyle, of Guelph. The scholarships are awarded for the best showing made by Catholic students throughout the province in the middle school departmental examinations and carry a cash value of $100 per year for a period of four years in the university course by the winners. The scholarships have been given annually since 1924 during which time a total of $17,000 has been contributed by Ontario Knights towards higher education for Catholic students.

One of the fortunate winners of the above scholarships was Willard L'Heureux, 15 year old son of Mr. W. J. L'Heureux, accountant of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal and former star defence man of the Port Arthur Dominion Day championship senior hockey team. Willard is at present a scholar in the 10th Form of the Belleville Collegiate. The award was made this week to a student of the Port Arthur Collegiate.

Congratulations are offered Willard on receiving this award for his brilliant work, and it is trusted his remarkable course will be marked by others of similar nature.

Peace Preservation is Problem Paramount in Coming Geneva Parley

Germany Not Likely To Meet Demands of France

FOREWARNED

Plan Laid Out For Geneva Parley That May Appeal

(Copyright, 1933, by the Associated Press)

One more the nations are sending diplomats to, Geneva -where they will try to balance demands for armaments with pleas to reduce the burden of arms.

With the resumption next month of the World Disarmament Conference they will again consider Germany's cries for equality, France's insistence on security, other nations' requests for reductions.

There will be many difficulties. It is agreed, in the main of a compromise—difficulties greater than any before at similar conferences. Frontier and political incidents have left Europe so tense that its peace may be at stake on the issue of reduction.

Preliminary discussions have been going on in Paris by governmental leaders and representatives about a new French arms plan. Behind its sponsors hope, may solve the delicat problem. This and other related matters are discussed in the following dispatches received today from Associated Press correspondents in London, Paris, Rome and Berlin.

London: The British government, considerably closer to the American viewpoint on disarmament as a result of the conference here of United States Ambassador Norman H. Davis, now appears ready to go far toward meeting the French demand for a trial period of arms supervision.

While it is pointed out in authoritative quarters that Great Britain has made no commitments for the supervision period, it has never opposed the French plan.

Recent conversations in Paris, furthermore, have had the purpose of ascertaining the specific desires of the French government.

To Talk Over Situation

Sir John Simon, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Captain Anthony Eden, Under-secretary for Foreign Affairs, planned to fly to the French capital today to renew conversations preliminary to further talks in Geneva later with Mr. Davis and the German and Italian representatives.

Earnestly insisting that reaching an agreement to disarm at the earliest date is necessary, Great Britain is optimistic with the American view as expressed by Mr. Davis that any disarmament plan is not possible without a demonstration of practicability as the first step.

British authorities, too, support the view that an agreement to disarm must be kindlingly assured to become effective at the end of the supervision period.

Paris: The French plan to effect a united front power front to avert an armament race approached a critical stage today with a meeting of French and British ministers.

Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council and Lord Privy Seal, entered the preliminary arms negotiations for the first time and he, with Sir John Simon and Captain Anthony Eden, met Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour in vital negotiations to get British support for a scheme to transform Europe's armies.

Backing Fairly Certain

French officials consider that American and Italian backing is fairly certain and are optimistic they can remove differences in the French-British viewpoints and reach an accord.

France's proposals incorporate new French suggestions into the project Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald set forth for the Disarmament Conference on March 16, 1933.

They call for:

(1) Doubling Germany's army from the present 100,000 to 200,000 and increasing small arms proportionately.

(2) Transforming European armies into militias with but few months' service and abolishing professional armies and semi-military groups.

(3) A strict control scheme with sanctions against violators of the treaty.

(4) Limiting army to present levels for four or five years, called a "test period for control," during which no armaments would be built.

(5) Actual scrapping of heavy guns and tanks at the end of the test period, provided the control plan proves workable.

(6) These army limits: France, 200,000 men with a colonial army of 300,000 more; Italy, 200,000 men with 80,000 more in the colonies.

The negotiations between the French and British are understood to concern the length of the control period, the sanctions and manner of enforcement, and a desire by the British to have France state specifically her demands and manner of application.

Nazi Leaders At Odds

Capt. Hermann Goering
Adolf Hitler

Rumors of a rift between Chancellor Adolf Hitler, of Germany, and Capt. Hermann Goering, Prussian premier and second most powerful man in the Reich have been spreading throughout Germany. The first outward sign of any differences between the two came when Hitler failed to attend a ceremony at which Goering swore into office his new Prussian state council.

Berlin: A continental peace on a reciprocated basis of mutual concessions and equal rights, it is authoritatively stated, will be Germany's proposals to what is regarded here as the "fish or cut bait" session of the Disarmament Conference.

Germany May Leave

That Germany will not hesitate to leave the conference table is what Germans call "the spirit or the Versailles treaty" hovers over the discussions has been frequently repeated publicly.

Since 1918 no German disarmament delegation has had such a united and stalwart internal support as that behind Foreign Minister von Neurath and Minister of Propaganda Goebbels, who will outline the Reich's viewpoints at Geneva.

Rome: While Italian officials study results of disarmament conversations in Paris, the idea seems to be growing among Italian that France must make concessions in order to prevent Germany from rearming.

It has been pointed out that the French attitude regarding a four or five year control test period, during which no disarmament would be achieved, is contradictory to the French adherence to the no-force agreement reached last December in Geneva and to the preamble to the four-power peace pact granting Germany equality in armament rights.

Italians seem certain that Germany will not agree to the five year test period in which her armaments are to remain at present—France insists on it, the review says, the German people will be to rearm, and Italians ask who can prevent her.

Premier Mussolini's thought therefore, is that if France does not wish to disarm, she should grant Germany definite armament concessions in order to obtain the German signature on the prospective Geneva Convention and prevent her from re-arming.

ELECTION IS NOT WANTED SAYS HENRY

People Wish To Take Advantage of Evident Improvement

ROAD PROGRAM

Consider Absorbing On Direct Relief Those Now Unemployed

(By Frank Flaherty, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Kenora, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP)—Definite indication an early election in Ontario is not to be expected has been given by Premier George S. Henry. Continuing his tour of Northern Ontario, Mr. Henry addressed a large crowd here last night and declared the people did not want an election now but wished an opportunity to take advantage of the trend of improvement evident in economic conditions.

During the last few months, Mr. Henry said, the government had given careful consideration to the question of an election, which, some suggested, should be held now. He had consulted his colleagues, and many people throughout the province. Apart from Mitchell F. Hepburn, Liberal leader, and his ally, Harry Nixon, leader of the Progressive group, he had found no one who favored an early political battle.

As a result the government had come to the conclusion it was best to do nothing to interfere with the slow but certain economic recovery towards better times and would encourage wherever possible those curtailing services vital to the welfare of the people. An enlarged program of road building and public works to absorb some of those now on direct relief into gainful employment was under consideration.

CUBA SITS ON TINDER BOX

First Clash of Gov't And Rebels Reported With Two Killed

(By Edmund A. Chester)

Havana, Sept. 22 (AP)—With outward calm today this capital sat on a tinder box of rebellion and hunger.

The government of President Ramon Grau San Martin was still at odds with its political foes, but expected to reply to the opposition's demands for his resignation.

Rioting still was trouble with rebel forces of Jnan Blas Hernandes, veteran campaigner against former President Machado, in Camaguey Province.

As available stores of foodstuffs dwindled residents of Havana checked their supplies as warehousemen reported no deliveries and factories were made that the capital would feel the hunger if the strike continues another week.

There were rumblings below the surface. At a manifestation of five thousand persons around the presidential palace there were cheers for Grau San Martin and fights, in which one was critically stabbed when he disagreed with another in the crowd.

The first actual conflict between the government's soldier-student army and the rebels occurred at Las Cuevas in Camaguey and, reports said, two of Blas Hernandez's followers were killed. Several members of the government's forces were said to have been wounded.

Chief of Police Pedro Morcieqo Rois of Esmeralda and his brother were arrested for alleged revolutionary activities and brought to Camaguey for investigation.

JUDGMENT ON NORTH ROUTE NOT RELEASED

Lindberghs Arrive in Leningrad From Helsingfors

Leningrad, U.S.S.R., Sept. 22 (AP) —Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here at 1.58 p.m. today after a flight from Helsingfors, Finland.

The purpose of the trip, the Colonel said, was to investigate the possibility of establishing regular air routes between North America and Europe. The Lindberghs hitherto have surveyed possible routes over Western Canada, the North Atlantic and Scandinavian countries.

Colonel Lindbergh, in an interview, said he would like to return to the United States before giving final judgment on the project. He said there were difficulties, but believes such air connections can be arranged.

RANKIN TAKEN WHILE EATING HIS DINNER

Thrilling Chase, Use of Firearms Precedes Capture

MADE GETAWAY

Wanted In This District For Several Charges of Theft

Walkerton, Sept. 22.—Heartbreaking vigils, an automobile chase, and the alleged attempted running down of officers of the law all preceded the arrest at a farmhouse dinner table of Elmer F. Rankin, long wanted by many Eastern and Western police chiefs for alleged housebreaking, thefts of automobiles, gasoline, and bank and safe jobs by the truckload.

The ultimate downfall of Rankin who is now locked up in Walkerton jail awaiting trial, was the investigative work of Provincial Constable Otto McClevis of Walkerton. Among the list of charges against him which Rankin is to answer is the theft of a car from W. Jenkins of London, Ont., on September 9 last. Constable McClevis last week received information that a car answering the description being parked in a bush fourteen miles west of Paisley.

When the constable arrived at the reported location of the automobile it had disappeared, and for three days the Provincial officer with the chief constables of Walkerton and Paisley, searched every road and every bush in and around Bruce and Saugeen Townships. It was not until Saturday last that the car was found well hidden in a ditch bottom, both arrangements so that it could make a fast getaway.

The police posted themselves for a long wait for the car's custodian and, ultimately, they say, Rankin slipped into the machine, started the engine, and, despite the shout of the officers for him to stop, came shooting down the path directly upon them. The officers had to leap into the ditch for safety. Here it was that McClevis fired from his rifle in an attempt to flatten the rear tires of the car but without success.

A thrilling automobile chase followed, in which Rankin was headed, the ordinary looked like an ace and made a gun for safety through the woods. The police emptied both guns at the rear of the alleged bandit's machine but no one was injured. McClevis and the police chiefs chased Rankin for more than a mile, but finally lost him in the gloom.

All that night the officers maintained their vigil of the roads and the byways, but it was not until next day that they heard of a tramp being seen near the Peace farm. When they arrived they found the tramp seated eating a meal provided by the hospitable farm wife. At first denying his identity, he finally, police say, admitted himself to be Rankin and calmly submitted to arrest.

According to Provincial police some of the offenses in connection with which Rankin has admitted implication are the theft of 1,000 pounds of butter from Paisley creamery in March this year; theft of gasoline from a Paisley garage; theft of one car from Brighton; another from Trenton; thefts of a truckload of eggs from a Paisley store in August; robbery of the railway station in Paisley; theft of a car in Elginfield Township, and theft of the Jenkins car at London, Ont.

Rankin is wanted in this district by Provincial police for the alleged theft of butter from Campbellford and Hastings, creameries, also the alleged thefts of automobiles and numerous break-ins. It is likely he will be taken to this district after disposition has been made of charges at Walkerton.

ASHAMED OF HER FIGURE

Husband Persuaded Her to Take Kruschen

"By following her husband's advice, this woman has obtained certain improvement in her appearance—she actually took off 32 lbs. of her excess fat," writes her experience, she writes:—

"A year ago I was troubled with rheumatism, nervousness and other complaints due to my excess fat. I was ashamed of my figure, I was persuaded by my husband to take Kruschen Salts. Before I began, I weighed 161 lbs. After taking Kruschen for a short time the rheumatism was less painful, my nerves got stronger, and I felt much lighter. Then I knew that Kruschen was doing me good. I persevered with it and got my weight down to 129 lbs., a reduction of 32 lbs. in unwanted fat. I am not boasting when I say that I feel younger and more active than a month before my figure, and am healthier than I have been for years."—Mrs. J.B.

Kruschen is a blend of six mineral salts which assist the internal organs to throw off each day those waste products that would otherwise accumulate in the form of fatty tissue.

OPEN REVOLT IN CUBA NOW MUCH CLOSER

Foreign Born On Island Threatened By Labor Situation

FACES OPPOSITION

Many Storm Clouds Added To Already Long List

(By John P. McKnight)

Havana, Sept. 22 (AP)—Flames of open revolt crept closer today to the revolution-born regime set up 11 days ago.

Canadians, Britons, French and Americans owning property in Cuba —mainly sugar mills and railroads —were confronted by threatening labor situations. At some places workers seized their employers' plants.

At Tacajo, on the north coast of Oriente Province, Canadian and American, were seized by the workers who took over control of the sugar mill they were managing. When soldiers arrived on the spot the workers declared they would leave the Canadian's body over the fence unless the soldiers withdrew.

Cavalry reinforcements, a mobile armoral on a truck, extra guards, and machine guns with crews hurriedly deployed about the presidential palace here yesterday persisted that civilian anti-government forces and soldiers prepared to fight.

An army truck brought rifles and ammunition to headquarters of A. B.C. Radical Society members, who thereupon went to police headquarters as reinforcements supporting President Ramon Grau San Martin.

In the face of these and other preparations the executive declared that "everything is all right; I am staying right where I am."

Climax Fast Approaching

Reliable sources predicted that a climax was fast approaching in the many troubles the President and his supporters, students and non-political groups have had.

Since he took the helm September 10, Grau San Martin has found an ever-stiffening line of opposition among five of the island republic's 21 political revolutionary factions.

Revolt broke out in Camaguey Province, where old Gen. Elias Hernandez, who pricked former President Machado's side for two years, led his well-armed veterans into the field, he was reported surrounded by government troops, but refused to treat for peace.

Other storm clouds lowered today.

Defiant refusals from nearly all Cuban industries to let Secretary of the Treasury Manuel Despaigne levy taxes.

Threats of disease and famine over a large area, near desolation became of a hurricane, Sept. 5.

A gloomy outlook for sugar, Cuba's principal product.

Strikes, labor unrest, violence, disorder and bloodshed.

Increasing lawlessness which police and soldiers were powerless to halt.

Food shortage in Havana and the provinces due to drought, the closing of warehouses, destruction of crops, and other causes.

Mob Kills Two

A mob shortly before midnight tried to loot the home of Jose Antonio Obregon, Machado's son-in-law. Guards fired into the crowd, killing two and wounding several. Fifty-one were arrested.

The President went on with routine business at the palace, hearing business men's pleas for a tax amnesty, while outside troops were ready for instant action.

World Looks On as Nazis Try Men Accused of Setting Reichstag Ablaze; International Group Sits in Review

Dr. Ernst Oberfohren, recent suicide.

Marinus Van der Lubbe, one of the accused.

Typ, map shows Leipzig, where the trial will be held, and London, where an International Committee is reviewing the case. Below, the burning Reichstag building.

Herman Goering, chief witness.

By Central Press

London, Sept. 22.—Roused as never before by a political and social "cause celebre", world opinion focuses on Leipzig and on London, as the fire men charged with setting fire to the Reichstag building in Berlin, face their Nazi accusers in a German court of justice, which began Sept. 21. An international committee of lawyers at the same time reviews the case in London.

So high is the intensity of feeling throughout Europe over the trial that the Sacco-Vanzetti case, the Dreyfus affair, the Matteotti imbroglio in Italy, and the scores of trials which accompanied the Communist domination of Russia pale almost to insignificance next to this long-awaited showdown in the Reich.

The reason for the tremendous feeling engendered by the trial dates back to the events which immediately followed the crime on Feb. 27. On that night, flames spread in several parts of the parliamentary building in Berlin.

Amazing Swiftness

With amazing swiftness, the Nazi organization arrested some 1,500 suspects — all associated with the large Communist party of Berlin — and as swiftly set into motion propaganda machinery which aided Germany into a fervor of resentment against all radicals and rival political parties. This was on the eve of a crucial election and it was largely this that Adolph Hitler and his Nazi organization were completely victorious, ascending to absolute control of Germany.

It was plain to all the world that whoever set fire to the Reichstag wittingly or unwittingly contributed inestimable favor to the Nazi cause. The Reichstag crime was made the political weapon of the Nazis and served to stamp out the left wing influence which had threatened the ascendency of the Swastika.

Thus it was that observers throughout the world peered more closely into the facts of the crime itself and the question was raised whether it was not the Nazis themselves who had engineered the act of incendiarism. Thereon hangs the reason for the immense interest in the case now that the five accused are being brought to trial. The world wants to see how closely the prosecution has investigated the affair.

Mysterious Death

Impetus has been added by the mysterious death of Dr. Ernst Oberfohren, a Nazi deputy and a member of the coalition government at the time of the Reichstag fire. Shortly after the arrest of the Communists a startling memorandum appeared in the London Liberal Manchester (England) Guardian. The memorandum was credited to Oberfohren. His Nazi leader—if he really did "fire the accord"—declared that the fire was started by Nazi storm troopers who made their way to the building by way of a secret passage which links the residence of Reichsfuehrer President Herman Goering, high Nazi official, with the parliamentary edifice. He said the outrage was unpardonable and demanded exposure.

Some little time later, Dr. Oberfohren was found dead. It was announced that he had committed suicide.

The strange circumstances surrounding the sudden death of the Nazi leader added credence to the memorandum which he is said to have written—and started cleverers searching along the lines of his accusations.

Investigators' Conclusions

These investigators offer the following questions in support of their theory:

The Nazis claim that the plot, by Communists to destroy the Reichstag by fire on the night of Feb. 27 was known to the Nazi police on Feb. 24. Why then, were the guards at the Reichstag ordered away from the building in the afternoon of Feb. 27.

Why was there a great delay in turning in an alarm, and how was it physically possible to serve 1,500 warrants of arrest so soon after the fire if nothing was previously prepared?

How could the large amount of inflammable material found in the Reichstag have been carried in and there without the use of the underground passage leading from Goering's house to the building and since it would require more than one man to carry it, how was it that only one man, Marius Van der Lubbe, was found on the scene?

Van der Lubbe Doubted

How was it that Van der Lubbe, if he really were a Communist, would carry on his person Communist credentials while engaging in such a mission, and be able to leave a complete confession, burning four other men and describing in detail what had been planned almost immediately after his capture?

These are the question that concern the trial but which are hardly expected to be brought up in the German court, for the case of the prosecution is based on the fact that Van der Lubbe, said to be a Dutch Communist was caught redhanded at the scene of the fire, and confessed its plot.

Van der Lubbe named Ernest Torgler, Communist leader in the Reichstag, the head of a duly accredited political party, incidentally and three Bulgarian Communists as his confederates. He also has told the Nazis that the Reichstag fire was the first of a series of acts of terrorism that the Communists had planned.

An Unofficial Court

When the various conflicting facts concerning the fire were brought out, a group of well-known lawyers in various countries offered to defend the accused men. Basil Frank, Reich judicial commissar, against all socialist and Nazi Kerenberg that discussion with foreign lawyers would be useful in order to convince the world "that the trial of the Reichstag incendiaries will be free from political influence."

But the committee of lawyers, including Forgner Premier Mitli of Italy, Dr. Branting, former premier of Sweden; Arthur Garfield Hayes of the United States, and other leading legal minds of Europe, was refused permission to participate in the defense. Therefore, they are holding a separate commission in London and will review the facts in an independent inquiry for the benefit of world interest.

And so there will be sitting on the case of the accused incendiaries, a fully constituted court in Leipzig—will have the fate of the men in its hands. But the world is attending both hearings.

BUSINESS IN ALL LINES ON MOVE UPWARD

Going Ahead Without Flag Waving of NRA Codes

FULL DINNER PAIL

Every Industry In City Reports General Up-Trend In Orders

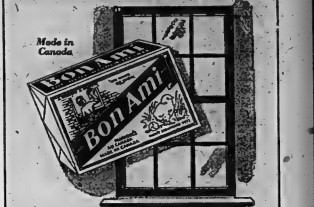
Belleville industries minus the flag-waving enthusiasm of the Blue Eagle, and the National Recovery Act codes are steadily forging ahead to a business recovery fast approaching the volume of pre depression days.

A survey of business conditions taken at present shows a more optimistic outlook than for some time. Without a single exception, superintendents and managers of the many diversified industries in the city are quick to report a recovery lately, that had been unlooked for even a few short months ago. Busy wheels in factories are humming a rhythmic chant of increased business, an incoming orders commence to pile up. Many with extra shifts are going back to work at some of the plants, in some cases overtime work has been necessary to keep up with scheduled out-put. A few factories even report orders booked for months ahead.

Today Mr. Reg Moncrief, manager of the Frontenac Papey Box Company, one of the first of the local industries to feel the recovery of manufacturers served by them, stated, that more orders were on hand at the present moment than they had had for the past three years. "And we expect to be busy for several months to come," he added.

"Prospects look good," stated Mr. G. A. Freeman, manager of the Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Company, makers of mining and engineering machinery. "During the past month or so we have been quite busy, and we hope to be able to report something worth while in the not too far distant future."

The clang of heavy machinery in the large plant of the Stewart-Warner Smith Corp., of Canada, north of the city, lent emphasis to the statement of Mr. E. Rowsome, general manager.



"Yes, we're busy. Plenty of business right along the line to the dealers' shelves". Whether orders will continue throughout the coming months, Mr. Rowsome was not prepared to state.

Building has shown a slight pick-up in the district, according to the local plant of the Houston Company, one of the largest dealers in builders' supplies. "Business has improved considerably during the past months or so, and we hope it will get better from now on," stated the general manager. "We're optimistic, anyhow."

American Hardware reported full time work for its full staff of employees. Some improvement had been noted lately, with the added prospect of better times coming. Belleville Sargent Company, also manufacturers of builders' hardware and allied products, reported some pickup during the past month or so.

At the office of the American Optical Company the same optimistic outlook was noted. Orders for this company have been heavier lately than they have been for some time, and immediate prospects look "rosy".

Perhaps two of the busiest factories in the city at the present time are the Deacon Shirt Factory and the Bell Shirt Factory, Both reported that the orders they could satisfactorily handle at the present time. Full time is being given workers in each factory, and a full staff is necessary to care for the busy machines which are humming ceaselessly on fall orders.

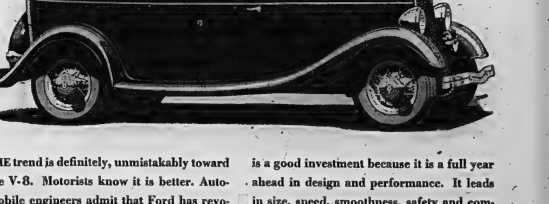
CAMPBELLFORD MAN SECURES FOUR BEARS

Mother and Three Cubs Brought Down by Trusty Rifle



Campbellford Sept. 22.—Not many hunters can boast of four bears in one afternoon, but Frank Labrash, well-known boat builder of Campbellford, accomplished this feat about 4 o'clock Thursday. Here's how it happened: Mr. Labrash was out on a new hunting dog, which he took out for the purpose known as "Blendy bush," on the northern outskirts of town. The dog spotted a cub, which took refuge up a tree; two more cubs appeared, which followed suit. Then the black bear mother bear came leisurely along. Labrash had time enough, for he had better make for home and get his rifle. On his return quickly, Labrash grabbed his repeater, made for the spot indicated by a group of excited boys, and rounded up the entire bear family, Mr. Fox has decided to carry his own gun on his expedition to the woods.

TAKES FIVE POSTS

Vienna, Sept. 21 (AP)—Dimunitive, dynamic Englebert Dollfuss took five portfolios in his own dictatorial government today with the formation of a "cabinet of capabilities" and the espousal of Fascism.

Major Emil Fey of the Fascist Heimwehr (pro-Italian Home Guard), whose rise lately is nearly a counterpart of Chancellor Dollfuss' advancement, gave up the Ministry of Public Security and replaced Franz Winkler, Democratic agrarian exponent, as Vice-Chancellor.

A YEAR AHEAD IN DESIGN AND PERFORMANCE

THE trend is definitely, unmistakably toward the V-8. Motorists know it is better. Automobile engineers admit that Ford has revolutionized all previous ideas of performance and economy with his remarkable 1933 model. The coming years will see many more V-eights on the road. Cars of fewer cylinders will be out of date. . . . The Ford V-8 is a good investment because it is a full year ahead in design and performance. It leads in size, speed, smoothness, safety and comfort. Owners report 22 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline. Drive it yourself—and see!

SUN TURNS SOUTHWARD

Days Will Be Shorter From Now, Due To Autumnal Equinox

There's a Fall haze in the air. Biting frosty nights are just around the corner. Already the first few leaves have begun to fall. Cloudier weather is replacing the sunshiny days of even a few weeks ago, and the days themselves appear to be fading rapidly into twilight minutes earlier week by week. Friday, September 22, however, the period of daylight and darkness will be exactly the same. On this date the sun passes from north to south, resulting in the autumnal equinox and the consequent shortening of daylight hours from now on. It is at this period, according to a work of science, that the days and nights are equal the world over but with the passing of the sun from north to south the gradual encroachment of darkness into daylight will be noted. The vernal equinox, on March 21, the process is reversed and the sun confirmes its steady drive northward, daylight in the lengthier hours of daylight so noticeable from that date on.

POLISH FLIERS ARE WELCOMED

Bonaventure Station At Montreal Scene of Happy Throng

Montreal, Que., Sept. 21.—Bonaventure Station was thronged with Polish veterans and other Polish citizens of Montreal, gathered for the purpose of welcoming Capt. F. Hynek and Lieut. Z. Burzynski, Polish aeronauts and belated winners of the Gordon Bennett balloon race, who reached Montreal with their balloon after their arduous experiences. The Polish balloonists came to earth in the Lemieux district of Northern Quebec and are believed to have covered the greatest distance in their flight. Their landing spot was some fifteen miles from the lines of the Canadian National Railway lines and the Quebec Government lent assistance in getting the damaged balloon of Lemieux from where it was shipped to Montreal arriving in the morning. On arrival at Montreal the balloonists were greeted by Joseph Markevski, Polish Consul at Montreal, Captain Wlitzer President of the Polish Veterans' Society; A. C. Gardiner, assistant general passenger agent of the Canadian National Railways, and a large delegation of Polish Veterans and other residents.

Immediately after being unloaded the envelope of their balloon still sodden from the rains, which have fallen since the balloon descended in the North Woods, was spread out to dry in the Immigration Hall at Bonaventure Station. The plans of the aeronauts were stated to be indefinite but it is expected they will remain in Montreal for one or two days, being entertained by the Polish Consul and others before proceeding to New York with their balloon and instruments to make their bid for the prize, which is understood to be awaiting them.

FACTORY INSPECTOR MAKES VISIT TO CITY

"The outlook for business, particularly in this section of Ontario, is better at the present time than it has been for years," stated Mr. W. Sutherland, factory inspector of the Ontario Accident Prevention Association, who paid this city a visit on Thursday and Friday, making his periodic inspection of local manufacturing plants.

"In the eastern section of the province manufacturers are awakening from the recent period of depression and are once more busily engaged in filling the old-time orders. In a few instances noted, stated Mr. Sutherland, that additions are being made to the factories to care for the decided increase in business.

A clean bill in general was given Belleville factories by the inspector.

VALLEYFIELD VISITED BY SERIOUS FIRE

Three Injured And Damage of $1,600,000 Is Estimate

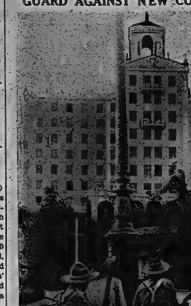
STILL BURNING

Sacred Host And Vestments Saved But Paintings Burn

Valleyfield, Que., Sept. 23.—(CP)—Valleyfield today counted its losses as $1,600,000 damage and three persons injured following a fire which struck with raging fury at the heart of the Roman Catholic property here during the night. The $600,000 Cathedral was totally destroyed, only a wall remaining upright and the $1,000,000 convent and girls' boarding school of the Reverend Sisters of Jesus and Mary was a mass of fleming ruins.

Fire was still burning late this morning but was declared by authorities to be under control. The Bishop's Palace, an Orphanage and a Refuge for the aged, all grouped near the Cathedral, were saved from destruction by heroic efforts of firemen from Valleyfield and Montreal.

Five hundred nuns and pupils from the convent fled when the blazing cathedral, first to ignite, set fire to their building. They were hastily billeted through the city.



Fanned by a high wind the flames which broke out simultaneously in the Cathedral spread to the two steeples and later to the towering churches within an hour of the start and had crashed and sparks flew about the large square. Large flaming pieces of debris landed on top of surrounding buildings.

Convent Cinder Fire

Before long the roof of the convent was seething. It had been emptied of occupants but the furnishings were practically all destroyed. It was while standing at the top of a ladder against the convent, that volunteer fireman Raymond Delisle slipped and fell to the ground five stories below. He was taken to the hospital where it was reported he suffered a fractured spine.

Mrs. Leduc, mother of Dr. Leduc, suffered a broken leg and a policeman named Lamotot was also injured but during the confusion existent of their hurts was not ascertained.

No indication could be found as to how the fire started. A priest saved the sacred host from the Cathedral and some of the vestments were removed to safety but its collection of beautiful paintings and priceless relics were lost. The church was insured as an estimated cost of $500,000.

GUARD AGAINST NEW CUBAN REVOLT

While President Ramon Grau San Martin has been ordered in an ultimatum of a coalition of factions opposing the new Cuban government to step off as head of the regime in favor of a Nationalist government, soldiers continue to guard against possible outbreaks. A machine gun squad is shown in the photo as it guarded the National hotel, in background, where officers of the regular army who are among the chief opponents of the new president have barricaded themselves against attack.

National Recovery Sentiment Spreading in This Dominion

Oil Firm Operating In Canada Adopts NRA Code

(By the Canadian Press)

Canadian labor and industry today viewed a spread of national recovery sentiment in this country and saw these developments:

The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada yesterday passed a series of resolutions at its Windsor, Ont., convention, endorsing the National Recovery Act of the United States and recommending similar action on the part of the Canadian Government.

Branches of the Northwest Steel arene Company, an oil firm, will be placed under the United States NRA, James W. Johnson, vice-president of the firm, announced yesterday. The company operates in Calgary, Lethbridge, Edmonton, Regina and Saskatoon. The parent company in the United States decided to enforce a 36-hour week, 40 per cent. increase in payroll and 33 1-2 increase in staff.

At Edmonton Major F. Ashley Cooper of London, governor of the Dominion's Day Company, said Canada was bound to be affected by the Recovery Act in the United States. He added world recovery could be brought about only through international action.

D. M. Wright, Stratford, member of Parliament, was revealed as an advocate of a "code" for the furniture industry. Mr. Wright, president of the McLaglan Furniture Company, discussing conditions in the industry, said he had approached cabinet ministers at Ottawa and Premier George S. Henry of Ontario, and had gained the impression the government might be willing to draw up a national furniture code.

Mayor David Croll of Windsor, Ont., has been conducting a vigorous campaign for several weeks to persuade business men to raise salaries and wages.

RUSSIA HAS HEAVY CROP

No Food Shortage Such As Last Year's Is Expected

(By Stanley P. Richardson)

MOSCOW, Sept. 22.— (AP)—Soviet Russia now has a grain crop so rich as to preclude a repetition of the disastrous famine this year of a food shortage, which certainly claimed a large loss of human life and livestock.

This was apparent during a week's tour just completed by Stanley Richardson Press Correspondent in the Ukraine and North Caucasus, Russia's fabled breadbasket.

Alexander Austkin, chief of the political sections in the Ukraine, and as such one of the highest Communist party officials in the region, in a formal interview at Kharkoff estimated the percentage of deaths in area last winter and spring from causes related to undernourishment.

The armour in Moscow, however, refused to permit the transmission of Austkins' figures to Canada and the United States on the grounds, that they were "not official," although they were considerably less than the "millions" reported abroad.

"The mortality of cattle and horses was extremely heavy," said the official.

CAR DESCENDS EMBANKMENT THREE ESCAPE SERIOUS INJURY

Breaking of Pole Probably Saved Lives of Passengers

Trenton, Sept. 22.—(Special)—The annual Rotary carnival was held on Wednesday evening and proved to be a real entertainment for Trentonians and many from the outlying country who came to hear the famous Glover Hudson orchestra, the feature attraction.

Dundas street from Quinte street to Front street was fenced off with a stand equipped with amplifiers on the western end for the orchestra.

President Chas. Foster of the Rotary Club opened the carnival, followed by selections from the Trenton Band.

The many booths, presided over by Rotarians, found ready customers. Reg. McMichael of the Clover Mullers, delighted the crowd with his bone song and the rodelling Round and square dancing continued well past the midnight hour.

Webb Taylor did the calling off and he showed he was no peer in the locality as a square dance caller.

The drawing for the $15.00 to the lucky ticket holder went to Cecil Roberts. Other winners were Edith Harry, R.R. No. 2, $5.00, Helen Warmenhoven, Bay street, $3.00, Myron Deholder fourth $3.00 Arnold Westfall $2.00 and William Lucas $2.00.

Despite the threatening rain the affair was most successful and well pleased the Rotarians.

Three Escape Injury

Three Trenton young men miraculously escaped serious injury early yesterday morning, three miles west of town on No. 2 highway.

Wm. Miller, Claude Post, Jr., and Dougall Donaldson were proceeding east at an early hour when it is alleged that Miller, the driver fell asleep as the coupe in which the three were riding described the incline off the overhead bridge careening over the south embankment where the car broke off a telephone pole. The occupants escaped with only a few minor cuts and scratches.

DRAG LAKE FOR BODY

Lake Placid, N.S., Sept. 22.—(CP)—State police today planned to drag Lake Placid for the body of Mrs. Mabel Smith, Douglas, N.J., and Brunswick, N.J., former dean of New Jersey College for Women, whom they believed drowned in the lake. She was last seen by servants at her camp here yesterday afternoon.

NO MORE SICK HEADACHES

Fruit-a-tives and pieces of pain

"I suffered agonies with my head, indigestion and sick headaches for years. I could hardly eat anything and was badly constipated. I realize now, of course, that I was in a very run-down condition. Fortunately for me, I was persuaded to try Fruit-a-tives. In a few weeks I was completely cured of all my troubles. They regulated my system so thoroughly that my appetite returned and I could eat heartily. I would not hesitate to recommend them to others."

WALLACE BEERY and MARIE DRESSLER in "TUGBOAT ANNIE."

It recently came to light that Marie Dressler's latest picture, "Tugboat Annie", starring on the Belle screen Saturday was really inspired by the actress herself. The authority for that is none other than Norman Reilly Raine, whose "Tugboat Annie" appeared in a popular magazine endeared him to millions of readers.

While visiting near Puget Sound, Maine heard of a woman who inherited a shipping line and, through the force of her personality, made it pay against the opposition of hard selling men. It was this woman that Raine wanted to put into this series, but she lacked the human qualities necessary to the leading character of the story. From Raine saw the picture "Anna Christie", and in it found the character he wanted in the person of Marie Dressler.

The first story in the series brought thousands of letters to the magazine and Miss Dressler's studio heads demanding that she create the role for the screen. But even before it was published, the series was purchased for Miss Dressler, the film firm it reunited that most popular team, Miss Dressler and Wallace Beery.

AT THE CAPITOL

A successful author, traveling around the country lecturing to women's clubs, between the writing of "best sellers," is greeted one morning by a charming young woman whom he dimly remembers as an old sweetheart of campus days. She appears in his hotel room, announces that she knows she is the original of the heroine of his most popular novel, and is ready to throw herself into his arms, because she feels she belongs to him.

Imagine his embarrassment!

If you can, you'll understand precisely the feelings of Warren William, star of First National's comedy "Goodbye Again," which opens Saturday at the Capitol Theatre, when brokers Genevieve Tobin does that very thing. Then the picture is off on an hilarious chase through hotel bedrooms, Pullman car drawing rooms and compartments, from Cleveland to Albany and all but into the divorce court. "Goodbye Again" offers a brand new angle on the time worn triangle that is as different from the "naughty" films of a generation ago as the latest type of streamline car differs from its ancestor of 1905.

Years ago George Bernard Shaw laid down the dictum in "Man and Superman" that woman was really the pursuer and man the pursued, in the comedy-drama of the human sexes. From the moment she determines to "right the wrong" she has done the famous author in failing to wait for him and marry another man to the end that Ann Whitefield, as relentless as Northwest Mountie on the trail of a fugitive, in the fact that Julia finally does give up the chase is no fault of Bixby's. It takes a woman to outwit another woman, Anne, the badgered author's devoted secretary, discovers, before the curtain has rung down, that Julia has actually have laughed themselves into state of helplessness over the tangles of the hapless author against his fate.

Warren William plays the role of author Bixby, Julia Faye Hayes is Anne and Genviere Tobin is the ultra-romantic Julia in this modern comedy of errors. Julia's bewildered husband is played by Hugh Herbert and Robert Ford has the role of a lawyer friend of the family who complicates matters by trying to settle everything out of court.

As a stage play, "Good-bye Again" is one of the hits of the current Broadway season, the work of Geo. Haight and Allan Scott.

Wonderers of the Big House

"Children of the Big House" considered one of the most sensational screen offerings of the current year and recorded as a human symphony for all ages, headed by a cast comprising Dorothy Durkin, Pat O'Brien, Bette Davis, Junior Coghlan, Emma Dunn, Charles Grapewin, Morgan Wallace Hooper Atchley, Mary Alden, Wallis Clark and James Marcoms to the Capitol Theatre Saturday on the same bill.

This picture directed by the Wickersham Report, is one of the most widely discussed subjects before the public today.

The story, while purely fictional, is based upon actual facts that were gleaned through intensive research throughout the country.

The picture has been chosen by Photoplay Magazine as "one of the best pictures of the month."

Junior Durkin, who recently scored with his performance in "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" has the lead in "Children of the Big House" and is said to give the best performance of his career as "Jimmy Mason," the youngster whose only wrong is hero-worship, and yet he finds himself in a reform school. Here he meets Shorty, played by Junior Coghlan, and a great friendship arises between these two boys that furnishes one of the most dramatic sequences of the picture.

Pat "Front Page" O'Brien is to be seen at his usual time booking as hero of Durkin, because he claims to know Baby Ruth, "Red" Grange and other famous personages.

Tonight

"Soldiers of the King," the eminently successful British Canadian of Laughs, leaves the Capitol tonight and bids fair to setting a new high attendance even greater than those set by the outstanding British pictures shown this year. Do not miss it!

TWO STOP FLIGHT AROUND WORLD IS PLAN

WIth Fly Whole Trip at Altitude of 33,000 Feet

UTICA, N.Y., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Bert Griffin, Oklahoma City airman, who attempted a flight around the world in July, 1932, with Jimmy Mattern was halted by a crackup near Moscow, today had disclosed plans for a two-stop flight around the world in the spring of 1934.

Griffin said he has a special plane under construction in which he plans to make his flight at an altitude of about 35,000 feet with attendant dangers, he did not mention.

To accomplish this, his plane is being equipped to compress air in the fuselage and eliminate oxygen masks.

Its two motors will have more superchargers each, to supply oxygen, Griffin said. His plane will have a normal cruising speed of about 150 miles an hour, which Griffin expects to be increased to 300 miles an hour at the higher altitude.

Blondell didn't exactly approve of Warren William's advances in this scene from "Goodbye Again". Opening Saturday at The Capitol Theatre.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By Russ Westover.

"Well, you and I don't understand that," Jim said slowly.

"Yes, we can. I almost hope he will go away soon and let her reason it all through."

"Maybe he will."

"Of course he may go. I'm not sure, now."

"Do you remember," Bessie asked suddenly, "that talk Aunt Marcia years ago? The time she went off to Europe in a great hurry. Remember? She took Annie, that Scotch maid who had been a real her mother for years—"

"Now that you speak of it I do remember," Jim conceded.

"How long ago, was that, Jim?"

"Well, I'm not sure. Let's see—" Her husband paused, musing. "Must be close to 10 years, isn't it?" he questioned in turn.

"Yes it is!" Bessie agreed promptly. "Oh, Jim—don't you see it all?" she went on eagerly.

Jim didn't. Hastily she explained. "Oh, I know I'm right about it! I know I am!" Bessie exclaimed. "I knew all along Barrett wasn't that sort—"

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Two days later Barrett and Elinor drove out to see the house Bessie had described. It was a low, cozy, old dwelling set on the side of a hill and overlooking the sound. The house was larger than it seemed at first glance and everything about it appeared to be satisfactory.

"I do like it!" Elinor assured him in almost the old, warmly confiding way. Such moments always hurt Barrett: They were invariably brief and always followed by a return to even more adamant rigidity.

It was odd, he thought, that a girl who seemed so gentle, so constantly thoughtful of others, could be so stern. He had come to know this sternness and hope it would bruise them both. Elinor was changing in other ways since she married him. She seemed listless and did not look as all well. He saw that she had lost weight. At meals she was never hungry. Higgins had noticed this, noticed also that Mr. Barrett seemed equally strained and had scarcely any appetite.

Now Barrett said dully, "It is a nice house", without meaning to, he moved toward her. He became aware of this when Elinor casually and, as if accidentally, moved to widen the space between them. The lines of his face hardened.

"You couldn't be so cruel," he thought, "if you knew how it hurts me."

Aloud he said, "Do you think you want to live here?"

"It will do very well," Elinor answered.

"Then I'll see about the lease tomorrow," he grumbled, "and you be able to move in whenever you like."

"I'd like to come soon. I think with Bessie's help I can get everything that's necessary ordered within a week."

He realized that would mean that if he made the trip to South America he would have a few weeks alone in the New York house. A few weeks during which he, in his room would seem to hear her moving in here.

"Don't you think after all," he said abruptly (for it was not easy to speak to Gerald), "that I'd best pack the youngest off for some summer camp?"

"Don't you think," she asked hotly in turn, "that it's only decent—not to hide him?"

CHAPTER 44

Barrett took the key from the lock of the door before he answered. Then he said, "I never have tried to hide the boy, Elinor—"

She moved one hand nervously. "The child has a right to live in your home," she said insistently. "A real home such as Aunt Bessie's boys have. It's horrible to be shunted from place to place. I know all about that!"

He said nothing staring, dully out at the sound.

"Hasn't he a right—a real right —to live in your house?" Elinor demanded.

"Perhaps," he conceded.

She flushed with anger. "How can you doubt it?" she asked as close to stridently as she could speak.

Barrett made no reply to that. After they were sealed in the car he asked, "Do you want to stop at Bessie's?"

"Not today unless you particularly want to."

"No," he answered. The necessary pretending before Bessie Thrope would be too difficult!

Elinor sat rigid. She drew away from him on turns of the road, where, with the motion of the car, her shoulder might have brushed his. He felt this deeply, but he had no notion of her thoughts.

Elinor was thinking of the child to be born in that small house they had just left. Barrett's child. She had not told him about it. At first the secret had made her wildly happy but now all that was changed. It only made the situation in which she found herself more bitter, more hopeless.

Barrett turned to look down at her and saw tears in her eyes. "My God, this is cruel, Elinor!" he whispered.

"More cruel than you know," she answered.

He smiled grimly at that. "I think not!" he said wryly.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

For miles they travelled without speaking. When they reached home Barrett went to the library. There, alone and smoking hard, he tried to decide what to do about the expedition, whether it was best for her to have him out of the way. That would determine his course. Her feeling and her need. Nothing else seemed of any importance to him.

They dined almost in silence. Elinor answered the telephone and hurried back to the dining room. He said to Henning, "Mr. Radnor says he must speak to you, sir."

"Bring the telephone, please," Barrett answered in a tone of complete disinterest.

Higgins brought the instrument plugged it in and set it at Barrett's hand.

"Yes," Higgins heard. There was a silence and then a shocked, "Oh, no, Dick!"

After a few more words Barrett

CHAPTER 45

Elinor said nothing but she had lost color. She sat staring at her plate. Her suddenly trembling hands nervously fingered the silver.

Here was a new peril—the loss of a child. That too might lie before her. If she should lose her child she would have nothing—no one in the world—left! Marcia had Dick Radnor, a devoted husband who loved her with all his heart.

Another thought ran her heart with knife-like thrust. Was Gerald's mother living?

Barrett turned, at the door. "Dorothy," he said dully.

"Dorothy," Elinor answered. There was no softening in her tone and he noted it sharply.

Higgins, entering with the dessert said cautiously, "Mr. Colvin may I speak to you about something that has been troubling me?"

"Certainly, Higgins," she told him but not as she would have answered a few weeks ago. Higgins had never known anyone to change so completely in so short a time.

"I'm troubled about Mr. Colvin," he went on, rubbing his hands together in embarrassment. "He's not well, Mrs. Colvin, and that's strange because he usually has such excellent health. I've never known him to be like this before. I can't help but be alarmed about it. I've been with the family for such a long time. There's nothing I wouldn't do for him. Nothing! He's such a fine man, Mrs. Colvin—"

She flushed hotly. He saw her lay down a piece of silver and was sure she had been moved by his words.

Elinor, angry and close to tears, said distantly, "I think you need not worry, Higgins. Mr. Colvin is quite strong."

"But those fevers in the tropics," he murmured. "They're very dangerous!"

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Elinor rose and found that her knees were weak and unsteady. "You may bring my coffee to the drawing room," she said.

"Yes, Mrs. Colvin," the butler carried the tray he meditated that, for all he knew he had only made a bad matter worse. But to stand by and see the storm clouds thicken and burst was impossible. He couldn't do that. No doubt it was the malice of Miss Marcia's friend that was making all this trouble. Higgins knew that if he should as much as hint at what he knew about that affair he would lose his job—and far worse!—his master's trust.

He fumbled with a handkerchief and dabbed at a spot before had he fell so old. He had grown stooped and white-haired serving this family in this old house but he had never felt his stoop until lately. Now hopelessness was giving cruel weight to his years. He had served Mr. Colvin's father and devoted, the heartaches of the ones he loved.

Elinor was in the drawing room, sitting far back in a chair when Higgins brought the coffee tray and placed it on a low table before her. She had turned off the lights and the gray of an early summer evening filled the room. Curled up in the big chair, she looked like a wistful, uncertain youngster of 16.

She had been thinking over what the butler had said. Perhaps he was right. She had been too much concerned about herself recently to think of anyone else. Perhaps something should happen to Barrett while she was away! Higgins had said the south seemed quite

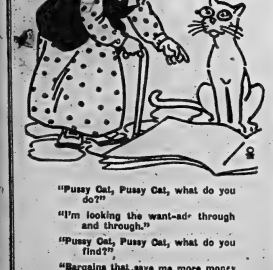
SEPT 22 MR. AND MRS. — THE VACANT HOUSE NEXT DOOR

TARZAN, I CRD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs



"What wouldst thou give me to save thy life?" whispered Fahd. Silmoel promised a large sum of money once he was safe in the nearest European colony. "Save me," he begged, "for Jad forced me to kill Tarzan and now he turns against me." "I do not know that I can," replied Fahd, "but I will try. If I succeed after then forgetest the bargain, I shall kill thee if I have to follow thee across the world."

The Sheik called two ignorant slaves and bade them carry away Tarzan's body and bury it in an unmarked grave. Wrapping the slain man in the old burnouse that already covered him, they bore him across the menail and laid him down while they dug a shallow pit. And so, under a great tree's shade in the land which he loved, the grave of Tarzan of the Apes was made.

When, next morning, Ibn Jad called the elders of the tribe for a council, it was noted that Tollop, his brother, was missing. The Sheik was puzzled and irritated when a search failed to find the absent Arab. Ibn Jad declared they must take the Christian dog's life to prove to Tarzan's friends that the Arabs were innocent. Then it was that Fahd, for his own reasons, argued against the deed.

"He would command a great ransom if you spare his life. Dead, he is worth nothing to us." "But if we keep him alive until the ape-man's Waziri overtake us," spake an old Arab, "he would speak lies concerning us and say it was he who slew Tarzan." "Nevertheless," said the Sheik, "ye will keep him alive." "The better we treat him," said Fahd, "the larger will be the reward he will pay us."

NIGHT SUPERVISOR PREVENTS ROBBERY

Plucky Woman Foils an Attempt by Lone Bandit to Rob Windsor Hospital

Believed To Have Robbed Milk Wagon Driver Previously

CRIES FOR HELP

Night Supervisor Decides On Desperate Expedient

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP)—A plucky woman is credited with a would-be bandit early today, half an hour before a robber, apparently the same man, robbed a milk wagon driver a few blocks away.

A well-dressed young man burst into Hotel Dieu and marched into the quiet main corridor of the hospital, encountering Miss Josephine Loudens, the night supervisor. She was the only person in the vicinity.

"I want to have a little talk with you in the office," the intruder, about 26 years old said, "and if I don't there's going to be some shooting around here."

The supervisor decided on a desperate expedient although, candidly, there was probably no one near enough to hear, she worked out hourly for help. The gesture was successful in baffling the man, who turned and bolted for the door.

HIGHEST PRICE IN TWO YEARS

Cheese Sells On Board For 11½ Cents With Quantity Higher

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP)—Endorsation of the principles of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation was declared by the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress here today after a two days' session.

R. J. Fallon of Montreal spearheaded by the majority view when he declared the workers "should not be tied to the tail of anyone's kite." The C.C.F. party includes many labor men he added.

The resolution hailing the endorsation of the C.C.F. coming from the Moncton Machinists' Council was rejected on the grounds it was against the policy of the congress.

At the behest of the Chase Board, Saturday morning 1687 white cheese were offered and sold at 11 1-2 cents.

The offering Saturday exceeded the quantity boarded the corresponding Saturday of 1932 by 264 boxes and the price was an advance of 9-16 cents over that of a year ago. Saturday, offering was the first this season to exceed quantity for sale in a corresponding Saturday of last season. The price realized this morning marks the highest price paid this season and also the highest price in two years and was an advance 15-16 cents over the price paid a week ago.

The following factories were represented:

Shannonville 41; Bronk 66; Harold 47; Silver Springs 29; Union 46; Ridge 39; Rallaway 40; Acme 30; Sidney T.H. 75; Maple Leaf 76; Huntingdon 36; Melrose 80; Zion 97; Foxboro 97; East Hastings 60; Thurlow 37; Moiraton 54; Weller's Bay 109; Morven Valley 46; Roslin 31; Moorutain View 82; Evergreen 60; Frankford 101; Rogers 79; Moira 27; Stirling 63; Victoria 50; Hoard 34; Glen 22; Beulah 85; Enterprise 46.

ONE KILLED, TWO HURT IN CRASH

Car Tossed Down Embankment a Heap of Wreckage

Newmarket, Sept. 23.—One man suffered fatal injuries and his two companions, all residents of Newmarket, were injured seriously when their car was struck by a northbound passenger train entering the low at the Timothy Street crossing early Friday night.

Donald Harmon, 23, Andrew Street, suffered concussion, a dislocated shoulder, lacerations and other injuries and is in hospital in a critical condition.

Eugene Monbalm, 12, Andrew St., newspaper carrier, was taken to his home unconscious, with possible internal injuries.

The locomotive struck their car and tossed it down a 25-foot embankment, a heap of wreckage.

Harmon and Monbalm were thrown clear but McComb was pinned beneath the car.

LABOR FAVORS NATIONAL BANK

Oppose Inflation As It Tends To Make Millionaires

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) — The Canadian Trades and Labor Congress today went on record as being in favor of a National Bank. Spokesmen declared the bankers opposed the banks were opposed to government control of banking. In the depression years the banks had built up their credits, he said, because for every dollar printed to depoit they added $9 in credits. They protested against the low salaried low wages paid to bank employees.

A resolution urging inflation of money put forward by Percy Joseph Tompkins, Toronto, who supported it, declares interest charges were the cause of the depression. He asked the congress to go on record as opposing the borrowing of funds abroad.

William Dunn, Toronto, said: "If we have inflation we will be working for a few millionaires." The United States indulged in mild inflation, he said, and "two days later we in Toronto paid 2 1-2 cents a gallon more for gasoline."

The congress also declared itself as "unalterably opposed to war."

The resolution also urged there should be no declaration of war before the people of Canada are consulted by way of a referendum.

Starling Gives Cock Robin the Works in Three Day Battle

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23 (CP) —In spite of the old saying though cock robin is the sort of bird who just can't take related in the Mother Goose sports news, a sparrow hawker, Mrs. Elder got tired of the noise and called the police.

Black as crows, the feathered fighters, weary but still game, were dragged out of the chimney, put into a patrol car and taken to the police station. A few hours later, cock robin died.

The starling's back on his roost with a "brung on that fair-ly-on" strut.

And then just as though things weren't bad enough, the two police, has fell down a chimney.

There the bout continued for nearly three days, with occasional periods of time out. Finally, how-ever, Mrs. Elder got tired of the

PREMIER OF ALBERTA SUED FOR DAMAGES

Hon. Brownlee, Member of Banking Commission Denies Charges

ASKED TO REMAIN

Forwards Resignation To Commission But Invited To Stay

Edmonton, Sept. 23. — An order permitting service of a copy of a statement of claim upon Hon. J. E. Brownlee, Alberta Premier, in the city of Ottawa or elsewhere in the province of Ontario, was issued in Supreme Court chambers Friday by Mr. Justice J. R. Boyle.

The application for the order was made by Neil D. MacLean, K.C., counsel for Allan D. Macmillan and Vivian Macmillan, after counsel had filed a statement of claim in the Supreme Court offices against the Premier in which unstated damages were asked for alleged seduction of Vivian Macmillan by the Premier.

The first-named plaintiff is the father of the second, and is resident at Edson, according to the statement of claim.

Mr. MacLean filed the statement of claim and immediately went into the chambers room, where Mr. Justice Boyle was sitting on other applications.

The order made by Mr. Justice Boyle declared:

"Upon motion by counsel on behalf of the plaintiffs, it is ordered ... (Continued On Page Ten)

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS WELL MAINTAINED DURING AUGUST

Business Operations Gain And Credit Conditions Better

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—(CP)—Economic conditions were well maintained in August, despite the speculative reaction in the latter part of the preceding month, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today in its monthly economic review. The favorable factors tending to inspire confidence, the report proceeded, were a substantial gain in business operations continued marked advance of the second quarter, and significant strength in high-grade bonds indicating a further betterment in credit conditions.

Here are some of the highlights of the review.

Industrial holdings at $53,900,000 showed a gain to a new high point contributing to the improved liquid position of the bank.

The yield on representative Ontario Bonds was 4.55 percent, in August compared with 4.63 in July reflecting a relatively substantial gain in prices.

The big price of four-Dominion Government Refunding Bonds showed gradual appreciation during the month, when a high point was reached for the period, since Great Britain was forced off gold in September 1931.

The yield on the four bonds was compared with a 4.43 per cent compared with 4.50 in July.

The output of newsprint in August was 294,262 tons compared with 180,387 in July.

Shipments of newsprint in August were greater than production resulting in decline in mill stocks.

Export of planks and boards at 128,400,000 feet showed an 81 per cent. increase over July's figures of 116,179,000.

Production Jumps

Production of pig iron jumped from 31,889 in July to 33,233 in August.

Car loadings during the past month totalled 183,555 cars compared with 162,728 for the preceding month.

The index of physical volume of business in August was 89.8 compared with 84.1 in July, a gain of 6.8 per cent.

Gold shipments from Canadian mines to the mint and to external points were 311,062 fine ounces compared with 192,740 in July, the adjusted gain being more than 23 per cent.

Silver shipments increased from 926,800 ounces to 1,174,068 ounces.

Exports of copper ore and blister were 7,660,200 pounds in August compared with July's figures of 3,734,900.

Exports of better grade asbestos at 8,242 tons showed an increase of more than 32 per cent compared with 6,260 tons in July.

The output of wheat flour is showing a week for equipped ...

McLEAN TELLS OF CRASH, NO FOG AT TIME

Belleville Banker Sues Globe Printing Co. For $25,000

WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Three Doctors Give Evidence As To Recovery of Injured Man

Peterboro, Sept. 23. — Roy P. McLean, Belleville bank clerk, who is suing The Globe Printing Company for $25,000 for injuries he sustained in a motor accident near Centreville on Highway 28, early on the morning of November 7th., when a car he was driving met in a head-on collision in a dense fog with a Globe truck, testified yesterday at the hearing before Mr. Justice Armour of the case and two others growing out of the accident, totalling $26,000 in claims for damages.

He stated that owing to his injuries he was not able to return to work until May 7 and he has not been able to properly fulfil his duties as a bank teller and therefore is permitted to do only odd jobs about the bank. He was on the witness stand for over an hour, while he was minutely questioned and cross-examined concerning the story of the accident and his injuries.

Three Doctors Testify

Three doctors testified in regard to his injuries, Dr. T. W. H. Young said Dr. Herbert Young, witness for the plaintiff, testified that McLean would never fully recover the use of his right arm and left leg, and Dr. Erwin Robertson, of Toronto, witness for the defendant, testified that he stated that McLean's injuries would improve greatly within the next few months and that even now they did not impair his efficiency in bank duties.

Although the hearing of the three cases has been under way since Tuesday and are being heard together, started Wednesday afternoon, it was announced Thursday when the hearing adjourned at 5.30 p.m., that it (Continued On Page Ten)

MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL

Defense Claims Misconduct And Technical Irregularities

San Jose, Calif., Sept. 23 (AP)—Until Monday at least David A. Jacobsen, President of Real, Peru, Alta., who has been convicted of murdering Jack Allen, Jr., will remain in the county jail here while his motion for a new trial is considered.

Judge Dooling on the motion, supported by affidavits charging misconduct by jurors and technical irregularities, reserved decision yesterday after the defence attorneys had completed the argument. The state's prosecution said it would not be necessary to answer the charges contained in the affidavits before Monday.

POLICE HUNT PUBLIC ENEMY

Arrest May Aid Authorities In Locating Bank Robbers

Chicago, Sept. 23.—(CP)—The police took up the trail today of Leo Winkler, a "public enemy" in the hope that his arrest might aid them in apprehending the machine gunners who perpetrated a daring mail robbery, and slew Policeman Miles Cunningham as they fled.

The discovery of bullet-proof glass in an automobile the killers abandoned after the mail robbery early Friday morning, led to the detention of Joseph Berzl and an order for Winkler's arrest.

Berzl admitted, the police said, that Winkler was once his business partner.

A telephone number scribbled on a bit of paper found in the abandoned car caused the police to go to an automobile body service company last night and there they found Joseph Courtney, who, they said, admitted he equipped the killers' car not only with bullet proof glass but with a radio set, a police siren, and red and green fleet lights.

Courtney said Berzl had sent the owner of the car to him, but Berzl denied this.

Berzl asserted also that he did not know of the identity of the car's owner, and that he had not seen Winkler for a long time.

Chief of Detectives William Alexander, however, ordered Berzl held, and expressed the opinion he knew the gang of robbers. He said the name of one was Winkler.

"If he (Winkler) wasn't in on this job he knows who was," he said.

No loot of value in the gunmen was obtained in the robbery, it was said at the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank.

CONVICTED OF ROBBERY

Chatham, Sept. 23—Convicted of assault and robbery of Durward Wallenberger, Kingsville, Ont., and Freeman, 24, was Friday remanded ... he added, sliding two jars across the desk to the Sergeant.

The Sergeant sniffed. "Moon, nothing," he exclaimed. "This is nitro-glycerine, enough to blow up the whole town."

It was carefully placed under lock and key and the special police ...

Denied Free Choice of Counsel Says Political Refugee in Berlin Trial

Georgi Dimitroff With Four Others Charged With Arson

MANY CLASHES

Court Tells Prisoner He Is Entirely Too Fresh

By Louis P. Lochner

Leipsig, Germany, Sept. 23 (AP)—Accusing the court of denying him a free choice or counsel, Georgi Dimitroff, a Bulgarian political refugee, assumed the offensive today in the trial in which he and four others are charged with firing the Germany Reichstag building last February.

Justice Wilhelm Buenger, the presiding chairman, asked the Communist leader not to persist in repeating that 2,000 Bulgarian Communists were "innocently murdered."

One time, Buenger insisted, was sufficient. The defendant was reciting his earlier life.

"You assert this without proof" the officer thundered.

To this the 51 year old Bulgarian replied:

"If I had had a free choice of counsel I would have supplied proof but you hamper me in my defense. I never before knew the attorney assigned me. The eight lawyers I suggested were rejected."

He established like a popular orator and turned to the audience when he made the remarks.

"They were rejected in accordance with German law, and for just cause" Buenger rejoined.

Continuous clashes between Buenger and Dimitroff marked the progress of the testimony.

"Unless you moderate yourself, we will decide on special measures," the justice cried, thoroughly nettled when the defendant asked the latter's identity to the judge's question whether Dimitroff entered into legal means as an emigre to smuggle funds collected in European centers for Bulgarian communist into his fatherland.

"You're altogether too fresh," Buenger shouted. "The record of the preliminary hearings shows you have acted similarly toward the examining judge"

"Because I was provoked by him," cried Dimitroff.

To this Buenger curtly replied, "I regret this. Anyway, we will hear the examining judge later."

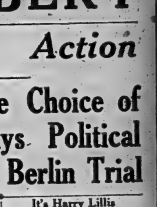
WALK OUT AT SWIFT CANADIAN IN STRATFORD

Demand Three Cents Bird or $11.50 for 44 Hour Week

Stratford, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) — With the strike of 800 furniture workers still deadlocked after more than a week, employees are today out of a general tie-up of activities at the Swift-Canadian Company's plant, where 79 girls and three male employees of the plucking department had walked out earlier.

These are strike from the pantry dressing department failed to reach any settlement with the management and consequently the picket line in front of the plant was strengthened. It was maintained all during last night and led to the belief that no settlement would be reached with the strikers, the remaining workers might go out.

The girls' strikers are asking three cents per bird instead of two cents. The management in return offered a rate of $11.50 a week for the girls, for a 44-hour week, but the workers want this rate for a 44-hour week.



Patrolman Surprised When Informed Jars Contained High Explosives

Minneapolis, Sept. 23 (CP) — Patrolman Maurice J. Kohler was proud when he brought in two suspects and an assortment of chisels, jimmy and sledge hammers.

"And look at all this ammunition," he exclaimed, displaying a number of jars filled with a clear liquid.

"It was carefully placed under lock and key and the special police ...

City and District News

FENDERS DAMAGED IN COLLISION

A slight accident happened on Lower Front Street early last evening when a car driven by J. Rosevear of this city, collided with a car driven in the same direction by Mrs. J. Bone also of Belleville. The fenders of both cars were badly damaged. Constable Evans investigated and the matter was amicably settled between the parties; it was purely an accident.

SPLENDID SAMPLE OF WILD BERRIES

A resident of Roslin, Mrs. Robt. Copland, brought into the editorial office of the Ontario Intelligencer a branch of wild raspberry bushes laden with ripe ripened berries. This is the second bearing and the plant is filled with green berries as it was during the summer. Mrs. Copland stated that they have had enough berries for several meals.

FIRST FLOOR OF DORMITORY DONE

Speed in construction of the new dormitory buildings at the Ontario School for the Deaf has resulted during the past few weeks in considerable progress being made. This week the first floor of the large building have been erected and forms are now being prepared for the pouring of concrete on the second floor. At present there are 50 to the artisans in charge, twenty five or more men are employed on the work, which is being rushed to keep ahead of the cold weather.

WEEK-END COOLER, POSSIBLY SHOWERS

Scattered showers may be felt in the district over the week end; temperatures however, are expected to remain unchanged. There will be cooler weather and probably cloudy skies. Though it appeared cool enough that frost early Saturday morning the lowest official record was 45 above; high before noon was 65.

NEARLY 900 ON RELIEF IN CITY

No decided uptrend in relief figures on city rolls was reported last month at the office of the Central Relief Bureau. Seasonal work is believed to be responsible for the fairly stationary numbers of registrations on the lists. At present approximately nine hundred individuals are accepting city charity in varying amounts.

OIL TANKER IS LARGEST TO ENTER

One of the largest boats to enter the local harbor this season, the oil tanker Briarmiller, arrived from the port on Friday and discharged her fluid cargo of gas for the British American Oil Company of this city.

The large Gooderham yacht, Orinoka, an occasional visitor, also entered port on Friday, where she will be prepared for her annual winter lay-up.

ASK ALL ELIGIBLE TO APPLY EARLY

Although the fore part of the week had been marked with considerable activity at the Relief Bureau office, where officials are engaged on the task of accepting registrations of applicants for contemplated relief work this winter, during the past few days the number of unemployed applying at the office has dropped to a mere dribble. At present approximately two hundred men have been signed. Unemployed who are eligible for relief work during the coming winter are advised to apply at the office early.

LOVELY GIFT OF DAHLIAS RECEIVED

The Ontario Intelligencer office received a lovely gift of dahlias this morning from Mrs. E. Blackburn. The large, beautifully formed blossoms in deep and unusual shades made a colourful bouquet for which the staff is deeply indebted to the generous donor.

BARN, SEPARATOR BURNS IN MAYO

Ceasing threshing operations on the farm of Mr. Ephrim Hurst, Mayo Township, North Hastings, to partake of dinner, a fire broke out in the barn. The structure with its contents was destroyed, also the separator, the property of Mr. Archier Wannamaker. Other buildings were saved after strenuous efforts. The loss to Messrs. Bruce and Wannamaker is heavy. How the fire started is not known.

OBITUARY

LATE FRANK E. HANNAH

Many friends and neighbors were, Friday afternoon, in attendance at the funeral of the late Frank E. Hannah, which was held from his late residence, 17 Evans Street. The Rev. H. B. Neal conducted the service there and at the place of interment, in The Belleville cemetery. During the home service, Mrs. S. P. Hagerman sang most sweetly a solo, appropriate to the occasion.

The bearers were former fellow C.N.R. employes of the deceased. Messrs. G. Clarke, F. Ashley, G. Webb, W. Nell, H. Dougherty and J. Whalley.

Floral tributes included:

WEASEL CLUBBED TO DEATH BY HOUSEWIFE

Many Turkeys Fall Prey Before Dispatched

Mrs. Leonard Smith of the 2nd. concession of Thurlow, attacked a large, slinky weasel this week, with a stick as her only weapon.

Previously Mrs. Smith had lost two of her prize birds by the attacks of unknown marauders. Coopping them up in a small shed, she kept careful watch and was rewarded for her vigil on Friday morning when she heard a commotion where the birds were penned. Believing it was a fox, Mrs. Smith armed herself with a stout club and crept to the door quietly. Inside on the floor lay a turkey kicking its last. Pudend to its throat was a particularly large weasel. Upbeating cautiously with-in range of the unwary animal, she was able to get one solid swipe at the turkey killer, which finished its career on the spot.

DRAMA

"Merchants of Venice" Presented by Kingston Collegiate Students

In the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium last evening, pupils of Kingston Collegiate Institute gave a fine presentation of "The Merchant of Venice" under the direction of Charles A. Galen. The outstanding character study of the evening was that of the Shylock and the young man gave a performance that would have reflected credit in a mature and experienced actor.

The cast was well chosen and acted, their roles with dignity and understanding. Portia's part was charmingly and convincingly taken while Lorenzo was probably the best of the male actors with the exception of Shylock, the voice of the impetuous Lorenzo having splendid carrying power.

"The Merchant of Venice" is the play for study in matriculation forms this year and the group of players was brought to the city by the local Collegiate Literary Society to entertain and to assist the students in their studies. Several scenes were omitted but the principal speeches were given in a manner that will make the words have a new meaning for the pupils.

The costumes for the Grand Costume Studio were magnificent and in the dance scenes the graceful and colorings blended beautifully with the rich red of the stage's velvet hangings.

The intermissions were enlivened by the parade along the aisles of Albert College freshmen whose voluminous togas made them most amusing.

POLICE COURT

Charged with breaking, entering and theft, Bernard McQuaide of Oshawa was remanded for one week, without being asked to plead, when he appeared before Magistrate Mikel in Saturday morning's police court.

McQuaide was arrested at his home in Oshawa by the request of the local Provincial Police on information received by that department relating to a recent breaking in to North Hastings. McQuaide's arrest took place last Saturday. He was arrested by The Oshawa police and brought to Belleville by Provincial Constable Wickett of Sirling late Friday night.

Science Is Extending Average Span of Life An Extra Seven Years

Man Will Be At Height of His Power At 65, Through Developments In Chemistry of Nutrition, Accord ing To Professor

PROF. HENRY C. SHERMAN

By M.—O.—CHENOWETH
Central Press Canadian Writer

New York, Sept. 23.—The biblical version that the normal span of life shall be three score and ten is being changed by science is read three score and ten plus seven.

The extra seven years, it is asserted, will be added to the living period of the normal individual through the developments in the chemistry of nutrition, which will make humanity more sturdy as well as longer lived.

Researches have shown, according to Prof. Henry C. Sherman of Columbia university's chemistry department, that men and women are growing taller than their ancestors. Now, with the aid of the chemical knowledge in the nutritional processes of plant and animal life, the whole living scale of the human being permises to be altered.

Best at 65

With the expectation of life extended from 70, which heretofore has been regarded as normal, to 77, man will be at the height of his power in his chosen task at 65 instead of 58 years. Likewise the age at which it has been determined to be the most difficult to obtain employment in a new field, now placed at 45, will be 52.

Age, as a result, will yield less readily to youth, chemists believe. Furthermore, they state, while the women of more advanced years will rule in human affairs to a greater extent than previously.

The nutrition, or diet, experiments conducted by the chemists have been toward the improvement of the internal environment. This should form a bulwark against disease, Dr. Sherman says, and when passed on to succeeding generations, will extend the prime of life and delay senility.

More Powerful

"By providing this superior environment," Dr. Sherman states, "chemistry will make men and women more powerful constitutionally, if not larger, and aid in the development of muscular strength through increased participation in sports and right living.

"We are now learning that things to feed into the body in order that it may be helped to maintain a more constantly optimal chemical environment within, and we have reason to anticipate that such chemical improvement of the internal environment may be favorable to those developments of mind and spirit which are in some way linked with the higher health of the body.

Dr. Sherman regards the work in the protein chemistry of nutrition as the most striking experiments. The discoveries, he says, point the way to further scientific advances and in showing that proteins of different foods can supplement each other with efficiency and economy.

Effects of Dieting

Experiments conducted at Columbia with rat families have shown that rats have thrived in the twenty seventh generation on a uniform and adequate diet. Once this diet is changed, a deterioration is noted in the general nutritional condition of the rodents. Growth is more rapid and efficient, the death rate drops, and longevity increases, 10 per cent.

Enriching of the diet is obtained by increasing the proportion of so-called "protective" foods, such as milk, fruit, vegetables, and eggs, according to Professor Sherman. These supply 15 elements to human nourishment—oxygen, carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, calcium, phosphorus, potassium, sulphur, sodium, chlorine, magnesium, iron, iodine, copper and manganese.

"From now on" Dr. Sherman says, "nutrition can furnish to food economics a more certain and serviceable guidance than has ever before been available. This new knowledge will continue to become more and more effective."

EGGS ADVANCE TO 25 CTS DOZ
Dressed Fowl Also Went Higher In Large Market
A new season's record price for eggs was established at the Belleville market on Saturday when they sold as high as 25c a dozen. The sudden advance of the price of eggs also affected the price of dressed fowl and that product also advanced slightly in price. Butter prices remained stationary at two pounds for 75c, however.
Unquestionably the largest market of the season greeted the purchasing citizens when farm products were displayed in every available space on the market square with late comers being forced to erect booths on Pinnacle Street. The inside market was slightly larger also. Fine milk fed chickens sold for 60 to 75c a pair, while other smaller fryers brought from 50 to 60c a pair, according to their size. Individual dressed chickens of a large variety, sold from 60 to 90c each. Ducks were offered at 55 to 75c each. A fine display of home cooking was also to be seen.
The outside market proved a hive of industry and an increased amount of business seemed assured. Fine displays of fruits and vegetables adorned the market stalls, while many blooms of cut flowers and plants added considerably to its beauty. Potatoes sold at 50c a peck, beets, carrots, parsnips, radishes and celery all brought 5c a bunch with cauliflowers selling at 10 and 15c each. Pumpkins, marrows and green corn selling at cent cent and 10c each at the early market.
In the fruit line pears sold for 50c a peck, plums 50 and 65c a basket with Seedling grapes gaining selling at 30c a basket and imported grapes at 25c a basket. Many fine looking apples, most of the cooking variety, were also marketed. Many fine specimens of watermelons, selling from 5 to 35c each, were also to be seen. Canteloupes sold for the season's prevailing prices also.
On the south side of the market many fine looking porker pigs were on display and were offered at $3.00 a pair. Cord wood cut into stove lengths was also offered for sale.

HARVEST APPEAL MADE BY ARMY

For Past Half Century Salvationists Have Assisted Needy In City

The annual Harvest Festival appeal, made to the public by the Salvation Army, is now being conducted in the city by local Salvationists under the direction of Brigadier Bennett and Mrs. W. Martin.

For the past fifty-one years such an appeal has been made and it is now well known, that citizens need only an intimation that authorized collectors are appointed to the various streets of the city.

During the past three years of financial depression the Army's revenue has been seriously reduced to about one-third of the receipts of normal times, and the demands upon the treasury of the organization are much greater than ever. The local executive officers are therefore relying upon the citizens of Belleville and vicinity to do their very best for the cause that has stood by and served them for half a century in a social and spiritual work.

During the next ten days a citywide house-to-house canvass will be made and if any generous friends are missed by a collector, kindly phone Adjutant Martin, 603, or Mr. R. W. Brown, local treasurer, 1561.

Log Cutting, Drawing Contests, Softball Tourney, Clog Dancing Entertain Marmora Fair Crowd

All Competitions Arouse Enthusiasm of Spectators

GOOD RACING

Exhibits As Large As Other Years And Better Quality

Officials of the Marmora Agricultural Society have every reason to be proud of their efforts in providing a fair. The annual event took place on Thursday and Friday with the latter day predominating. A good program of events had been prepared and was carried out to the satisfaction of the large number of visitors who gathered upon the grounds on the afternoon of the second day. While the attendance was not quite as large as on some previous occasions it was nevertheless gratifying. Two special events attracted many who are interested in witnessing horses racing for supremacy. There were three softball games, log cutting, log cutting contest and a drawing contest for teams of horses hitched to a stone boat heavily laden with large boulders and cement bags. These all had a number of spectators. Another special feature was an entertainment on an elevated platform of Penn's Clover Rollers cowboys from Brussels, Ont., all members of which are artists in their line. Their musical selections were well received by all who gathered about the stand.

Exhibits.

The agricultural palace was the attraction of many especially the fair sex. Sewing and fancy work was prominent and competition was keen for prizes in the various classes. Fruit, vegetables, grains and flowers were to be seen arranged in an attractive manner. Apples were especially a feature there being no less than eighty plates of this fruit. Pears, plums and grapes were also shown in considerable quantities.

In another section of the main building were to be seen many crocks and rolls of butter, home-made cooking, dressed chickens and a fine array of canned fruit. Seventeen receptacles containing brown and white eggs were inspected by many. The display was one to be admired and favorable comments were numerous.

Horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry had their places on the grounds. The showing of cattle was large including Jerseys, Holsteins, Durhams, Herefords and Galloway, with Jerseys and Holsteins predominating. The entries of sheep and swine were not large. In the horses class some fine animals were exhibited including draught, general purpose, carriage or roadsters.

Lovers of fowl admired the poultry display and in this connection it may be stated that Mr. W. S. Shaw of Corbyville who captured a number of prizes at the Kingston show made a fine showing of various breeds. The exhibit as a whole compared most favorably with any fair that his been held so far this year.

Special Events.

In the log-sawing contest (prize for sawing log through the quickest with cross-cut saw, two men to saw) Maple Leaf Gardens and Jack Garneau, winners. Four entries in this contest.

Drawing contest—J. Clemens, T. Cooney, D. Veale.

Step Dancing — S. Palmatier, Harry Soft.

Fiddling — Chas. Campion, Marmora.

Dancing — Ten Green, Marmora, Allen Hubble, Havelock.

Soft Ball.

Three games of softball were played. Madoc defeated Havelock 15 to 6, Marmora defeated Havelock 15 to 0 and Madoc defeated Marmora. The battery for Madoc's first game was Ashley and Henderson; for Havelock Hill and Mattison, Carew, T. Moffatt.

The Races.

Two speeding events were on the program at the Marmora Fair on Friday and interest was manifest by a large number of spectators, who lined the track in the vicinity of the judge's stand. Mr. R. B. Orser of Cananoque was the starter filling the position to the satisfaction of all. Messrs. W. Lett and F. Johnston were the judges while George Wellman held the watch. The summary:

BRITAIN'S WOMAN ANNOUNCER

"The tea-time music today," a cooing voice pronounces in casual and well-bred accents, "comes to us from the Hotel Metropole, London, and is the Palm Court Orchestra playing a programme."

Ears all over England and Scotland are drinking in her tones, for the debut of the United Kingdom's first woman radio announcer is an event of keen popular and artistic interest. Critics cock their heads to catch her rendering of the names of foreign composers and their works.

"And very properly are the titles spoken," decides a writer in the London News-Chronicle, reporting the first station announcements of Miss. Giles Borrett, whose "golden voice" is to earn her, for a "few words daily, the modest, depression scale salary of £4 per week—about $2,500 in the days of the gold standard.

The listeners include many American visitors, and some of them comment on the refreshing unaffectedness of the English woman's radio presence, in contrast with what one of them calls the "unctuous bedside manner" of America's favorite radio announcers. The News-Chronicle account runs on:

"Talkon," that means "in secret," says the Voice confidingly, in speaking to us of a gipsy melody. And to the conservative ear how reassuring to hear it say 'Vairdee,' and tell us that the orchestra will then play 'Vairdee.'

"The lady announcer, ladies and gentlemen!

"And very nice, too!"

Then we are told what the music critic of The News-Chronicle thought of Mrs. Borrett's first performance:

"A promising start, no purpose. The natural quality is of the kind most pleasing in a woman—namely, that which suggests a mezzo-soprano voice.

"Her pronouncement was unhesitating but unhurried, moved easily, and very confidently between the extremes of innocuous and affected. Both styles are to be removed by the steam-roller of standard speech; this will serve admirably as the new model; for it has the art which conceals art. Her age, vocalization, correctly pitched, pleasing in its cadency, yet free from pedantic exaggeration."

Her next appearance in the near future would be the broadcasting of news bulletins, the public was told, and meanwhile another critic was quoted thus:

"Cool, reassuring, commanding —such was my impression of the new woman announcer.

"Her tone was authoritative, crisp and clear. There was never a vestige of hesitation. No 'ers,' no gasps or breathings.

"The pronunciation was faultless and rural. No trace of the 'refained' accent."

JAPAN'S FOUR BABIES A MINUTE

Nippon's population is increasing at the rate of four babies a minute, according to the Literary Digest which reports that Japanese births last year totalled 2,182,743. This means, according to vital statistics published by the Statistical Bureau of the Imperial Cabinet, an average of 249 births in an hour, day in and out. There were 80,737 more births than deaths during the previous year. At the same time, the report assures us, Japan enjoyed the lowest death-rate since the early days of the Mikado of Meiji (1852-1912). The net increase of population that is the surplus of births over deaths, now attains the unprecedented figure of 1,007,868. Japan's population, in other words, increased by 115 per average hour.

These startling figures act as a red flag of danger to the Japanese press. The Home Office has set up a commission for the study of the population problem. National and international implications of the babies crowding into the world at the head-long rate of four per minute are expressed by Tokyo's independent Jiji Shimpo:

"The question is often asked, what can Japan do to solve her population problems? In the first place, Japan desires to obtain natural resources and sales markets in foreign countries. Emigration is another important outlet, but little foreign sympathy is shown in this connection, both the United States and Australia, geographically the most natural places for Japanese emigration, having virtually closed their doors to all members of the Japanese Empire.

"Under existing circumstances, Brazil offers the greatest possibility for Japanese emigration, but even here the total number of annual emigrants stipulated by treaty amounts to no more than 50,000. More recently, Manchukuo has become another important possibility, but here factors are more complicated on account of cheap Chinese competition and the special adaptability of Korean emigrants to the conditions of this territory."

Let us carefully consider those good qualities wherein our enemies excel us, and endeavour to excel them by avoiding what is faulty, and imitating what is excellent in them.—Plutarch.

You demand universal suffrage. — I demand universal education to go with it.—W. E. Forster.

EVEN AS THE SED

Shut far away from golden sun,
Green branch where once it grew,
No whisper as the singing wind
And all glad things it knew,
Does the seed fret when trodden down
Beneath the heavy earth,
Within the silent dark to brave
The mystery of birth?

In patience there it lies in wait
Until life's germ bursts through
The bars of that small prison-house
To struggle forth anew.
One tiny shoot to brave the cold,
The maze of Stygian night
And yet unfailingly it takes
The path that leads to light!

After the pain of chill and dark,
The journey drear and long,
How glorious is the sun,
The world of warmth and song!
Even as the seed, which has no fear
Of all it must endure,
So, soul, at humble end as strong;
Your growth will be as sure.

ROTARY IS TAKING PART in the Cuban revolution, having been accepted as mediators between the contending factions. Rotarians have been successful in maintaining a truce between the party in power and the party which seeks to oust the president and his advisers from the Palace. This is significant of the trend of the times and the large part being taken in public affairs by Rotarians. Internationally Rotary's "Sixth Object" is to preserve peace between all nations, promote international fellowship and good will, and encourage the spirit of Rotary that is good effect in various disputes between nations, particularly in South America, where revolutions are always simmering and where neighboring nations often fly at each other's throats without much pretext or warning. That Rotary's good offices should be accepted and the advice of Cuban Rotarians acted upon is a good augury for the peaceful settlement of national disputes in future, and adds one more strong link against the possibility of war with all its attendant horrors.

SKILL AND LUCK AT GOLF

Probably there is a bit of luck involved in making holes in one, but luck is not all of it by any means. Taking it by and large, it is the better-than-average golfers who make them. As A. C. Gregson explains it in Country Life, the better the golfer, the better the chance of reaching the green on the first stroke, and the better the chance of the ball actually going into the cup. Mr. Gregson himself, a veteran of thirty-seven years on the links, has 7 one shots to his credit—not a record, but surely better than average. « For more spectacular feats he points to the Field Golf Club Herd, with eighteen holes in one to his credit, J. T. Smillie and James Braid, with thirteen each, and W. Hubert Fiowd with twelve. All of these players are in the habit of playing the short hole.

The hotel guest was thoroughly annoyed. People were running backward and forward along the verandah making a terrible noise. So he took the telephone and spoke to the manager's office.

"I can't get to sleep with all this noise going on," he complained angrily.

"I'm sorry sir," replied the clerk, "but I'm afraid we cant control the movements of the fire brigade."

Letters to The Editor

YOUNG BELLEVILLE SPEAKS

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir—Just a word or two about the rink discussion. It is important to know what opinion young Belleville holds on the desirability of the non-opening of the Arena Rink this season.

A group of young lads from five years old to ten were discussing the question. One said:

"Well, there'll be no skating or hockey in the Arena Rink this winter."

Chorus or why? wherefore? and all the usual vocal excitement, which a group of young Bellevillians are capable of.

Said a lad of seven:

"Just let jhem try and close the rink, that's all."

So there you have it—if the ice plant is taken out and the rink closed Young Belleville will have to be reckoned with.

Open air civic rinks in a normal winter season are a good thing, but any kind of service—that sum would pay the interest on a sum sufficient to keep the arena rink in operation.

"DADDY LONGLEGS."

Mr. Editor:

Re the Skating Rink. Let the ice plant people have the plant. Then she 'the rink nine months of the year and the Community Centre now have to take the boiling sun and winter and late spring cold. We could use the rink from December 15th to March fifteenth, which is only four weeks less than we get for the new grandiose Community Centre all the time then the burden of the rink for the ice plant people and their marketing is done during January, February and March. The other nine months the rink effort it would be for the farmers and gardeners and the small people, so there is a chance to have some comfort, no doubt they would be very grateful for the privilege so far and fear as having the best market accommodation anywhere.

Yours,
D. H. ACKERILL, V.S.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES
OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

SEPTEMBER 22 1913

At a meeting of the Baptist Young People's Union in Victoria Ave. Baptist Church, Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, superintendent of the Sunday school, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on "Lessons from Forest and Field."

Surrounding mills in this city this afternoon commemorated the place. Mr. Frederick Sweency, foreman of the night shift yesterday was recently married and the staff to mark the event and show their appreciation of his efforts, got busy him with a set of solid silver knives and forks. As evidence that one of the recipient by dress was not to the bridegroom was Mr. John Jones and the presentation was made by Mr. James E. Smith.

Mr O. J. Most of Toronto, is spending a few days here with his brother, Mr. C. W. Most, Reid Street.

Mr. W. H. Adams, accompanied by Mr. J. Hall, all of Montreal, is on a fishing trip down the bay in quest of lunge.

30 YEARS AGO

SEPTEMBER 23, 1903

Some time during last night Mr. Henry Taylor's store near the G.T.R. station and the office in the new brick block adjoining were broken into. Nothing was taken from the freight shed although it was thoroughly ransacked. In Mr. Taylor's store $8.00 was taken from the safe. The police are investigated. also some tobacco and cuff buttons. The police are investigating the affair.

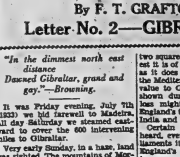
The Professional and Amateur Photographer, the leading journal of the profession in America, contains a reference to the competition which was held recently under its auspices. In the professional class the second prize of $13 was awarded to Mr. Clark J. Smith of this city.

Mr. George W. Griffith has purchased the Belleville Steam Laundry from Mr. Clarence Brown. Mr Griffith has been closely identified with the Kilties as the eastern States representative for over three years. The headquarters of the big touring organization will continue to be in Belleville with office on Pinnacle Street. Mr. T. F. J. Power will remain with Mr. Griffith as tour manager. Mr. Griffith will remain in Belleville and devote himself to other business interests.

A Mediterranean Pilgrimage
—or—
Sights and Scenes About the Great Middle Sea
By F. T. GRAFTON
Letter No. 2—GIBRALTAR

"In the dimmest north east distance
Dawned Gibraltar, grand and gay."—Browning.

It was Friday evening, July 7th (1933) at 8 o'clock when we left Algiers. All day Saturday we steamed eastward to cover the 600 intervening miles to Gibraltar.



Very early Sunday, in a haze, land was sighted. The mountains of Morocco (Africa) loomed through our portholes, while the shores of Spain, of Portugal, and later of Spain, guarded our left as we skirted the southern coast of Europe. We sailed on through the gap between the Pillars of Hercules, the "Gateway to Victory" for here the Battle of Trafalgar was fought and won by Nelson in 1805 by the British navy. Then on through the historic waters of the Straits of Hercules", the western bridge by which the Moslem hordes crossed in the seventh century from Africa into Spain and Europe. Almost directly ahead, the Rock of Gibraltar, the "Rock of Ages" to Britishers, are often maintained. The Rock is honeycombed with miles of tunnels, with rocky batteries and its sides up to its 1400 Moroccan shore, with its mighty guns and its 1,396 feet of solid rock. Gibraltar is the key to the Mediterranean. Its guns and bugles all confirm the fact that here is the world's mightiest stronghold.

But let us go ashore. On Sunday morning and at 9 a.m. we board the tender and are taken to the navy jetty at whose further end we pass through the gate and are at once on the main street, which even on Sunday presents a cosmopolitan appearance. The Barbary Moors, with their snow-white turbans, the Arabs in their picturesque dress, the Jews in yellow slippers, the Highland soldiers in kilts, the Spanish Senoritas, Jews in gabardines, Turks in their picturesque fezzes, Britishers with a mingling of Spaniards, Portuguese, Africans, Maltese, Levantines, and picturesque Arab beauties — all serve to make a bizarre and memorable picture. The people are thronging the streets on a sandy beach and to court "the shadow of a great rock in a weary land".

On the eastern slope of the rock above the drive were apparently acres of shot metal, and securing arms of different sizes. Many of these drains and pipes are conducted into many and well known reservoirs within its spacious chest to provide against sieges as well as a source of fresh water supply in time of siege or emergency.

Our rock carved and curved driveway terminates just below where Gibraltar's signal station. None but British officials are permitted to go to the top. Near it is St. Michael's Cave—a vast circular chamber with stalactite columns and lofty arches. In it is a black abyss of unknown depth. Some years since it was used by south of two English officers who accidentally fell into it. Some assert that from the bottom of this fathomless gulf—if it has a bottom—a subterranean passage leads to Africa.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK

By R. J. Scott

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was going the crossword puzzle and pop was smoking and reading the paper. It was Saturday afternoon and the end of my nose with a stump out in front of it, and how lickish I was. Making me sneeze, and ma said, there I go again, and how I'm catching a cold, and I'm not surprised. Do you know what happened today? Why several of the other boys went into the Martins house and broke in and then by got out of the rain, and Mrs. Martin came home all soaked to the skin through the paving wet and it having been a cold time for experiments I'm going to call up that woman and just squarely give her a piece of my mind, and how dare, or perhaps on 2nd thawts it would do more good if you was to go and see the father, Willyum, and have it out face to face, she said.

Well, yes gosh, wait a minut, let's make a deal. I'll go and have conversation with the old of our private witness, pop said. Meening me, and he said, I'll allow nobody to impose on this inhuman wholesale ejection of—

Sir? I said, and pop said, Give him here. So I went and told the privates of the defendents at the time of the accident, Official, Sir, and I mite say, what were you boys doing when you got chucked out? he said.

Well, we wasn't going much, he said, we was just in a little bull lite and I was the bull and Skinny was the matador and Sam and the rest of the fellows was pickadors and some was the Spanish audients yelling and cheering, and after that we had a little circus and pertended we was a troop of Arab horsemen, and Mrs. Martin made us all go home in the rain.

She should of termed the hose rite on you herself, yes gods pop said, and he said, There's certeny 2 sides to that story.

Which there was.

...nadian Amateur Champ Coming Star in Golf World

Nineteen-Year-Old "Scottie" Campbell, Winner at Vancouver Is Steady Shot-Maker

By Central Press Canadian.

For years, Portland, Ore., with Ik Frank Dolp, Dr. O. F. Willing, Dean Moe and other stars, dominated the Pacific Northwest links field.

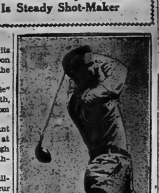
But sturdy little Albert "Scottie" Campbell, 19-year-old Seattle youth, has taken most of the thunder from the Rose City this year.

Campbell won his first important golf tournament this summer at Victoria, B.C. when he went through a fast field to cop the Pacific Northwest amateur title.

He followed this up with a thrilling victory in the Canadian amateur championships the following week at Vancouver, B.C.

Campbell was amateur medalist in the state open tournament at Spokane. His one failure was the public links tournament at Portland. The result was the last week's clip of the experts.

His game right back to about 140 by Dolp's 138 in the qualifying tournament a week later.



Now he's in the United States National amateur.

Campbell is a former caddie and has never taken a golf lesson in his young life. He learned his golf by watching others and asking questions—and four hours of practice nearly every day. He's a student at the University of Washington.

Rather short in stature, stockily built, with good hands, Campbell is blessed with keen eyesight, his fairly long woods, his irons are dependable and his putting, when hot, is as good as any.

But the best part of his game is, that what he has in abundance is strength, he has no bad weaknesses, and his woods for 175 a shade and at seldom in trouble. Lack of experience is his one big failure, sturdily

Along with Campbell in bringing the golf crown back to Seattle is Harry Civan, another youngster. Civan, who has been the one to defeat to golf that Campbell does, but many links experts believe he has the sounder game of the two. Mr. Picobac Discusses Fisherman's Habits

Mr. Picobac's duties as an investigator of pipe smoking conditions in Eastern Canada had finally brought him to the harbour of Saint John, N.B. Here he encountered a Bay of Fundy Lobster Fisherman seated on a dock-side "nigger-head" smoking a cold pipe and gazing at the ebbing tide.

"I see you have one of my regular habits," exclaimed Mr. Picobac, genially.

"And which of your regular habits is that?"

"Letting my pipe go out."

"I've run out of tobacco," explained the fisherman.

"Allow me," said Mr. Picobac extending his handy pocket tin of Picobac with old-world politeness.

"The pick of Canada's Burley crop, grown in sunny southern Ontario."

"It's a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke," quoted the fisherman with a grin, as he helped himself liberally. "Picobac is another one of my regular habits".

Mr. Picobac having finished his tour of the East, will now journey to the far West. He finds Picobac makes friends everywhere. Try it yourself. Get a tin to-day. On sale where tobacco is sold.

WESTERN IS WEAK STARS GRADUATE BREEN TO REBUILD

Lose Triple-Threat Man In Patterson, Who Will Play For Barnin Imperials

By Central Press Canadian

Coach Joe Breen will pull together candidates for the 1933 University of Western Ontario inter-collegiate rugby football team. That gathering will signal the commencement of a heavy assignment for the popular mentor of the Mustangs and the charges that will be called on to plug the big gaps left proving by the departure of outstanding performers of the 1932 team.

Frank Gnidec (home to you since his graduation last spring), will assist Breen in the moulding together of Western's pigskin hordes. The chore will not be a new one for the broad-shouldered athlete who was regarded as the outstanding lineman in Inter-Collegiate ranks four years ago.

The job of the western coaching staff will be to find new material to fill the holes left by the graduation of nearly a dozen of last year's squad. With characteristic optimism Coach Breen hopes to accomplish the feat satisfactorily.

Breen's first concern will be to discover a versatile backfielder to replace Gordon Patterson, his triple-threat ace of the past two years. Injuries handicapped Patterson's play during the later part of the 1932 campaign, but the Mustangs were never stronger with him in the line-up in his crippled state than when he rode the bench. Lyle McKay, clever outside winger, and Jack McLachlan, Schnarr and Thompson are others from the 1932 list.

Gordon Awde, a promising backfielder who made good his last season, is the only experienced player again available. Boyner Stark, Port Colborne flash, was front for the Mustang intermediates. Blessed with speed and punting ability, Stark may fill Patterson's shoes. Walter Pitman, another intermediate graduate, is a good backfield prospect. Ken Mitchell, well known London golfer, who was with the intermediate squad in 1932. On the strength of his showing before launching their inter-collegiate campaign against Queen's University at Kingston on October 7. They entertain Varsity's Blues on the next O.R.F.U. champions here on Saturday, September 23 and the following week journey to Toronto for a session with the Tigers, Dominion title-holders.

U. S. TENNIS ASSOC. UPHOLDS DEFAULT BY MRS. MOODY

Say Player Has Right To Drop Out If Physically Unfit

By FAT ROBINSON

Central Press Canadian Writer

Often the butt of jibe and jest, the United States Lawn Tennis Association came to the rescue of the fair sex yesterday by banning when it ruled Mrs. Helen Moody would be out of the middle of her match with Mrs. Josephine Cucciolo and some other time when a lady once demanded the right to the tennis solons' ear to change the rules to accept no default unless the player is dead.

Fauljer cap Helen Wills Moody once quit a match because of illness.

One of the members of the rules committee was dominating the session's deliberations, says that the rules will not be amended and for the present Mrs. Moody is within self in agreement with the U. S. L. T. A.

Defaulting is a matter of personal right as a matter of fact default rests entirely with the player.

Being an amateur, the player is not paid to play and can't be fined and there is no contract to play as there would be in the case of professionals.

Therefore, regardless of what one may think of the ethics of defaulting, there just can be no way of forcing a player to continue against his or her will. To try to enforce it, they feel, would, if made, would be folly.

Tennis fans who lay their money on the line to see a promised match have a right to demand that the match is not played out. It would seem that the tennis people should (1) either refund all or part of the admission or (2) make it plain to purchasers of a ticket that any or all of the players may default if they feel so inclined.

The writer has no fault to find with Mrs. Moody in defaulting the match with Miss Jacobs. Only she can know how well or how ill she felt at the time. Had she been ill, it would have been better had she quit at the end of the second set rather than when trailing in the middle of the third.

Spying on Sports

TWO IMPORTANT CHANGES, and two only, in the rules attract the attention of football experts, coaches, players and the enthusiast fans as the autumnal sport launches itself into the 1933 season.

This year the code of football regulations has undergone less change than in most previous seasons. However, the changes made are expected to prove important.

Most pigskin followers were satisfied when the football fathers decided to keep gridiron rules for 1933 much the same as they were in 1932. There has been a decided opposition to the constant revision of the game's code, based on the belief that from year to year football has been not so much an individual game as a succession of games which closely resembled each other.

However, football is a sport in which there is a great deal of physical contact between opposing sides and most of the ruling in recent years have been adopted to prevent abuse and to protect the player.

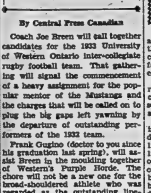
ONE NEW RULE may change offensive tactics. The other new rule is designed to protect one of the players from injury.

The first change, by the game, calls for the ball to be brought in from the sidelines to a spot 10 yards from the nearest scrimmage line if the ball becomes dead within 10 yards of the sideline.



Under this rule a quarterback will be able to call a play just as last season, is the only experienced player again available. Boyner Stark, Port Colborne flash, was front for the Mustang intermediates. Blessed with speed and punting ability, Stark may fill Patterson's shoes. Walter Pitman, another intermediate graduate, is a good backfield prospect. Ken Mitchell, well known London golfer, who was with the intermediate squad in 1932. On the strength of his showing before launching their inter-collegiate campaign against Queen's University at Kingston on October 7. They entertain Varsity's Blues on the next O.R.F.U. champions here on Saturday, September 23 and the following week journey to Toronto for a session with the Tigers, Dominion title-holders.

THE NEW RULING on clipping states no player (save the ball carrier) may block from behind. In addition the penalty is made severer, the latter provision being regarded by many followers of the game as fortunate as now officials need not be so reluctant in calling the infraction.

Therefore the officials naturally hesitated to enforce the stiff clipping penalty on a team thinking they were absolutely certain of the violation. Some experts profess to see a decided advantage accruing due to the new clipping rule, especially in forward pass attacks, as the latter offensive has a better chance of keeping its line intact.

Rule makers and others interested in the game are now pretty much agreed that football as it is played today is just about the best possible game of its type which human ingenuity can devise. Of course, they will always be some change, from season to season, in the rules. That's natural in a sport in which largely of the success of a player plays such a large

DROPPING LEFT SHOULDER BACKSWING WILL SPOIL SHOT

ALEX MORRISON says:

There's no quicker way to spoil your golf shot than by dropping your left shoulder as you take the club away from the ball.

Whatever balance you may have had in your starting position is upset. It has a tendency to throw your weight falls to shift to your right leg. And your entire left side is thrown out of balance, making it difficult to keep your head still during the up-swing. Without these things you cannot make a truly successful swing.

It may feel a bit strange to you at first but a little lifting of your left shoulder instead of a dropping motion at the start of your swing, will help you to maintain your balance and greatly increase your chance of executing the correct swing.

As you shift your weight toward the right feel that you are lifting your left shoulder.

CURRENT SPORT

With the winning of the Central Park post-season league by the Colonel Flats on Thursday night, the tid was firmly clapped on local softball activities for 1933. With the ringing down of the soft-ball curtain we would like to remind the fans of the rapid progress that non's softball enjoyed in Belleville following the opening of the new park on the Coleman Flats.

Some time ago it was unofficially announced that the city council would completely renovate the Coleman Flats diamond as a relief measure this fall. With the new park proposal of Jerick's Island maybe the Coleman Flat project will be forgotten, however. Regardless of which is the question of who is taken over the Coleman Flats, we feel assured, that the locale of all playing field for next year should be changed considerably before any other playing season rolls around.

During twilight games this past season the right and centre fielders, as well as the first baseman, were all looking directly into the sun rays. If a new park is to be the outcome of Coleman Flats, then we have every reason to believe, that it will, those responsible for such a project should lay their plans so as to have a perfectly laid out diamond, one that runs east to the sun. Then again the diamond could be enlarged so as to accommodate the extra clubs occasionally also. In past years the Coleman Flats diamond has been the home of more than one local baseball club and seems to be in a rather central location for a park. The recently dubbed manicker, "Central Park" should be a fitting name for the new location, we'd suggest.

After looking the situation over well it has been suggested to us, that the diamond be moved with the home plate being placed in the vicinity of where the right fielder played during the past season. By so doing the sun would never shine into the eyes of a fielder. Then by turning the base lines slightly southward neither batter would be affected by the blinding rays of the sun.

After considerable long distance telephoning and wiring Manager Rover of the Picton Intermediates finally completed arrangements last night to play the intermediate O.B.A.A. "B" series, semi-finals between Falconbridge and Picton Edward County crew. All arrangements for the first two game were completed over the telephone with the O.B.A.A. later giving their sanction. Picton play at Falconbridge on Monday afternoon next with the return game being played at Picton next Saturday.

Manager Tanboyer, who has been recently celebrating the Jewish New Year in Belleville along with the local Jewish citizenry, announced last night, that he intended leaving for the "metrikulated" early Sunday morning. The entire Picker roster will make the trip. The club will likely stay over night at Sudbury, continuing on their jaunt northward on Monday morning. We believe that the Falconbridge Sudbury to Falconbridge is somewhat like that of 200 miles. "Just a nice little Sunday ride after breakfast," stated John.

Yesterday the Kingston Penies passed through Belleville enroute to St. Thomas, where they meet on "Top Cats" in the first game of the senior O.B.A.A. final playoffs. In this afternoon, in all probability each club will start their new hurler with Jamieson pitching for Kingston and "Lefty" Weeks for the home team. The return game is being played at Kingston next Wednesday.

With visions of a senior O.B.A.A. championship in their Kingston is all baseball these days. Even over at Queen's University they dispensed with football activities when the Ponies are at home.

Following Wednesday's win over the Toronto Riverside Grads the Kingston press carried the following: "Jamieson's masterful curb blowings crown the championship! We've got the definitive Ontario champions right here and this time next week the Ponies ought to be crowned as the definitive baseball world!"

Harold Mills, manager of the Belleville Nationals, and one of the most prominent coaches who ever beefed at a raw one, was as thrilled as anyone with the win. When Compeau hit a double in the ninth, "Percy" said that Jake had a pretty good arm after all. And maybe the old boy doesn't know his Spalding!"

Bowlers Will be Delighted With Changes Made at Alleys

Alleys Repaired And Room Entirely Redecorated

When the indoor bowling season opens on Monday, the maple toppers of the city will have a new home for their activities due to the untiring efforts of Frank Domenico, proprietor of the alleys. The belief that bowling is a healthful recreation and that it should have decided improvements to keep pace with its surroundings, the owner of the alleys has spared no expense in giving the habitues one of the finest rooms in the Province.

Invited by Bert Lee "Slub" Barrett to have a look at the improvements made during the past few months, a reporter of the Ontario Intelligencer journeyed upstairs yesterday afternoon and was more than surprised at the transformation that had taken place. Everybody was, would have to have the room in also shape for the official opening on Monday night but Bert Domenico and Bert Barrett took time off to explain what had actually taken place. The whole building has received a coat of paint, which in itself is a decided improvement but the greatest improvement has been made on the alleys. Over 5,000 feet of Douglas maple and Georgia pine has been installed and the alleys are as fine as they can be made. They have all been sanded and surfaced with three coats of alley shellac and a coat of polishing oil. The curve ball should be a thing of the past.

Runways Levelled

The runways have been levelled and new reversible pit mats have been added to the equipment. There are also special construction preventing the balls from becoming dirty and thus saving the alleys, making them out of line. The dirt from the ball is transferred to the mat and this dirt finds its way through the mat, being deposited on the floor, where it can be taken up each day. The front part of the alleys has also been sanded and places, where the floor was grooved has been repaired giving perfect runways for the bowler who likes to take a running shot. Both men and women alleys have been catered to, the women's rest room receiving special attention, being newly redecorated and furniture added. The men's quarters are on the same floor and a welcome addition since before this year none existed.

This is the twelfth season for Mr. Domenico as owner of the alleys and they have always been a place where everyone is made welcome and able to enjoy sport under favorable conditions. Mr. Barrett, the genial manager will always greet one with a smile and assist in every way possible to your comfort. If you are not a bowler, but bowlers are especially requested, make a trip up to the alleys on Monday night and for a short time be the guests of Mr. Domenico and Mr. Barrett. It is expected that the league season will soon open and it is understood many of the bowlers of other years are coming back into the game and a real good season is anticipated.

Attention Bowlers

Reopening of the Recreation Bowling Alleys, Monday, Sept. 25th. All Alleys have been newly overhauled and refinished and interior all redecorated. In keeping in line with other recreations we have decided to reduce our bowling to 10 cents a game for everybody and anytime.

Buffalo Bisons Capture Loop Title from Rochester Easily

Finish But Fourth In Regular Season's Play

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 23 (CP) — Buffalo's Bisons are 1933 champions of the International League.

The Herd, guided by Ray Schalk last night climaxed a surprising march through the first title playoff series in the history of the league with a crushing 8-1 defeat of Rochester's Red Wings to win the pennant and qualify for the Governor's cup, emblematic of the American Association, in the Little World series which opens tomorrow in the Ohio City.

Fourth from the top at the end of the regular season's play and lightly regarded in the pre-playoff reckoning, the Bisons first gained recognition in their belated bid for fame by walloping Baltimore second place club, in the opening playoff.

Then, apparently having found their batting eyes, they blasted Rochester's pitchers all over the premises to win four out of six games in the final series, three of the victories coming in order in their own battle pit after they had departed Rochester one down in the Red Wings.

Rochester had gained the final playoff by beating Newark, which finished first in the regular campaign.

The Bisons roared on toward Ohio and the Little World Series today with the sting of Buffalo's jibe of Ollie Carnegie, Leo Koenecke, Charlie Berger, Mulleavy all in their ears. It was this trio, coupled by the steady pitching of southpaw Charlie Perkins, which enabled them to clinch the fourth and final game last night.

Carnegie pounded out a home run and double, which accounted for five runs. Koenecke turned in three doubles and a single and Mulleavy was credited with three single base blows.

Canada's Pro Rugby

Canada is to have professional football, this fall, in Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal. Many professional athletes, both Canadian and American, are reported signed to the various teams, including Charlie and Lionel Conacher of hockey fame, and several ex-Varsity players.

The new pastime will not operate under the ordinary Canadian rugby football rules, but will draw up a new set, with which they hope to convince the public that Canada needs more open football.

They plan to open out the interference, thus strengthening the attack, and weakening the defence.

The game will be a cross between the present Canadian game and that played in the United States.

SEVENTEEN HEAD OF CATTLE DESTROYED

Loss Estimated At $12,000 As Two Barns Burn

Caledonia, Ont., Sept. 22.—(CP)—An estimated loss of $12,000 only partly covered by insurance, was caused by fire of undetermined origin that today wiped out two barns and a pig shed with the season's crop, 17 cattle, nearly 100 pigs and some poultry on Thomas Mickelcrig's farm near here.

The flames were noticed coming from the upper part of the barns and when Caledonia and Cayuga firemen arrived shortly after they found the fire had progressed so fast it was impossible to halt the blaze. The farm dwelling nearby was saved, however.

Brush Gives A Sheen to The Hair

Beauty Seeker Must Not Neglect This Daily Grooming

(By HELEN FOULFOIT)

When the hair brush is used vigorously enough to give a pull at the roots of the hair, it is beneficial to the growth. Every hair clasps a papilla from which it gets food, drink and lodgings, and the papilla is stimulated by the pulling.

Brushing brings a gloss, removes dandruff and dust, but brush must be scrupulously clean, washed twice a week. The best method of brushing is from the crown of the head toward the back, front and sides; that's the way the hair grows naturally. Brushing away from the forehead hardens tender skin and furrows.

The crown method of grooming saves the finger wave, which is some thing that, every money flinger has to consider.

Advice to the Lovelorn

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Sweet Sixteen Too Young to Marry

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 16 and I am keeping company with a young man of 26. We are very fond of each other, but there is a certain person who objects, that I am too young, and who is trying to come between us.

Anxious

I see no objections to your having occasional dates with a credible young man of 24, but if you're considering marrying him, I like that "certain person", think you're too young.

Our grandmothers used to marry at 16 and get away with it, too. But conditions today have changed so materially that it's better for a girl to be older than 18 before she assumes the responsibilities of a married woman.

They Want to Run Away and Get Married

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are a couple who care a lot for each other and would like to get married, but we haven't the money just now to have a nice wedding. We are so much in love that it seems foolish to wait until we are financially prepared to have a conventional ceremony. Our plan is to run away and get married without much ado.

His salary right now is just enough for us to live on. We want you to give us some advice as to what we should do. We want to do it right. Thank you.

Freddie and Fred

Please don't "run away"; just walk. That is, tell your nearest relatives that you intend to marry on a certain date, then get married without the usual fuss and feathers.

Many people are doing just that in these days when every one is more or less hard up. In fact, elaborate weddings are rather out of style at present. The last bachelor Vanderbilt had the simplest of ceremonies, and Lady Astor's daughter had a quiet wedding in a village church. So you see you'll only be keeping up with the Joneses.

Fears Bad Temper

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of 16 and need some advice badly.

I have a vile temper, which I've tried to conquer but can't, and when I'm getting along fine, my mother and sister start nagging and picking on me, and I flare up and then again. My temper makes me like an outcast in the family.

I'm going to marry a very fine man and I wonder if I ought to give him up now, rather than to make him unhappy with my temper after we are married. I love him so much that I'm willing to give him up, but I'm sorry. Please advise me. Please advise me.

Flora

Someone has said that a realization of a fault was more than half the battle in conquering it. So you see, my dear, your battle is already half won.

I would rather have you tell me that you're going to marry the man, instead of contemplating marriage to ward the back, front and sides; that's the way the hair grows naturally. Brushing away from the forehead hardens tender skin and furrows.

The crown method of grooming saves the finger wave, which is some thing that, every money flinger has to consider.

THE GOLD HUNT will lead you to the costume jewelry section to find gold necklaces and bracelets to go with the new sleek black dresses. Smart is a new necklace of large jet-black-shaped gold beads alternated with smoky topaz, and there are bracelet and earrings to match.

OUT OF THE FAMILY ALBUM steps the dress of black faille. This material is used for a delightful evening frock cut with a long tubular silhouette and having a broad hem of mildly massed crystal beads that gives the otherwise simple dress a gala look.

A GOOD PAIR are the shoes and handbag which this year are frequently offered in ensemble. A new set for afternoon in town consists of a black antelope shoe with narrow gold pumps and tiny gold buckles —the bag of antelope having the same decorations. Nice to use with smart afternoon or informal evening things.

NO BETTER FISHING

There is no better fishing country than Ontario believes Hon. J. D. Affleck, well known English, sportsman who has fished and hunted in many countries. She sailed from Quebec for home in London with four fine souvenirs of her first fishing trips to this country.

They were all squared-tailed speckled trout, the largest specimen weighing eight pounds; one came and were mounted in special cases by Mrs. Affleck had set up in her stateroom on the liner. They were caught in the Nipigon district, she said. Next year she hopes to come back and do some more fishing in Canada.

Is your appetite finicky?

Here is the tonic that doctors in 52 countries prescribe

Do you sit at the table and toy with your food? Do you desire only very sour or very sweet foods? Are you "picky" at meal-time, rejecting the nourishing foods that your body needs?

If so, you probably have a "nervous stomach," the direct result of a ragged, run-down or impoverished nervous system, which often results in malnutrition and anaemia.

Restore your lost appetite with Fellows' Syrup. It will improve your digestion, increase energy and vitality, and will make eating a pleasure. Calcium, iron, phosphorous, quinine, sodium, potassium and manganese—the very elements your system needs—are scientifically compounded in this world-famous tonic. At your dealer's! Two sizes.

INFANTS AND THEIR CARE IN THIS AGE

Family Pocketbook Does Not Require To Be Stretched

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Assuming that the expectant mother has already gone to a qualified physician and is following his directions to the letter, what else should she think of?

Perhaps the most important consideration relates to whether or not she should have her baby at home or in a hospital.

I realize that many individuals still have a reluctance about entering a hospital for any purpose whatsoever, probably the hospital atmosphere seems so serious that it is a trifle alarming. Yet surely no woman could be taken care of more efficiently than there, what with the doctors and nurses constantly in attendance. Furthermore, if any emergency should arise during childbirth at a hospital the chances of its becoming a serious problem are slim.

But, of course, the family pocketbook cannot always be stretched to include hospital care, or even a nurse at home, whether trained or "practical". Then at least the services of a capable woman friend should be enlisted, and it is desirable that she remain with the patient a few days before as well as a week or longer after the arrival of the baby.

Always select the cheeriest, sunniest and best ventilated room for the expectant mother. Simple furniture, rugs rather than wall-to-wall carpets, a metal instead of a wooden bed, and a firm mattress of high, are ideal. The number of decorative knickknacks should be reduced to a minimum, although it is highly important that the general tone of the room be pleasing as well as restful to the nerves.

Plenty of towels, sheets and pillow cases should be ready for the occasion. In addition twenty yards of sterile gauze, two yards of heavy muslin for binders, several pounds of sterile cotton, two rolls of adhesive tape (wide and narrow), a bed pan and a clinical thermometer, as well as olive oil, cold cream and the like are necessary.

Regarding the layette for the baby, this may be as fine and as extravagant as one wishes, and most expectant mothers have a lot of fun preparing for it with their own hands months in advance. Certain articles, however, are indispensable. The one recommended by Dr. Holt, of Columbia University, seems to fit the requirements perfectly.

1. Three to six half-wool, double breasted undershirts.

2. Three to six cotton or silk undershirts or bands for hot weather use.

3. Six outing flannel nightgowns with drawer strings.

4. Six white cotton slips.

5. Three flannel and three cotton or linen petticoats.

6. Three or more pairs of white silk or cotton hose.

7. Two or more dozen cotton flannel napkins, size 20 by 40 inches.

8. Four dozen bird's-eye cotton napkins, size 20 by 40 inches.

9. Two jackets, one cloak, one cap, one veil, mittens and two crib blankets.

Lastly, the prospective mother must not forget to buy a separate bed for her baby, for it is unhealthy as well as dangerous for a grown person to sleep with an infant.

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Reducing diets should never be undertaken by persons who are only ten or fifteen per cent above the standard weight for their age, height and sex. Furthermore, no quick "reduction" should be attempted except under the guidance of a physician.

The general principal to be followed in reducing are: Less total daily food intake which may be accomplished by cutting out small meals rather than three large ones; reduction of sugars and starchy foods; less liquid intake; plenty of leafy vegetables, exercise.

Play Corners For Children

BY CONSTANCE CAMERON

The most important business in the life of the young child is play, and he is going to play somewhere, somehow, whether you provide for that activity or not. In fairness to the adults in the house and in fairness to the child, it is imperative that he have a play room of his very own.

Boy, this may be as fine and as extravagant as one wishes, and most expectant mothers have a lot of fun preparing for it with their own hands months in advance. Certain articles, however are indispensable. The one recommended by Dr. Holt, of Columbia University, seems to fit the requirements perfectly.

Very young children prefer to play indoor next to mother. If the window ledge doesn't lend itself to this idea, the father can easily make a low bench with sturdy legs, upholster it, and secure it in front before a window.

Low open cupboards with large spaces for storing books and toys are good.

Indoor Sand Box

Every play space should be equipped with a good sized low table for quiet work such as cutting, pasting, sewing for dolls, etc.

Dr. Holt, the author suggests an indoor sand box which is a never failing source of delight to toddlers. It suggests making one from a good sized, strong packing box planed and sand-papered until it is very smooth, and then painted. The box must be cut low, of course. The insertion of casters under the legs is another good suggestion. Thus the box can easily be moved around. A large square of denim can be placed under the box. This can be quickly rolled up and taken out of doors to shake out spilled sand. Bran or pine shavings are sometimes used in these boxes in place of sand.

Low chairs, blocks, perhaps a horizontal bar for potential young athletes, picture books, paint smocks and old magazines to cut pictures from should prove many a happy day for the younger members of your family.

Respect Older Child's Views

(By Constance Cameron)

"I can't make a statement any more that doesn't provoke dispute or argue about," complained the mother of fifteen-year-old Celeste. The mother is shocked. Personally, I wouldn't give you a spent nickle for Celeste if she hadn't reached the perfectly normal stage of development.

Youth is an age of doubt. And with doubt and curiosity for truth has come every step of science. Not even the brown South always questions the "facts" that age accepts as final. Thank heaven for that, for we would stagnate utterly if a new crop of young minds didn't appear every so often and clear out the junk that we people have allowed to accumulate in the attics of their minds.

Then, that when your adolescent child argues, objects and worries, he is thinking. It would be indeed pitiful if he were to accept dictum or mine without a question.

Remember, too, before you feel so hurt and upset over the almost-grown child's arguments and problems, that the very younger your baby, that no longer is your home safe—that the time that he is daily exposed to numerous other influences, in school, at his play and that other people are perhaps treating him as an individual with individual ideas, characteristics and are recognizing something that you have failed to recognize, namely, that you have no longer a child who asks you to think for him, but a child who is doing independent thinking.

Lake Shore Features Wit h In Two Hours—Oil, Shares All Move Into

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—In a generally firm market gold shares pushed ahead on the Standard Mining Exchange today with Lake Shore the feature. Leaders in the silver and base metals groups also moved up while chemical Research was outstanding in the oils, gaining 7. to 1.50.

Close to 4400,000 worth of Lake Shore changed hands in the two hour session with the stock holding at its all-time high mark of $50. In Mclntyre-Trading was heavy also in Mclntyre and Teck Hughes, the former at 45.50, up 50 cents and Teck at 4.75 up 10 cents. Dome added 90 cents, selling at 37.25, Hollinger was up 25 cents to 19.75, Wright Hargreaves 30 cents to 6.15, and Bralorne unchanged at 12.75.

San Antonio featured the cheaper issues, advancing to 1.36 while Siscoe was up 3, Reno 1, and Central Patricia 2.

TORONTO STOCKS

generally rising prices. Oil, metal and distillery shares all got into higher ground, added to continued strength of the rise in the New York market.

Distillers climbed 4 points to 139 and Nickel picked up about 2½c, closing above 40c. Other materials led shares with Mclntyre, ¼ to ⅝, Brazilian closing ⅝ higher at 13½, C.P.R. ⅝ and Steel of Canada ½ to 15¾.

The whole food group improved with Weston common boasting a gain of 2 to 2.50. Loblaw B also did better. Action was also in the heavy industrial group, small gains appearing pressed metals, Steel of Canada and Standard Steel.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Sept. 22 (AP)—Security markets edged up quietly but steadily today in the first full day of trading in the new week. Although there was none of the feverish speculation that has characterized recent sessions, prices in most categories moved up to hold gains of several 1 to 2 points. Trading was rather listless throughout the session, dealings being pared extreme advances in many instances. Transfers approximated 1,000,000 shares.

ORACLE OF SHOW BUSINESS FOUND DEAD, HEMORRHAGE

(By Raymond Crowley)

New York, Sept. 22 (CP)— Sime Silverman, the oracle of show business, the enemy of the grammar, the man who never let any one pay a check, is dead.

Silverman founder and owner of theatrical weekly Variety, was found dead yesterday in his Los Angles hotel suite. A lung hemorrhage had killed him in his 62nd year.

Through his paper he talked to showfolk in their own argot and wowed them. When Wall Street's world was toppling in the crash of 1929, he chronicled it in this dead-line:

"Wail Street lays an egg."

Should the production "watch my dust" roll up a deficit of $1,000, Broadway would know and understand this announcement.

"Joe Umpty-Ump went for a grand on dust."

The big black pencil with which he edited know not verbs from nouns, and so the columns of Variety shows were constantly being "sayings" and "hearings" of the audiences often-times were "panicked." Times Square liked it somuch that it sometimes called itself Sime's Square.

First Nighter

No first night was complete without him, and he was a fixture at the livelier night clubs, where he was often check grabber. If any one tried to pay anything in his presence, he was insulted to tears. His private pension list of actors, who had fallen on evening day and hi, the skids was said to be lengthy.

Sime was born in Russia, who grew into a typical New Yorker. Born in Cleland, N.Y. he went through business school, and then devoted himself to the stage doors of vaudeville houses. He became a cub, gathering stage tidbits for a Cleveland paper.

He started Variety on a shoestring, and watched it grow to a paper that employs 250 people and often contains 100 pages.

He was a sentimentalist who suffered at sentiment directed toward himself. Panhandlers could wring his heart and empty his purse. But when he discovered one up a party to present a platinum watch to the "dearest friend" and to the "best damned editor in the world" he wasn't there. He had fled to Havana.

—Sadly missed by Wife and Family.

ROBLIN—In loving memory of a dear wife, Mrs. Ivy B. Roblin, who died September 21, 1933.

One lonely years has passed away
Since my great sorrow fell;
Still in my heart I mourn the loss
Of one I loved so well

This day brings back to memory
A loved one laid to rest,
And those who think of her today
Are those who loved her best.

As I loved here, so I miss her.
As my memory she is dear,
Loved, remembered, thought of always,
Bringing many a silent tear.

TROPICAL STORM IS HEADED ACROSS GULF

Heavy Rains and Wind Struck Vera Cruz State

Mexico, D.F., Sept. 23.—(AP)—A tropical storm which touched the Northern coast of Yucatan, causing one death and some property damage, was headed southwest today across the Gulf of Mexico toward Vera Cruz.

Heavy Rains and wind struck Vera Cruz State and rail traffic was interrupted at several places by floods. At Coatzacoalcos and many houses were destroyed.

THREATS SPUR K IDNAPPING TRIAL

Undaunted by the receipt of death threats by principals at the hearing, the federal government is driving straight ahead with the prosecution of 15 persons charged with the kidnapping of Charles F. Urschel (3), millionaire Oklahoma City oil operator, in Oklahoma City. The threats, supposedly sent by George (Machine Gun) Kelly (2), fugitive gangster also under indictment for the kidnapping, have been received by Urschel and District Attorney Herbert K. Hyde. (4). Special Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan (1), who is attending the trial in the interests of the government, similarly has been mentioned in one of the threat letters. The trial is being held under heavy guard in the precocious federal building shown (5).

MANUFACTURER HOWLED DOWN
Founder of Furniture Company Not Allowed To Speak
Hanover, Ont., Sept. 23.—(CP)—Adam Kindel, 93-year-old founder of the Knechiel Furniture Company of Hanover and believed to be Canada's oldest manufacturer, few years, that they have become was howled down at a meeting of local furniture company employees last night More than 400 attended the gathering, which threatened to develop into a riot as the crowd drowned out the aged man's voice as he attempted to speak on behalf of the manufacturers.

Fred Collins, Toronto organizer of the Amalgamated Furniture Workers' Union, with a party of fifteen from Stratford, attended the meeting. Collins said his work in Stratford has brought "tremendous results". More than 700 were on the rolls there, he said, as he denied his organization had "evil" tendencies.

Collins said he planned to organize in Walkerton, Owen Sound and other district centres.

KEEPING ONESELF FIT—This is a happy state of being which every one desires and regarding the attainment of which there is much advice published in print today. Some people worry so much over their health when really there is no cause for worry that they fail to feel as the saying goes "fit as a fiddle." Others there are who give no thought to the matter whatever and yet "keep" well in prime condition. It may be that these latter possess of a natural happy disposition, but at the same time, no doubt, the meals served to them are in the care of a good cook who sees to it that well balanced meals are served and they are getting the proper food to keep them "fit" rather than depending on their part, eating the proper food—practising moderation in all things regarding nutritious foods and fresh air and sleep and avoiding worry and fret. Don't "KEEPING ONE FIT" unless there is something really out of order in the human machine. And speaking of being ill, milk is a food which should be taken in liberal quantities every day in some form by everyone. Of course the children and young people require more than adults, but the adults should drink several glasses a day as beverages. In Belleville the milk, cream and buttermilk supplied by Reid's Dairy is noted for quality and purity—all of it being carefully safeguarded. This dairy is said to enjoy the largest patronage in the city. If you would like to try their milk phone 2240. Reid's model dairy is situated at 17 Parker Street and visitors are always welcome.

Canada Sends More Bacon and Cheese to United Kingdom

Canadian bacon increased its share of the United Kingdom market to 182,000 cwts. in 1932"according to a report just issued by the Canadian Marketing Board on Dairy Produce Supplies." Imports from Canada were more than three and a half times those of the previous year, while total Empire supplies were 10 per cent. greater.

Thirty million pounds' worth of bacon was the total amount of which the Empire had 3 per cent. Denmark was the chief source of supply, increasing its exports to the United Kingdom by 5 per cent. Further increases of bacon imports were recorded from Poland, Lithuania, Russia and the Baltic countries, although the European pig population had begun to be restocked on account of unremunerative returns, the year under review being that after the adoption by the United Kingdom Government of the principle of regulated supplies in the form of a quota control over "controlled goods and imports", a principle which has now become an important feature in the bacon trade.

More Canadian Cheese.

The increased production of cheese in Canada noticed in 1931 was continued in the following year, when there was a corresponding increase in the exports to the United Kingdom took 748,238 cwts., as against 710,225, but exports to the United States were considerably less than formerly.

Record Imports of Empire Butter.

An encouraging feature of the report is the increasing proportion of imports coming from Empire sources. This was especially striking as regards butter, the Empire supplying 52 per cent. of the total imports, Russia 19 per cent., Denmark less than a quarter of all the butter imported, was from New Zealand (making an increase of 11 per cent.) 19 per cent., of the butter came from Australia, Denmark, however, maintained her place as chief butter supplier to the United Kingdom with 31 per cent., the Argentine being ranked fourth. The advance of Empire butter would appear to have been made at the expense of foreign supplies, particularly from Russia, whose share dropped by 20 per cent., and also from the Baltic countries.

The world production of butter is thought to have fallen off as a consequence of the continued fall in prices. There was certainly less entering world trade, but of that amount the United Kingdom had an increasing share, estimated at three-quarters of the total. This together with the increased share these imports produced butter, provided 21.8 lbs. per head per person in the country as against 20.9 lbs. in 1931. The fall in prices was considerable, Australian and New Zealand butter sailed butters alone being 10 per cent. cheaper than last year.

Canadian Condensed Milk.

Canada also shared with Free State are Britain's chief Empire sources of supply for condensed milk. Both had increased their exports, Canada nearly trebled those of the preceding year, while the Free State doubled hers. The Netherlands remain the chief source of supply but her share of the market decreased by 22 per cent. in 1932.

Canada also sends considerable quantities of milk powder, but her exports in this commodity have decreased. The United Kingdom received increasingly large amounts from the Netherlands, which replaced Canada, Australia as the principal source of supply, and from Australia, whose share dropped by 20 per cent., and also from the Baltic countries.

"WATCH YOUR STEP" — No doubt you have been given this advice and it may have had reference to some undertaking or to the event of the experience of coming from one side of the street to the other—in either case the advice is good if you needed it or not. Especially so is the caution to "watch your step" when crossing a street — no matter how great a hurry you are in take time to "STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN." Better in unison because is wasting on the nervous system as a result of rushing. Then there is the danger that you may not arrange their time properly — may not get behind schedule because their time pieces are slow and then the rush is on with the attendant fear. In order to make up time chances are taken in motoring or walking that the destination had in view. All this leads to the thought that it is wise to "Watch Your Step" and also "Watch Your Watch." A watch which does and runs perfect time is very unsatisfactory. The fault, however, lies with the owner of the watch as its unreliability is not caused by neglect to have it cleaned and regulated at least annually. If you have a watch which is not behaving properly take it to A. E. Wonnacott at 292 Front Street, next door to Loblaw's, and he will put it in perfect working order at a reasonable charge. Mr. Wonnacott has excellent reputation as a watch repairman and engraver.

FORMER ACTRESS DIES

New York, — Mrs. Madge Carr Cook, 77, who made an international reputation as an actress' 30 years ago in the title role of the play, "Mrs. Wiggins of the Cabbage Patch," died yesterday of pneumonia at the Synnest, Long Island, home of her daughter, Mrs. August Belmont.

She retired from the stage in 1910 following the marriage of her daughter, Elinor Robson, also a well-known actress, to Mr. Belmont. Mrs. Cook was born in Worthen, England, and made her stage debut at the age of three as Pleance in "Macbeth".

CHINESE BLOUSES

Chinese embroidery, Chinese colors, Chinese silhouette and some times even Chinese character buttons make for a thoroughly Chinese effect in tunics which blousemakers are showing. Some of them are embroidered allover in the most lavish oriental motifs and colors. Tinsel thread shimmers with lacquer red, jade green, rich blue, and satin in the fashion choice so that the effect is not unlike Chinese tapestries. Necklines may be collarless, flat-buttoning or the stand-up Mandarin type. Fringe on sashes is another Chinese touch. Dolman sleeves and slits at the side give the loose-hanging impression.

MIGRATORY BIRDS
Open and Closed Seasons

The National Parks Service of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, has just issued new regulations regarding migratory birds for the current year.

A summary of the regulations as they apply to Ontario follows:

Open seasons.

Ducks, Geese, Brant, Rails, Coots and Wilson's or Jack-Snipe.

In that part of Ontario lying north and west of the French and Mattawa rivers and not including any portion of the Georgian Bay waters)—September 15 to December 15.

Elder Ducks.

North of the Quebec, Cochrane, Winnipeg line of the Canadian National Railways—September 1 to December 15.

Woodcock.

September 15 to November 30.

Closed seasons

There is a closed season throughout the year on Wood Ducks, Swans, Cranes, Curlew, Willets, Godwits, Upland Plover, Black-bellied and Golden Plover, Greater and Lesser Yellow-legs, Knots, Dowitchers, Pectorals, Sanderlings, Phalaropes, Stilts, Surf-birds, Turnstones and all the shore birds not included within the open season in the above schedule.

There is a closed season throughout the year for the following non-game birds:

Auks, Auklets, Bitterns, Pulmars, Cormorants, Grebes, Guillemots, Gulls, Herons, Jaegers, Loons, Murres, Petrels, Puffins, Shearwaters and Terns; and there is a closed season throughout the year on the following insectivorous birds: Bobolinks, Catbirds, Chickadees, Cuckoos, Flycatchers, Flickers, Grosbeaks, Hummingbirds, Kingbirds, Martins, Meadowlarks, Nighthawks or Bull-bats, Nuthatches, Orioles, Orchard Orioles, Phoebes, Purple Martins, Shrikes, Swallows, Swifts, Tanagers, Thrushes, Titmouse, Vireos, Warblers, Waxwings, Whip-poor-wills, Woodpeckers and Wrens, and all other perchingbirds not specifically mentioned chiefly on insects.

No person shall kill, hunt, capture, injure, take or molest any migratory game birds during the closed season, and no person shall sell or expose for sale, offer for sale, buy, trade or traffic in any migratory game bird at any time."

The taking of the nests or eggs of migratory game, migratory insectivorous and migratory non-game birds is prohibited.

The killing, hunting, capturing, taking or molesting of migratory insectivorous and migratory non-game birds, their nests or eggs is prohibited.

The possession of migratory game birds killed during the open season is allowed in Ontario until March 31 following the open season.

Bag Limits.

Ducks 15, Geese 15, Brant 15, Rails, Coots and Gallinules 25 in the aggregate, Wilson's or Jack-snipe 25, Woodcock 8, and not more than 15 Woodcock or 150 Ducks in one season.

Guns and Appliances.

The use of automatic (auto-loading), swivel, or machine guns, or battery, or any gun larger than number 10 gauge is prohibited, and the use of any aeroplane, power-boat, sail boat, wounded live birds as decoys, night light, and shooting from any horse-drawn or motor vehicle is forbidden.

The shooting of migratory game birds earlier than sunrise or later than sunset is prohibited.

The penalty for violation of the migratory bird laws is a fine of not more than three hundred dollars and not less than ten dollars, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or both fine and imprisonment.

Any enquiries received concerning this law will receive prompt attention if they are addressed to the office of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma took me downtown shopping this afternoon, and we was waiting for a trolley car and I said O, ma look, do you think that is a wicked car? Do you think she could cast a spell on you? I asked her.

Meaning a old bump back bogie lady in a car. Ma said no, little bits of eyes and no teeth holding out to buy candy and asking for money, and ma said, Dont lik silly, there is no such fact there who, they were only a figment of childish fancy and superstition. And furthermore there is comfortable asylums for old people like that so there's no need to be afraid. Ma was getting uncomfortable by begging from them, and they shouldn't be encouraged, she said.

Wich just then the old beggar lady came up to me and held out, and ma said, No I haven't any change.

No change, no change, you've full of change, you're holding with change, but you couldn't give a none to a starving dog, I know you, you little stinker, I'll tell you that you may be starving yourself some day and you'll be sorry when your hair and your lung parched and not a living hand to give you and every body reddy to posh you back in the gutter, she said, trying to show her teeth but not having any I chew.

Stop that, you mustn't say things like that, ma said, and the beggar lady said, I have my rites to just serves just like you rich folkes have your rites to keep all your power.

Dont be silly, here, here's something for you, ma said. Meaning a dime, and the beggar lady said, Thank you, lady, I was mistook in you, you're a sweet kind lady and may you have all the blessings of heaven and erth like you deserve.

Making ma look just as relieved as if she believed in witches, wich she properly does coz she dont know it.

LARGER AREA TO BE FARMED

Dryden, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) — A larger farming population will be moved to Northern Ontario within the next few years, Premier George S Henry predicted, when he visited the "Dryden area" one of the oldest and most successful farming communities in the north. Addressing a large public meeting here last night the Premier declared he was delighted with the progress, which had been made since his last visit several years ago.

Early today the Premier moved on to Ottawa before the last meeting of his tour of the northwestern part of the province will be held tonight.

Ontario stands in the forefront of the world in the attention it gives to education and to social legislation, Mr. Henry declared. The Ontario government, although Conservative in name, had been described by Rt. Hon. J. Ramsay MacDonald as the most socialistic than the late Labor government of the United Kingdom.

One of the next steps to be taken by the Province in the field of education, said the Premier, would be to provide a regular degree of technical training in agriculture for the rural youth of the province. As Minister of Education he hoped the time would not be far distant when every farm boy and girl would be able to obtain a practical education in agriculture from within reach of his farm home.

ON THIS DATE

By Fred Williams

MONTREAL'S FIRST BANDITS

On this date 250 years ago an incident took place at Montreal which proved that banditry is by no means a new thing in Canada. The story of Ville Marie, now Montreal, is told by Dr. Dollier de Casson, architect of the Montreal court house, who recalls that even in the present great city was little more than a group of forts, with lacquer red, jade green, rich blue, and satin in the fashion choice so that the effect is not unlike Chinese tapestries. Necklines may be collarless, flat-buttoning or the stand-up Mandarin type. Fringe on sashes is another Chinese touch. Dolman sleeves and slits at the side give the loose-hanging impression.

judgment shall have been obtained." After deliberation, the council ordered the provost to go to Montreal as requested.

At an investigation began on November 23, 1633, Louis Loyseau, locksmith, 66 years old, reported that Charpentier had been robbed between the chapel and the fort on the slope of the mountain. He died, destroyed when the present bridge (Jacques Cartier parish was created). He said that three men had "held him up" (term in newspaper language there is nothing to be under the said robbed him of 23 francs. Jean Aubuchon, 34 years old, testified that Rene Cuillerier had had between 20 and 25 francs taken from him, and the wife of a merchant told how three young men had come to her stall and demanding money and brandy. All three witnesses gave the names of the same three men. They were arrested and brought to the tribunal, where, with much ceremonial and many solemn promise of reformation, they confessed their crimes, and only excuse was they had taken the money to spend on liquor and upon their "lady friends" who insisted upon many dresses supplied with money from the ancestresses of the "good diggers" of the modern night clubs in such evil places as Montreal, New York and Chicago. But it turned out that all three were of good families; and to as is often the case, influence was brought to bear to save the families from disgrace and the criminals were allowed to go free on condition that they go far away to retrieve their reputations. Jim is not so many years ago certain English magistrates used to suspend sentence upon offenders on condition that they went to Canada; truly, there is very little that is absolutely novel in this old world.

CHAPTER 45

Elinor broke the silence. She said in a hesitating, uncertain tone, "Darrell—"

He turned toward her. "Yes?" he answered.

"Do you want—very much—to go on that exposition?"

"No, but I thought perhaps you'd rather have me out of the way. That was the only reason I consented it."

"I'd rather you didn't go," she said slowly.

"Oh, Elinor!" He had risen and stood with eager, pleading eyes fixed on her.

But she was not yet ready to tell the truth—that she loved him and wanted his happiness more than her own, that she wanted him near when their child was born.

"I think you ought to become better acquainted with your boy—with Gerald," she said, her voice hard again.

"You mean that I should be with you in the country?" he questioned quickly.

"Yes. Don't you think so?"

"If it won't bother you to have me there," he said slowly. For a moment he had hoped for so much more than that. He added, still in that weary tone, "I love you more deeply than you'll ever know, Elinor. The one thing I want is your happiness."

Then quickly he left the room.

Elinor cried decently, sitting huddled in the big chair which made her look so small. For the first time since her mother had told her about Barrett's ward, shame prompted some of those tears. She was small, she knew. Small! And she could not seem to help being so. If she stretched a hand toward Darrett she would see another turn away from her. If she dreamed of kissing him again she saw another woman's face between her arms.

She groped her way upstairs later and for a time in her room stood by the closed door, waiting for him. She wanted desperately to say to Barrett, "I love you. I love you! I want you to be happy. That's all that matters!"

But she could not do it.

Days passed in which Elinor stepped to equip the new house in the country. She began the task eagerly, glad to have something to occupy her time, something to think about. However, that first interest paled. She could not take heart in furnishing a home where Barrett and she were to meet as strangers. And she could not forget the misery in her heart while salesmen and women displayed draperies, furniture and rugs.

Bessie Thrope came to the rescue. Bessie was ecstatically at hand with helpful advice. For her the shopping expeditions were a source of delight that would have been quite complete if Bessie had not been worried about Elinor. She didn't like the girl's listlessness and disinterest. It wasn't natural. Only one could talk about and that made the situation worse.

—Small Gerald arrived to take his place in the household and, from the moment she first saw him, Elinor's heart warmed toward the child. He, at least, was in no way responsible for the state of affairs. All three of them were out in the home in the country. Hagins went with them and soon had the household routine running smoothly and efficiently. There were duties to occupy much of Elinor's time, hours she spent with Bessie and hours with Gerald. A small room on the ground floor had been fitted up as a study for Barrett and he did much of his work there, though he drove to the city frequently.

One evening after a long day of work at his desk he wandered to the porch at the side of the house where Gerald, with Elinor's help, was making a fish net from some bits of string. Just as with human relations, the string would tangle disastrously now and then.

"Section and I are going fishing tomorrow," Gerald told him, "and Aunt Elinor's helping me make this net." He was struggling over it and his speech showed with the struggle.

Barrett looked down at the work and workers, his heart touched. Elinor had done so much for the small boy. He was like a different child since they had come here and he adored Elinor.

From down the hill Sexton whistled a bob-white call —the boys' secret signal which half the neighborhood understood perfectly.

Gerald was up in an instant. "It's Section," he said eagerly. "May I go, Aunt Elinor? We have to dig bait!"

"Of course, dear," she answered. "Not be back in time to take yourself tidy for dinner."

He kissed her, made a pugnacious, boyish pass at Barrett and was off, whooping down the hillside.

"The strain settled that always appeared when Gerald left them alone together.

"May I sit down?" Barrett asked. "I want to talk to you about something."

"Do," she said, head bent above the net.

"I wondered if you wouldn't like to ask Bob Telfare out for one week-end—or perhaps longer," he suggested. It wasn't easy but he had done it! Thank God, he'd managed to get the words out.

"Bob's been a good friend," Elinor answered levelly. "I'd like to have him come but not unless you care to have him—"

"Your home is the place for your friends," Barrett said.

"I'll write home, too."

"Let's have him next Sunday if he'll come."

"If you like." she agreed. He could not help but warm to the fact that she seemed very glad to invite. "I'm still rotienly jealous," he thought remorsefully.

"Did you see Marcia when you were in town yesterday?" Elinor asked. She had hardly seen Barrett since his return. She and Bessie Thrope had had a moonlight picnic on the beach the night before last with Bob Telfare.

Elinor had learned, seeing the door of his study closed, that her whole day had been lived through with the thought of a moment's talk with him. The closed door had made her feel like a child for whom there is no motherly door tomorrow. She had gone to bed to lie there wakefully thinking. "He may be at work again before I get down in the morning—maybe I'm up early."

Barrett preferred to avoid encountering her unless it was necessary. Seeing her made everything so much more difficult. A hundred times he had been close to blurting out the truth of Marcia's letter. He wanted to tell her, to say, "What do I care about a promise?

SEPT 23 MR. AND MRS.— A BULL IN AN UNDIE SHOP

LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

After the arguments, Sitmbol's fate was left in the balance and Tarzan, freed from the tenacles of Tarzan, went on with his plans for entering the forbidden valley. In person, with a strong party, he went to palaver with the Galla Chieftain. Approaching Batando's village he passed through the camps of thousands of Galla warriors. Then the chief realized fully that he must agree to whatever terms the black Batando might propose.

Batando received the Arabs with friendly ceremony. Yes, he would escort them on the journey to the valley's entrance. But first, all the Sheik's Galla slaves must be released to Batando. In vain the Sheik protested. At last he was forced to accept the wily old chief's terms. Early next morning the Arabs started with a Galla escort toward the rugged mountains.

And, with them, Sitmbol trudged wearily along under guard of two powerful Arabs. Hopeless and utterly cowed, his thoughts constantly dwelt upon the horror of the murder he had done. Two days the Arabs wound their way higher and higher into the rugged mountains that rim the northern side of the valley of the Sepulcher. At last they reached a height from where Batando pointed to a small canyon opposite the camp.

"There," he said, "lies the trail into the valley—the way we leave you." When the sun rose, Tarzan saw that the Gallas had departed. But he did not know it was because of the terror they felt for the mysterious valley. Leaving the women and children with protecting guards, Esa Jad took his fighting men and presently the watchers left behind saw the last of their Sheik and his men as they disappeared through the rocky portal.

PREMIER OF ALBERTA SUED

that the plaintiffs have leave to have the statement of claim herein upon the defendant at the City of Ottawa or elsewhere within the Province of Ontario."

"It is further ordered that the defendant shall have 23 days from the date of service upon him of the statement of claim herein, within which to file a defence or demand of notice."

The statement of claim alleges that the Premier arranged to have the girl come from her home at Edmonton in 1930 and arranged for her to get a position with the provincial government. It charges that the Premier seduced the girl first, in the fall of 1930.

Premier Makes Denial.

Premier Brownlee, asked for a statement over long distance telephone to Ottawa, said:

"I have received by long distance the contents of the statement of claim. Some time ago I knew I would have to face a case of this kind, still it will enable me to contradict the many rumors that have been spread abroad through the province for several weeks. There is not a word of truth in the allegations against me and I will defend the action to the full and hope to show, before I am through, the real cause behind it."

The statement of claim alleges that:

"The plaintiff, Allan D. Macmillan, is an unmarried woman formerly residing at Edson, and Vivian Macmillan is an unmarried woman, born on the 10th day of March, 1916, and is the daughter of the said Allan D. Macmillan. The defendant is the Premier of the Province of Alberta and resides in Edmonton.

"In and prior to the month of May, 1930, the plaintiff, Vivian Macmillan was a school girl living with her parents at Edson, attending high school hours and on holidays rendering household services to the female plaintiff whose name is unknown to her she was.

"In or about the month of July, A.D. 1930, the defendant came to Edson on political business and at the male plaintiff was then mayor of Edson it was his duty to entertain the defendant. The female plaintiff was then a girl just past her 18th Birthday.

"The defendant proceeded to pay attentions to the said Allan Macmillan and persuaded her to leave her father's home and go to Edmonton, promising to procure for her a position with the Provincial Government and promising to look after her well-being and that the said defendant would use his influence to her while she was in Edmonton.

"The said Vivian Macmillan did leave her father's home and came to Edmonton, where she took a boarding house and got a position in the employ of the Government.

"Further proceeded in getting the said Vivian Macmillan to Edmonton the defendant used his government car at her disposal and frequently took her for pleasure drives, and took her to his house and introduced her to his family and told her she was to consider his house as her home."

Seduced, Alleged.

"The statement goes on to say that the defendant seduced the girl; that he "laughed at her old-country principles"; that he told her he was "lonely and unhappy".

"The defendant procured for her a position in the provincial government in an office close to his own. On Saturday afternoons and Sundays he required her to go to his office in the Parliament Buildings. In good weather he took her driving in various government cars. At different times the defendant insisted on the said Vivian Macmillan staying at the defendant's house during the months of April, May and June, 1932, the defendant insisted on the female plaintiff staying for seven weeks at the defendant's house. When the said Vivian Macmillan objected to doing his will the defendant threatened her with the loss of her position and with the provincial government.

"Solely by reason of the defendant's actions as he, the said Vivian Macmillan became physically and mentally ill and suffered a nervous breakdown and was ill during the months of June, July and August and September, 1932, and was forced to leave her position and return to her father's home.

"In or about June, 1932, a young man to whom the said Vivian Macmillan was becoming deeply attached, proposed marriage to her. Vivian Macmillan properly felt that she could not accept his proposal of marriage until she disclosed her relations with the defendant. She did so and the proposal of marriage was withdrawn and the said Vivian Macmillan married one of her friends and a home of her own.

"She stated many times to break off her relations with the defendant but he refused and would not allow her to do so. The female plaintiff suffered in health and has lost her natural enjoyment of life and her prospects for future happiness."

Riverside Tenders Resignation

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Premier John E. Brownlee of Alberta tendered his resignation as counsel for the province on the banking inquiry to Sir George Perley and to Hon. Lucien Cannon when he learned the court action was pending. It was learned here. They both urged him to remain as Commissioner.

Freight Charges on United States and British Coal

(MAIL AND EMPIRE)

For some time past, Mr. W. E. Schuster, of Belleville, and his associates there, have been engaged in a campaign to increase the sale of British anthracite in this province in return for the sale of more Eastern Ontario products in the old country. It seems that they are at present trying to obtain an adjustment of the freight rate on Welsh coal, which they contend is discriminated against in favor of United States anthracite.

Mr. Schuster recently wrote to the chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners at Ottawa about this difficulty, and Mr. Fullerton on September 15 replied: "In your letter you state that the railways carry American anthracite from Black Rock to Belleville at $1.85 per ton the same record. That is not correct, as the rate of $1.65 from Black Rock to Belleville is no longer in effect, having been increased to $2.30 per ton on March 15 last. See page 36 of Grand Trunk tariff C.R.C. No. E-71. This rate compares favorably with the rate from Montreal to Belleville."

The next day, September 16, Mr. H. B. Preston, the Canadian National Railways agent at Belleville, advised Mr. Schuster as follows: "The freight rate on American anthracite, Black Rock to Belleville, is $1.65 per ton, in force all year. British anthracite, $1.70 per ton, subject to an increase as at close of navigation to $2.10 per ton. C. W. A. Walsh, the C.P.R. agent, sent Mr. Schuster an identical message. The distance from Black Rock to Belleville is 213 miles; from Montreal to Belleville 220 miles.

In these several communications there seems to be a definite conflict of statements. The Chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners should be an authority on freight rates, and it is unthinkable that the board would favor American as against British coal at a time when everything possible is being done to increase reciprocal trade under the favorable terms of the Anglo-Canadian trade agreement signed at Ottawa last year.

Mr. W. E. Schuster, interviewed by the Ontario Intelligencer, said: "The whole tendency in connection with freight rates on domestic fuel is downward. A reduction of 40 cents per ton has recently been made by the Wilcox and Western Canada. Any substantial reduction on farm products and the movement of same in Western Canada was put into effect ten days ago. The rate on coarse grain from Belleville to Montreal has been reduced. Mr. C. P. Fullerton, chairman of the Dominion Railway Board, is apparently wrong in connection with the rate on anthracite. The same was made under Supplement E-71, dated March 15 last. The rate on coarse grain from Belleville to Montreal is 2½ cents per hundred. The traffic in question reaches Belleville on the Grand Trunk Railway. The reduction of same received by the C.P.R. and Canadian National is $1.85 per ton."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Schuster has a thorough knowledge of transportation problems, having been on the Canadian Railway Commission and Canadian Exploratory Force during the war in charge of transportation for two years, also in the offices of the Pennsylvania Railway in New York, secretary of International Rotary at Chicago upon the occasion of their first European convention upon the problem of the transportation of their delegates.

CAR DRIVEN INTO DITCH TO AVOID STRIKING BUGGY

Oshawa Residents Badly Cut By Flying Glass

Trenton, Sept. 23 Special)—E. M. Fourth of Oshawa, sustained injuries requiring several stitches to both hands when a motor car driven by Mr. Brown, also of Oshawa, took the ditch to avoid striking a buggy parted on No. 2 Highway, about two miles west of Trenton, this early last evening. Mr. Shorbet, principal of Dufferin School, drove the horse and buggy to the office of Dr. Parncombe.

The driver of the buggy drove away and no one learned his name. Provincial Constable McBrien of Brighton, investigated. The car was towed to Fitzgibbon Bros.' Garage for repairs.

No Trace of Robber

Nothing has developed concerning the mail robbery early yesterday morning when a lone robber, supposedly armed, made his escape after holding up the mail truck and bags as the mail wagon, driven by Howard Clarke, was en route to the post office from the Canadian National station after trail No. 19 from Montreal had left.

A post office inspector arrived yesterday afternoon and a check-up is being made as to the value of the stolen mail which will require a few days investigating. Police have combed the district with no results to date.

Breaks Arm

Robert Graham, six year old son of W. J. Graham, local car dealer, had the misfortune of breaking his right arm above the wrist, which he accidentally fell over his sled in front of the Graham home on Byron street. Dr. Johnson was called and set the broken bones set.

Donald Bailey, aged 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bailey fell from a chestnut tree Thursday evening and received a broken left arm and injuries to his back. Dr. Crowe attended the injured youth and it is said he was reporting resting comfortably.

Slow Entered

The store owned by Alex. Milne of Milne, near Hoards station, was entered some time Thursday night and clothing, tobacco and sugar, valued at $100 was taken. No arrests have been made as yet.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Orrill are spending a week in Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. Fred LaBelle is spending a few days in Rochester with friends.

W. A. Fraser, M.P., spent Thursday in Montreal on business.

Mr. George Allen has gone to New Liskeard to visit her parents.

Flight Lieut. Doveton and Mrs. Doveton have returning from a two weeks' motor trip to Quebec.

Congratulations are in order to Mr and Mrs. Don Fraser on the arrival of twin daughters.

SLANDER CHARGE PROVED

Edmonton, Sept. 22.—(CP)—A $5,000 damage suit against Premier John E. Brownlee of Alberta tendered his resignation as counsel for the province on the banking inquiry to Sir George Perley and to Hon. Lucien Cannon when he learned the court action was pending. It was learned here. They both urged him to remain as Commissioner.

McLEAN TELLS OF CRASH

would continue for most of Friday since only two witness he had as yet testified for the Globe Company and there is still much evidence to be presented.

Return to Work May 7

Roy F. McLean stated that he had returned to work in the Belleville bank, where he had been employed, since the accident, on May 7.

He took over his former job of teller, but after a few days found that he could not handle it because of his physical condition and since then he has been doing only odd jobs about the bank. He explained that he could not stand for long on his left leg which had been fractured, nor walk easily, as he could not count money because of the injury to his left arm.

He said he could not now sleep well. He woke several times during the night. He had lost 22 pounds in weight.

His left leg, which was fractured, still has a stiffness in it.

McLean said he had purchased the car in May, 1932, having paid $760 for it. The car was in first class condition, he said.

Witness and Mr. Walkey were required to be in the bank at Bellevile ten days each. They employed a 6 o'clock, but if they had been late there would have been sufficient time to take over their duties.

He said that he was driving along the highway at between 30 and 35 miles an hour. "Sometimes not that fast, sometimes faster," he said. He had his lights on as a precaution during the fog.

No Fog at Accident

"When the accident happened there was no fog" he said. The truck loomed out at us as though it had come out of the side of a barn.

As they drove along through the banks of fog Walkey and Mr. Walkey had their heads out opposite sides of the car so as to see ahead. The windshield wiper of the car was working but the water dripped all it, obscuring the view through the glass. He said he could see the truck 50 or 60 feet ahead of him. "It was coming directly for me on the same side of the road," witness stated. "I immediately jammed on my brakes."

The right shoe worn by the witness the day of the crash was exhibited in court. It showed the imprint of the tread of the brake lever upon the sole. The brakes were in good condition, having been tested in Belleville only a few days before the crash.

The tires and other apparatus on the car were in first class condition, he said.

He was in the hospital 13 weeks and three days. His hospital bill was $462.75, his bill for medical attendance was $150 and nurses' fees $150.

Dr. Russell's bill was $25.

He said he was in continual pain for six weeks. He could not sleep in hospital and had to have three or four hypodermics a night. He stated that his arm and leg were requiring weather barometers, aching before a storm and continuously during storms.

Formerly he had participated in many sports, but since the accident he has been able to participate in none. "I regained my health," he said, "and spent a day in the hospital afterward," he explained.

Cross-examined, Mr. McLean said his and the Canadian National's clock about 3.10 a.m. the morning of the crash. About Omemee they hit fog and he and Mr. Walkey both had their heads out of the window. He admitted that it was 47 miles from Oakwood to the scene of the accident, which he traversed in about 90 minutes. He said he could not recall changing his course from right to left after leaving the truck. He did not see the Globe truck change its course either.

Dr. C. F. Young stated that he had examined McLean's arm and in his opinion it would never be normal again. He said that McLean's pain must be very severe and continuous. He considered that McLean's ability as a banker had been impaired 50 per cent. by his injuries.

Cross examined, Dr. Young stated that McLean would probably suffer from neuritis.

Dr. Herbert Young said he considered that McLean was suffering from a nervous condition and his ability. His pain in arm and leg would probably continue indefinitely, and would require electrical treatment.

Called by Defence

Dr. Edwin Robertson, of Toronto, consulting surgeon for soldiers' pensions, head surgeon Sick Children's Hospital and Associate Professor of University of Toronto, was called by the defence. Dr. Robertson said that he had examined McLean and his nervous system was very stable. He found that McLean walked with slight limp. Dr. Robertson said that McLean's arm was perfectly normal except for his inability to rotate it below the elbow. Grip considered also 90. McLean's leg had recovered nicely, considering its injury, and there is another six months he will have full range of movement in his knee.

Dr. Robertson said that McLean's recovery depended wholly upon himself; that he should get out and move his arms and legs.

Frank Ford, of Toronto, actuarial engineer, stated that a salesman said the Globe paid $762 for the truck new in May, 1932. Cross examined he said he would not doubt that it was averaged 200 miles a day.

BELLE CELEBRATES FOURTH ANNIVERSARY WITH GOOD PROGRAMMES

Commencing today and continuing until Friday, The Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited are celebrating the fourth anniversary of the Belle under their direction, by pouring all their resources into an exceptional programs for the entertainment of their many patrons in Belleville and district.

The Belle Theatre was purchased from Mr. J. D. McCoy, well known Belleville theatre man, in September, 1929, and was formally opened with talkies on September 28th, with George J. Forhan as resident manager.

The attraction selected to reopen the theatre was "Broadway Melody," Talkies introduced during the annual anniversary since then have been "The Four Marx Brothers in 'Animal Crackers'"; Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in "Prosperity"; "The Four Marx Brothers in "Horse Feathers", and Maurice Chevalier in "Love Me Tonight."

This year Manager Forhan is celebrating the fourth anniversary in week with Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery in "Tugboat Annie," which comes to Belleville after two full record weeks at Loew's Theatre, Toronto. This excellent picture is scheduled today till Wednesday. On Thursday and Friday, Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall in "Claudia Harmes" will be the feature offering and comes to the Belle with the management's personal guarantee behind it.

On the occasion of this fourth anniversary the Famous Players Canadian Corporation wish to acknowledge with sincere appreciation the good will and loyal support of the patrons, managers in Belleville, the executive co-operation and service rendered by the theatre management and staff's in the different departments of the Ontario Intelligencer and every member of the loyal staff employed in the operation of the Belle Theatre.

"Tugboat Annie"

With Marie Dressler as Annie, rebellious female tugboat skipper of Puget Sound, and Wallace Beery as the irresponsible but irresistible Captain Terry, "Tugboat Annie," much heralded filmization of Norman Reilly Raine's Saturday Evening Post stories, opens today at the Belle Theatre. It is heralded as one of the first co-starring appearance of Miss Dressler and Mr. Beery since the memorable "Min and Bill."

Directed by Mervyn LeRoy, who piloted Edward G. Robinson and other hits, the new picture tells a story of adventurers-in-waters, of fronts with the two central figures cast in inimitable roles. Laughs and tears and some dramas alternate with each other in the narrative.

Miss Dressler plays the aggressive feminine tugboat captain whose husband, Terry, is a shiftless rascal.

Throughout various entertaining episodes they are seen in hilarious and sometimes serious situations. Then their son grows up and becomes the captain of a tugboat. To him from then on the wreck the "useless" father comes through with an amusing sacrifice.

Robert Young, last seen in "Hell Below," plays the son, with Jean Parker as O'Sullivan in the juvenile romantic lead, a prominent roles are also played by Willard Robertson, Tammany Young, Frankie Darro, Jack Pennick and Paul Hurst. Many of the picture was filmed with actual tugboat thrills at Seattle Harbor. The production is also notable for the film's spectacular scenes.

Among the story's highlights are the race for the wrecked ship, Beery's comical theft of the boat's engine and his denouement, the breaking up of the school's commencement exercises, the hilarious celebration aboard the liner when Miss Dressler arrives in the guise of a stirring wreck sequence, the run of the tug to the rescue through churning seas and the "man overboard" when he enters the firebox of a boiler to put its leaking tubes and thus saves the endangered ship of his son.

EVACUATE THEATRE WITHOUT A PANIC

Orchestra and Little Tots Continue While Fire Rages

Vancouver, Sept. 22.—(CP)—Resourcefulness of the orchestra and members of a group of little tots, who continued their recital while smoke drifted about the hall, is credited in averting a possible panic and injury to the 1,200 persons attending a concert at the Avenue Theatre here, evacuated the building quickly and safely last night.

Rags in a lean-to adjoining the theatre caught fire and smoke first entered through an open door by the time the fire department arrived.

As the people saw the sign of smoke made their exit the orchestra continued to play and the youthful dancers went on with their numbers. The fire was brought under control within a few minutes.

MISSIONARY DROWNS

The Rev. Mr. Mass, Sept. 23 (CP)—Rev. Dumas Maisnier, 28, Catholic missionary priest, was drowned in Lake Mistassini, Quebec, according to word received here today. Details were lacking.

WEATHER NOT JUST RIGHT

Mollisons Cannot Leave Wasaga For Iraq Before Monday

Toronto, Sept. 22.—(CP)—James and Amy Mollison, British long-distance flyers, rested here today and waited for clearing skies which will send them on an attempt to fly the 5,500 miles to Iraq in record time.

After an inspection of sands at Wasaga Beach on Georgian Bay, proposed starting point of a long jump to Bagdad, Iraq's capital, the the greatest adventure of their Mollisons returned here last night. Hope that they might get away Sunday was dashed by reports of unfavorable weather between Wasaga and the Atlantic coast. They have left a core for Wasaga in a hangar on Weston airport, just outside this city.

Wallace Beery, Marie Dressler and Robert Young in "Tugboat Annie" at the Belle now till Wednesday.

PROBABILITIES

Fresh southeast winds; occasional showers. Tuesday strong southerly winds; unsettled with occasional showers or local thunder.

SETTLEMENT OF STRATFORD STRIKE NEAR

Police Cordon on Hand When Furniture Workers Resume Labor Tuesday

Strike in Stratford Exists For Over Week

NEW TERMS

Large Commitments Now Placed Will be Withdrawn

Stratford, Ont., Sept. 25— (CP)— Str. Stratford furniture manufacturing plants, idle more than a week since employes laid down tools in protest for higher pay and improved working conditions, will open tomorrow, it was authoritatively learned today. It is expected a cordon of police will be on hand at each of the factories in case there is any show of violence.

Late today Major J. E. Hahn, President of Consolidated Industries, George Olmsted, of the Philco Company of Canada and C. E. Rogers of the Rogers Majestic Corporation met with the Joseph Sedgewick, Solicitor of the Attorney General's Department Toronto, and subsequently issued the following statement:

"Radio manufacturers of Canada have placed large commitments with furniture manufacturers in Stratford representing several hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of business. They are about to make further commitments running into an equivalent amount and it is regretted that unless there is a settlement by Wednesday they will be forced to move all goods in process to other centres. New requirements therefore will be placed elsewhere and if necessary brought in from the United States."

The manufacturers were in session early today, drawing up a statement and proposition to the men, urging them to return to work Tuesday.

It is understood the militia from London will possibly be called and will be here Wednesday morning. When the plants resume operations for those employees who will accept the proposition being made today. Details of the proposition were not immediately available.

FORMER PRESIDENT ILL

Lyons, France, Sept. 25—(CP)— Former Premier Edouard Herriot was ill at his home today and his physicians have advised him to remain in bed one week at least. M. Herriot who is 61 returned recently from a trip to Moscow. His temperature yesterday mounted to over 103 degrees.

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Salt Lake City, Sept. 25 (CP)— While his watchman slept in an adjoining room, C. E. Taylor, grocer, was bound with wire by three men and robbed of $33.00. After the robbers had escaped Taylor managed to arouse Tony Drapolenes, the watchman, who was still slumbering.

Byron, Calif., Sept. 25 (CP) — The "kitties" which Charlie Hebbard trained to perform tricks at race certainly ran, but it was a collieration rather than a race.

At a tryout which the new apartment had gathered, Tom Smith, just down from the hills, opened a sack and depositing a wild cat among those racing kitties. All bets were off.

New York, Sept. 25 (CP)— Strange noises emitting by 16 year old Matthew Schwartz as he sat on a stoop in the middle of a Bronx pond prompted citizens to send a fire boat.

Fireman came and rescued Matthew.

"Aw," he said, "I wasn't calling for help. I was singing."

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 25.— The hit-and-run driver has invaded the waterways. Police today hunted the pilot of a motorboat that struck Joe Wilson, 14, as he swam in the Wabash River. Wilson with severe injuries got ashore.

Fuson City, Okla., Sept. 25— Isaac Gilbert, 17 year old junior high school boy, is losing weight.

He's down to 276 pounds.

A year ago he weighed 487 lbs. But he's been dieting since then.

Isaac's father weighs only 146 and his mother 112.

Dr. William Bumger is the presiding judge of the criminal senate of the German supreme court, at Leipzig, during the trial of Martin Van der Lubbe, Dutch ex-Communist, and Ernst Torgler, German Communist leader, and three Bulgarians on charges of high treason resulting from the burning of the Reichstag building in Berlin.

IMPACT HURLS MAN TO DEATH

Forced Through Windshield in Head-on Collision

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP) — Gordon Becker, 23, of Dotroit, was dead here today from injuries suffered when the car he was driving met in a head-on collision with a second machine operated by Mrs. Ann Cooper of Brantford, late last night.

The collision occurred on the Dundas Highway near here.

At the time of the collision Becker was driving west several miles beyond Peter's Corners. The Cooper car was travelling in the opposite direction and as they passed the front wheels of the vehicles touched.

The impact of the collision hurled Becker through the windshield to his death, and two passengers, Raymund Becker and Richard J. Cunningham, were thrown up through the roof. They escaped with bruises and lacerations.

Mrs. Cooper was uninjured although her automobile was badly damaged.

"THE BEAR" CLEARS FOR THE ANTARCTIC

One of Two Ships to Be Used in Expedition

Boston, Sept. 25 — (AP)— —The Bear, first of the two-ships, which will carry Rear Admiral E. Byrd's second Antarctic expedition to the south seas, cleared port today amid the shouted farewells of wellwishers. Admiral Byrd himself, was aboard and accompanied the old whaler as far as the outer harbor.

Smouldering Grudge Against Wealthy Easterners is Blamed for Shooting

Waynesville, N.C., Sept. 25 (CP)— A mountain man's smouldering grudge against the wealthy easterners was blamed by officers today for the slaying of Thomas Price, 65 year old real estate agent of New York.

Riding horseback along a trail on his 1300 acre mountain estate, with two mountaineers yesterday afternoon, the Secretary of the Union Pacific railroad was halted by several men. In the burst of gunfire that followed Price was shot to death and his friends were wounded.

Shortly afterward Dewey Potter, 30 year old Haywood County man, surrendered to officers and confessed, they said, that he shot Price. His brother, Clarence, 35, and Eric Bedford, 22, came into custody with him and were also jailed.

Last Saturday Potter, who lived on an abandoned mining property next to the Price estate as caretaker, was fined $5 in magistrate's court here for trespassing. New York Yerger's estate without permission. Officers said this was the only money they could assign for the shooting.

The New Yorker was well known in this section, where he has visited for more than 30 years. He had assisted many mountain youths in securing an education, maintained a circulating library for his neighbors and helped support schools and churches. The value of medical supplies was kept by him for use among the poor.

LUMBER MILL AT WINDSOR IS DESTROYED

Boiler Stack Struck by Lightning Charge Running to Roof

$40,000 LOSS

Assistant Fire Chief Cut About Mouth From Twisting No ale

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 25 (CP)— Fire, caused by lightning, early today destroyed the mill of the McLean Lumber Company here, doing damage estimated in excess of $40,000.

Prompt response by the fire department prevented the flames from spreading to adjacent yards of cured lumber and neighboring frame buildings.

Residents of the section of the city where the mill is located were aroused by a deafening clap of thunder. Realizing the lightning must have struck something they went out and saw the first tongues of flame shoot from the mill. The fire department was notified immediately and within a few minutes water was being poured into the blazing building from three hose lines.

Assistant Fire Chief Gordon was injured slightly during the course of the five-hour battle against the flames, when he was struck in the face by the heavy nozzle of one of the hose lines. The line had been twisting from the heavy pressure and started to wrench itself from the hands of the men when the assistant chief seized the spout. He was cut about the mouth.

It is thought the lightning bolt struck the tall boiler stack, part of the charge running down guy wires attached to the roof. Loss was partially covered by insurance.

Part of the razed building was of historic interest since half a century ago, before it was converted into a lumber mill, it was a school for Negro children. It was taken over by the mill in 1894.

CHARGED WITH MURDER REMANDED TILL OCT. 3

Name Was Also Recorded Among The "Drunk List"

Toronto, Sept. 25—(CP)—Hilding Bender, charged with the murder of Nels Anderson, 67, was remanded to Oct. 3 when he appeared in police court today on a drunk charge. Oscar Fredericson, held as a material witness in the same case was remanded to the same date under bail of $1,000.

Bender's name was on the drunk list, but further down a charge of murder was recorded against him, police, while the search for the slayer of Anderson was in progress. Bender was locked up in police cells.

MACHINE GUN KELLY SOUGHT

Wanted For Killing of Five in Holdup at Kansas City

Chicago, Sept. 25 (CP)—The wide hunt for the machine gunners who recently robbed four Chicago Federal Reserve Bank employees of first class mail bags, and slew a policeman took on new impetus today following the arrest of Gus Winkler, a "public enemy" and the announcement that George (Machine Gun) Kelly was also being sought.

Kelly is also wanted for participating in the killing of five men at the Union Station in Kansas City June 17, when gunmen made an unsuccessful attempt to liberate Frank Nash, convict.

Winkler, who received widespread notoriety last year when he turned back some $700,000 of loot, of secret ties taken by robbers who held up the Lincoln, Neb., National Bank and Trust Company was seized, with his wife, in their fashionable Lake Shore Drive apartment last night, and after a brief questioning was seized up for further inquiry.

The arrest of Winkler resulted from the joining, police said, of an automobile used by the mail robber gillers to a garage of Joseph Bergl, described by the investigators as one of Winkler's old time business associates. Through whom the police said they had been able to identify the owner of the automobile as Machine Gun Kelly, the southern desperado.

STRIKE VOTE IS FEARED

Tabulation of Vote of Running Trades Now Progressing

Montreal, Sept. 25—(CP)— A strike in the railway running trade is being freely predicted among union men today as their chairmen began tabulating the result of a strike vote ballot. Of the 30,000 members throughout Canada would accept a further 16 percent cut in their wage rates or walk out.

Several days will be taken in tabulating the vote, and a date will then be decided upon if the men will be officially placed before the vice-presidents of the five running trades companies. Prospects today were that should the vote be favorable to a strike the vice-presidents would confer with railway officials before deciding on a strike date.

One 10 percent wage cut has already been imposed by the employers and is still a matter of dispute. The present vote is in connection with a proposal for a second similar cut.

In the meantime the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks were preparing their case to be presented to a board of conciliation which meets here tomorrow.

Actual balloting in the vote was completed about 10 days ago.

Latest on Rink Crisis

In regard to the local artificial ice rink situation which has been discussed in these columns during the past few days, the whole question came to an issue today in a telegram received by Mr. S. R. Burrows, one of the Arena rink directors, from the Linde Canadian Refrigeration Co., Limited. The telegram is dated Montreal, September 25, and was filed at 8.52 a.m., appearing Mr. Burrows that a definite offer has been received by the firm from St. John for the Belleville ice machine plant, and the same will be accepted and the plant removed unless action to prevent same is taken in the next few hours. Here is the telegram:

Montreal, Que., Sept. 25—8.53 a.m.

S. R. BURROWS—Care Mutual Life Assurance Company—Belleville —Re your letter—as proven in the past, we do not want to take out the Belleville rink plant if at all possible, but we have received today following definite offer from St. John:

CALLED BY LORD MAYOR TO DISCUSS OXFORD MOVEMENT

Bishop of Durham Offers Criticism Through Press

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 26 (C.P. Cable)— The Lord Mayor has invited the whole clergy to Mansion House tomorrow to meet the 500 followers of Frank Buchman, founder of the so-called Oxford Movement, who are opening an intensive campaign for the Metropolitan district.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London have already attended a private meeting held by the ministers, but the Bishop of Durham, Dr. H. H. Henson, whose writings are probably more widely known than those of any churchman except Dean Inge, has delivered a severe criticism of the new movement throughout the press.

Referring to what he called "spiritual exhibitions" the Bishop asserts the movement has merely added one more illustration of the religious enthusiasm which has been intermittent throughout Christianity.

The movement generally has so far aroused no marked interest in England, thought D. Buchman has carried his teachings to North America and many other parts. Yet the ministers' invitation appear to show Mayor's invitation appear to show leaders of religious thought in London are disposed to receive Dr. Buchmanites tolerantly and in the meantime to suspend judgment.

DENIES REFORT

Wellington, New Zealand, Sept. 25—(CP Cable)—Premier Minister J. C. Coates today denied a recent report he would go to London as temporary resident minister during negotiations for a new £5,000,000 conversion loan for New Zealand.

"All arrangements in that direction have been made and my job is here," said Mr. Coates.

Turner flew out-of the west at a terrific speed, made a climbing bank before landing and brought the wheels of his plane down with a speed flight.

PEIPING SOON ATTACKED BY REBEL ARMY

Irregular Force Now Within 20 Miles of Capital

SEEK STRENGTH

Hordes of Outlaws Pillage Farms And Terrorize Farmers

Peiping, Sept. 25. — (AP) — The irregular army of General Fang Chen-Wu was reported tonight to be within 20 miles of Peiping and it was expected the ancient capital would soon be attacked.

General Fang is heading a force of bandits and former leaderless soldiers variously estimated at 5,000 to 50,000 men. He has announced that his purpose is to free North China of the tyranny of the Nanking Government, and has declared that within a few days he will be at the gates of Peiping.

One group of his force is reported to have started toward Tientsin, ostensibly to capture that port city on the outer edge of the Nanking sphere.

Peiping military authorities expressed confidence they would soon be able to repel General Fang both here and at Tientsin. But they were afraid that his horde of irregulars might take the country side.

Japanese aviators were busy today flying over the supposed demilitarized section of North China, reputed to learn the strength of the rebels and their positions.

Meanwhile Japanese authorities were pleading with the Japanese for permission to dispatch a punitive expedition against the rebels. But Japan, despite the claims that China was entitled to sovereignty over its own territory, insisted that the Chinese army must dispose of General Fang.

Not Supporting Renegades

The Japanese indignantly denied that they were supporting the renegades, although there were persistent Chinese reports to the contrary.

Japanese spokesmen asserted that the Japanese had disarmed the Chinese troops at Miyun, midway between Peiping and the great wall. They declared this act was inexplicable, as the police had been sent to Miyun in accordance with the Tangku Armistice of last May.

The Japanese are reported to have replied to the uncertainty of the situation required that the police set up their rifles which would be returned when things are normal again.

Latest reports from various parts of the demilitarized zone indicated that everything still was disorder and banditry. Despatches declared that hordes of rebels were pillaging farms and terrorizing the helpless farmers.

Tientsin, well informed General Fang, a military leader who has been fighting for years, declared that unless he evacuates the North China zone by Tuesday midnight, they will drive him out.

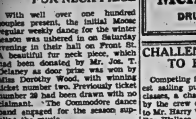
CHALLENGE LIKELY TO BE ACCEPTED



Competing for honors of the fastest sailing punt of the season, a challenge is being issued by the crew of Keller's "Scrapper" to Mr. Harry Wrakins, skipper of Tom Wallace, who has been successful to date in handling all challengers in matched races. Both boats have been consistent winners in the various classes during the summer races this season and keen interest has been aroused over the challenge by the Scrapper for the race, which is expected to be held in the local harbor on Wednesday afternoon next.

CHECKING YARDAGE THROUGH DREDGING

A government engineer who has been stationed in the city during the present summer while the work of dredging out the harbor was being carried on, was taking further levels of the harbor bottom today in order to arrive at the approximate yardage, which had been moving from the bottom. The work of deepening the turning basin in the lower end of the harbor and the channels to the government dock and Schuster's dock has now been completed.

APPLES SHIPPED TO BRITISH ISLES

Men and trucks were busy on the government dock today loading the largest cargo of the season on the steamer Glenn Allan for the weekly run to Montreal. Over two thousand cheese boxes graced the deck of the boat to care for the large shipment, while the remainder of space in the hold and deck was filled with another large shipment of apples, destined for the British Isles.

CLEAN COMEDY and Well Worth $1,000,000
. . . if she said "YES!"
Would YOU Marry a Man You Didn't Love for a Million Dollars?

With a fine artificial ice rink, which should be open and in operation by October first, continuing until late spring, is it possible that Belleville should be allowed to slip back to village status dependent upon the weather, as the creeks and ponds for that grand Canadian exercise, skating?
Really but Belleville the Bay Bridge, which became a private monopoly Belleville went up and bought the bridge back, but the quality cost a lot of money needlessly.
Part of the population have done their share in providing the artificial ice rink, a few citizens have said more than their share, and stand to pay still more if all the citizens do not take a helpful interest in this matter.
The rink is a civic asset, and is needed for recreation and entertainment for the young folks of Belleville, with a little effort the young hearts who never lose their youthfulness, will get going and have the rink for all of the citizens.

TWO INJURED IN COLLISION

Miss M. Bray of City And G. Thompson, Deseronto Taken to Hospital

Gerald Thompson, Deseronto and Miss Marjorie Bray, 186 Pinnacle Ave., Belleville, were both rushed to the Belleville General Hospital following an automobile accident, which occurred at the corner of Dundas and Ann Bridge streets about 11 p.m. Saturday night, when the car driven by Roy Hennessey of Deseronto, in which Thompson was riding, failed to stop at the designated stop street coming from Ann onto Bridge Street, and collided with the car driven by Miss Bray. Miss Bray was driving a car owned by Morley Smith of this city and was unaccompanied. Constables Evans and Arnold investigated the accident and rushed the two injured persons to the hospital in the city ambulance, where they were afforded medical attention.

Thompson was bleeding profusely about the head and face and was in a semi-unconscious condition, when the police ambulance arrived. Miss Bray sustained a badly injured arm, which was cut at the wrist, from flying glass. Both cars were considerably damaged. The Hennessey car was owned by Jas. Whitney of Deseronto, while Hennessey, it is alleged failed to produce a driver's license when asked by the officers.

Happened at Intersection

The accident is alleged to have happened when Hennessey, who was proceeding southward on Ann Street failed to stop at the Bridge St. intersection, whereas Miss Bray was proceeding east on Bridge Street and before she could avoid the car, the south bound vehicle it had crashed into the side of the latter. The Bray driven car was knocked across the boulevard and came to rest against a large maple tree inside the sidewalk. The Hennessey car turned half right to the east and running up on the boulevard struck a tree. The force of the impact was so great, that it caused the battery of the Bray car to fall out of the automobile. It was found some 15 feet from where the front of the same car was. The window in the Hennessey driven car was broken and considerable damage done to the wreckage onto the roadway, where it sustained severe injuries.

Upon being questioned by the police, Hennessey admitted that in failing of stopping at the corner. Upon receiving information that both boys were in the morning it was learned, that Thompson was well on the way to recovery, while Miss Bray was suffering from the shock. Constable Evans investigated the accident and took measurements.

RESULTS OF PLAYDOWNS IN O.B.A.A.

(By The Canadian Press)

Of the three Toronto Minor League baseball teams that went seasons ago for the titles over the week, two of them, St. Cyprian's juniors and Arlington intermediates, won the coveted.

St. Cyprians visited Brantford and defeated the Alerts 3-0, in a 13-inning fixture, while Arlington journeyed to Hamilton and whitewashed the Masons by another 3-0 count.

The third Toronto team, Lansdowne juveniles, went to Niagara Falls, consult at Niagara Falls, the Cataract Express nine scoring an early 5-0 advantage over the visitors and tying the final round. The decisive game will be played at Hamilton next Saturday.

Southern district series St. Thomas Tom Cats, Intercounty champions, chalked up their eighth straight victory when they defeated Kingston Ponies, Central Ontario titlists, in the first game of the finals at St. Thomas. A second game will be played on the Kingston diamond Wednesday.

Dundas was eliminated in the Intermediate series when they absorbed a 7-4 lacing from Goods and lose the thing and deciding game of their four round series.

Southampton juniors Letty Goldsmith allowed Hagersville only three hits in the first intercounty fixture but was forced to accept a 2-0 defeat. Two of the three blows were triples and resulted in runs. It was the first game of the series.

BRIDGE STREET YOUNG PEOPLE MEET IN CHURCH

Plan Activities of Society During the Season

A rousing rally of the young people of Bridge Street Church was held last evening in the Sunday School parlor of that church following the evening service. It took the form of an organization meeting and over 70 young people availed themselves of gathering and planning activities for the young. A unique feature of the first meeting was the use of "Seth Parker" song sheets, which Rev. Wesley Gallagher used in acting as pianist and song leader. Rev. Mr. Semple addressed the gathering briefly on plans for the future activities of young people's work of the church.

STEERING MECHANISM FAILS

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 25 (CP)—Gordon Becker, 23, Detroit, was fatally injured near here today when the steering mechanism of his car failed and the machine crashed into a ditch. Metal on the pavement indicated the car skidded broadside along the dry surface for more than 50 feet before leaving the road. He died a few minutes after the crash.

LOOKING FORWARD

A City with Vision

(CONTRIBUTED)

It is said that "a nation without vision will surely die." A city without vision cannot hope to achieve much progress.

Magistrate Mikel is not only looking backward in compiling a history of Belleville from the days when Samuel de Champlain, the great French explorer, discovered the Bay of Quinte and the river Moira but he is also looking forward to the time when Belleville will be one of the great cities of Canada.

In another part of this issue appears a drawing illustrating three different alternative proposals for the growth and development, of Belleville into a great city which have been put forward by Magistrate Mikel. When Ald. Ellis was Mayor of the City he suggested improvements for a bigger, better, Belleville and since then there has been a steady growth in that direction shown on the drawing as "A" running westerly along the Bay of Quinte between Belleville and Trenton. It is probably one of the most beautiful sections in the country.

Possibilities of the Bay for travel were recognized by Samuel de Champlain as early as 1615. The early settlers made use of the Bay as a safe and convenient route to the west passing over the Carrying Place. Mayor-General the Hon. Sir Carmichael-Smith, Baronet, the eminent English expert, in his report prepared by him at the Bay of Quinte, states that "There cannot be a finer basin in the world than the Bay of Quinte." This report was submitted to a Committee of the House of Commons of Canada.

If the people of this vicinity become fully aware of the great opportunities that lie before them they will, no doubt, enthusiastically co-operate to take full advantage of these opportunities which are available for this city.

The improvement of the east bank of the river, the clearing out of the river and upper harbour, the beautifying of Zwick's Island, and the deepening of the dredging from the Bay on the north shore, east of the Government dock, and the construction by the Government of a dock running easterly from the present Government Dock to accommodate ocean vessels loading coal or other cargoes from Great Britain to the Belleville District, and returning with cheese, meats, apples, fish, poultry, and other commodities afford opportunities for absorbing unemployed labour and improving the facilities of the city.

If we have got to spend thousands of dollars every year to maintain unemployed labour, why not spend that money to maintain employed labour, especially when the Governments are prepared to assist?

The proposed Centennial Celebration next year will focus attention upon Belleville's advantages and make a step forward in the progress towards building a great city.

Thanks for Bounteous Harvest Given at Holloway St. Church

Church Appropriately Decorated For Occasion

"There never has been a universal famine in the history of this world. God has not failed us, but we have lost our way and we have sinned," was the keynote struck by the Rev. H. B. Neal during his evening sermon at Holloway Street United Church last evening in connection with their annual Thanksgiving Festival Service. The church was appropriately decorated with beautiful fruits, flowers, vegetables and other products of the soil that added a tinge of autumn and harvest time to the entire service.
